Gold Devaluation Bill Attacked From 3 Sides; Glass Argues Illegality

Right of Price Fixing Held to Rest Solely With Judiciary.

Passage in House Today Foreseen

Chase Economist, Boston Reserve Governor Lead Assault.

By Franklin Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt's gold revaluation bill yesterday came under sharp attack in three quarters as the House prepared to start debate on the measure at 11 a. m. today and in all probability adopt it before adjourning for the week-end.

In the Senate the opinion of Attorney General Homes S. Cummings upholding the Constitutionality of the measure was assailed by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, who pointed out two Supreme Court decisions ruling that the fixing of the value of property seized by the Government was a judicial function. Mr. Cummings omitted reference to either decision.

Testifying at the first open session of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on this bill, Roy A. Young, governor of the Boston Reserve Bank, expressed the fear the Administration bill threatened the life of the Federal Reserve System, pointing out it gave the Secretary of the Treasury authority to vitiate whatever the system might undertake.

Inflation Feared.

Benjamin M. Anderson, jr., Chase National Bank economist, at the same hearing, contended that the bill contained the germs of inflationary forces which might easily get out of hand and bring the Nation to disaster greater than ever before experienced. He said the provision for the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund made this possible.

Mr. Anderson's argument was that by creating this fund out of the enhanced value attached to gold through dollar devaluation, the sum as fast as it is used by the Secretary of the Treasury would "feed the already swollen excess reserves" in the reserve banks, thus becoming a basis for speculative activity.

Robert L. Owen, former chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, was the third witness before the committee. He applauded the revaluation bill, contending that it was essential for the Treasury to assume a rigid control over the Nation's currency in order to keep its purchasing power stabilized.

Keen rivals since 1913, when they piloted the Federal Reserve act through Congress, Mr. Owen and Senator Glass clashed, the latter contending the former chairman had not always thought the way he does now. The Virginian seemed to have the better part of this argument, but the score was evened when, in reply to a remark of Senator Glass that the bill conferred "omnipotence on the Secretary of

Spain May Free 4 Americans

Sentenced for Assault on Guard; Pardons Are Hoped.

Madrid, Jan. 19 (AP).—Minister of State Pita Romero assured American Ambassador Claude G. Bowers tonight that the Spanish Government would "take immediate steps" on behalf of four Americans whom the supreme court today sentenced to six months and a day imprisonment for assaulting a civil guard.

From authoritative sources it was learned also that the defendants, one of them a woman, would not be forced to return to jail while the government considered their case.

Those sentenced are Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood, of West Springfield, Mass.; Roger F. Mead, of New York, and Edmund A. Blodgett, of Stamford, Conn.

Rutherford Fullerton, of Columbus, Ohio, was acquitted.

They were arrested last fall following an altercation in a Palma, Mallorca, hotel, with a civil guard—a member of the Spanish defense forces. Under Spanish law the matter was therefore serious and subject to a courtmartial.

The military tribunal, however, acquitted them after they were held in jail six weeks. A military auditor later reversed the verdict and placed the case in the jurisdiction of the supreme court.

The court today did not recommend a pardon, but the government can be asked to take such a course, and it was indicated that cabinet ministers would ask one.

Newsman Gets License.

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Frank J. Carmody, 45, a newspaperman, who gave his address as the Press Club, San Francisco, Calif., and May S. Preuss, 39, of New York City, obtained a marriage license today.

Cab Driver Is Seized In Bremer Kidnaping

Note in Taxi Thought to Be Instructions From Captors.

St. Paul, Jan. 19 (AP).—Contact between the family and kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer, wealthy St. Paul banker held for $200,000 ransom, tonight was believed to have been attempted by the abductors when police took into custody an unidentified taxicab driver.

A mysterious note, presumably containing the kidnapers' instructions for payment of the ransom money, which the Bremer family has assembled in full, was reported found in the cab by the driver.

Its contents and when and how it was placed in the cab were not immediately disclosed as authorities questioned him at headquarters.

Anxiety for Bremer grew today as bloodstains were found on the seat of his abandoned car.

They indicated, authorities said, that Bremer struggled desperately with his captors.

The condition of the banker was of great concern to his family which recalled that his signature on the ransom note was but a shaky scrawl.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation meanwhile marshalled its forces here, heavily armed, determined to hunt down the abductors.

The Federal inquiry was masked in secrecy.

At the same time, State officials of the American Legion shaped plans to throw their organization behind the drive to free Bremer.

Drive Starts For Full Pay Up to $1,800

Immediate Action Is Plan, With All Brackets to Be Restored July 1.

A drive to restore immediately to statutory levels all Government salaries of $1,800 or less has been launched in the Senate with strong backing.

The program of the pay cut opponents calls for a partial restoration of the 15 per cent cut in salaries above $1,800 up to $5,000 at once.

All Government salaries would be restored to normal, beginning with the next fiscal year, under the program.

The restorationists went forward with the plans, despite announcement at the White House that the President does not favor any change in his pay and economy program, outlined to Congress in his budget message, and incorporated by that body in the independent offices appropriation bill, first of the supply measures, and now under consideration by a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia.

Glass Postpones Hearing.

Senator Glass postponed a meeting the committee was to have held yesterday. The committee wanted to hear Gen. Hines on matters relating to veterans' payments, it was said in explanation. The real reason, however, was said to be a desire to give Democratic leaders more time in which to work out some sort of a compromise, which would assure adoption of as much of the Administration's economy program as possible.

A majority of the subcommittee is said to be in favor of throwing aside the President's recommendation for restoration of 5 per cent beginning July 1, restoring some part of the pay cut immediately and the full 15 per cent next year.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, is said to have discovered, through a partial poll of the Senate, the restorationists had sufficient votes to upset the President's 5 per cent recommendation. It was that discovery which

United States Recognition Of Cuba Near

Hull and Caffery Confer, With Early Action in Prospect.

Key West, Fla., Jan. 19 (AP).—Early recognition by the United States of the new government in strife-torn Cuba appeared a bright prospect tonight, following a conference here between Secretary Hull and Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal representative to the island republic.

The two statesmen, who arrived simultaneously—Hull from Panama and Caffery from Cuba—talked at length on conditions in the island and afterward expressed optimism over early recognition. The conference took place aboard the cruiser Richmond.

Secretary Hull, when he came ashore with Caffery, said, "The whole situation looks very good."

He said he was "very pleased" with recommendations submitted by Caffery, and said he would present them to President Roosevelt immediately on arriving in Washington.

Sees Improvement.

Caffery, who succeeded Ambassador Sumner Welles to the Havana post, joined with Secretary Hull in saying that conditions in Cuba since Carlos Mendieta took over the reins of government have greatly improved.

"Of course, I can not say anything about what was discussed," Caffery said, "but I am very much pleased with the way things are now in Cuba. The people appear satisfied with the new government, and everything looks favorable."

Havana, Jan. 19 (AP).—Reports from Washington that the American Administration is hopeful the new government of Carlos Mendieta will fulfill the hopes of stability and permit an early recognition and dispatches from Key West quoting Secretary Hull as saying that the prospects seem bright for an early recognition were enthusiastically received by the populace here.

Meanwhile, Col. Fulgencio Batista,

A Red Bobwhite Makes Debut, So Science Asks, How Come?

A new species of patridge is in the process of evolution right under the noses of the bird dogs, so to speak.

This was announced yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution, which believes that it is the first time such a phenomenon has happened under circumstances which allowed close observation.

From the ranks of the ordinary quail, or "Bobwhite," equally prized for shooting and the table, a new variety is emerging. The new partridge is dark, brick red in color, while the Bobwhite is brown and white.

Scientists at the Smithsonian hailed discovery as significant because the manner in which new species arise in nature has never been satisfactorily explained. It is a vital step in the evolutionary process.

Although it has been possible to produce new kinds of plants and animals, mostly insects, in the laboratory, this is quite different from the natural, unaided and observable occurrnace of the same thing.

It is of special significance, it was said, that it is occurring to a higher species.

Credit for the discovery goes to Hobart Ames, who maintains a bird hunting preserve in Tennesse. He noted the red quail and trapped some of them. To his surprise, they bred true to color, and when they were mated with ordinary birds the red color was dominant in the offspring.

The phenomenon is being studied by Dr. Herbert Friedman, curator of birds, and under his direction specimens have been sent to various institutions for specialized research.

Brown Finds Missing Mail Documents

Plot Against Character Charged in Mixing of State Papers.

Files Handed to Farley Along With Letter of Explanation.

With a big black bag bulging with missing correspondence relating to ocean and air mail, former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown arrived from New York yesterday, called on Postmaster General James A. Farley, delivered the contents of his bag, pointed out that he was the victim of a "conspiracy of character assassination," and four hours later departed again for New York.

In an accompanying letter, which Brown delivered personally to Farley and copies of which he distributed among newspapermen, he explained that only last Tuesday did he discover the documents were in his possession.

That was just one week after evidence had been presented before the Senate air mail investigating committee, that postoffice employes, at Brown's orders, burned his office files in the Postoffice Department furnace a few days before Brown went out of office with the rest of the Republican administration on March 4.

Conspiracy Detected.

After discarding theories that inclusion of these two official files with his personal papers could have been due to carelessness on the part of his personal staff, or that they had been included intentionally by a member of his staff, Brown concluded:

"There remains only one other theory, to wit, that these official files were surreptitiously placed among my personal papers at the instigation of some one who was engaged in a conspiracy of character assassination. There is some evidence to support this theory."

Brown related that he called for the boxes containing his personal papers and books in order to refresh his memory of the details of ocean and air mail contracts "in anticipation of being called to testify before the Senate committee of which Senator Black is chairman."

When he opened the boxes he found the two official files, he said, adding:

Black Skeptical.

"I need not tell you what concern this discovery caused me in view of the insinuations and innuendos recently aimed at my administration of air mail operations."

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, when informed of Brown's discovery and explanatory letter, expressed skepticism that the papers would include all those that are missing.

"Unfortunately, I'm afraid we can't find those that were burned," remarked the committee chairman.

"Certainly the committee is very glad indeed to have any papers that Mr. Brown may have discovered. Even a trace of the evidence in these files is better than none at all."

Interested in Evidence.

Referring to Brown's charge of character assassination, Black said:

"It would be interesting to know who could surreptitiously put those files in the box, wouldn't it? I should be very interested to see, too, the evidence that Mr. Brown speaks of."

Although he has not been subpenaed, it is expected that former Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover, who has been implicated during the committee's hearing in an identical charge of burning his office records, will appear when the committee reassembles Tuesday.

His appearance has been requested by two Republican members of the committee, Senators White, of Maine, and Austin, of Vermont.

Files May Be Requested.

Black said that at present the committee had no intention of asking Brown to appear, although it would be glad to hear him any time, provided Brown made a formal application to testify. So far, said Black, the committee has received no such application.

Committee investigators probably will ask the Postoffice Department for the newly discovered records, said Black.

CWA Drops Half Million Every Week

Congress Urged to Act by Roosevelt; Nation Protests Move.

Despite protests pouring in against reduction of the Civil Works Administration program ordered yesterday, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, declared last night the works scheme would be permanently cut off beginning February 15 by dropping 1,000,000 persons from the rolls every two weeks.

Yesterday's reductions, placing laborers on a 24-hour week and "white collar" workers on a 30-hour week, will be revoked when Congress provides money for a new program, Hopkins said, but were rendered imperative by failing funds.

Pay rolls exceeding anticipations by $8,000,000 or $9,000,000 a week threatened to bring the first project to a close before the scheduled date, Hopkins announced.

Roosevelt Promises Haste.

At the White House, it was indicated that President Roosevelt intends to exert all possible speed to get the matter before Congress. He stated the emergency program, with a $1,166,000,000 goal, would be ready for Congress by Monday. The CWA appropriation to continue the program beyond February 15 will be included in this, it was understood.

Hopkins believes that with 24 and 30 hour weeks in urban areas, and 15-hour weeks in rural areas, and by prohibiting addition of new workers, the CWA program can get as far as the February 10 payday. There are no funds to carry it further and Congress must act before that time to provide a new appropriation if it is to be continued.

The storm of protests from Congressmen, mayors, State officials and municipalities over the reduction order continued through yesterday. Observers believed that when efforts are made to permanently lay aside the program the entire Roosevelt relief program will meet the most severe test to date.

Can Not Be Stopped.

The number of objections served to justify claims, according to some, that the CWA program, once started, can not be stopped under any circumstances short of a return of excellent conditions.

Hopkins said the program is now costing about $75,000,000 a week, of which the Federal Government is contributing $60,000,000. He anticipates an appropriation of $350,000,000, which will serve to carry the work up to May 1 on a strictly demobilization basis, beginning Feb-

Kansas Troops Hunt Convicts

7 Desperadoes in Break, 2 Kidnap Teacher, Steal Auto.

Pleasanton, Kans., Jan. 19 (AP). Brig. Gen. Milton R. McLean, adjutant general, late today telephoned the Cavalry unit guarding a bridge here that two convicts, with Louis Dresser, their school teacher prisoner, were seen headed south.

Lansing, Kans., Jan. 19 (AP). Seven long-term convicts broke out of the Kansas Penitentiary here today under the gunfire of guards and two kidnaped Louis Dresser, rural school teacher, in their flight.

The escape was virtually a repetition of that last Memorial Day, when 11 convicts fled the prison.

Bob (Big Boy) Brady and Jim Clark, desperadoes who participated in the Memorial Day break, were the leaders today.

Prison officials expressed belief it was Brady and Clark who abducted Dresser and stole his car.

Dresser, a teacher near Wallula, Kans., was seized leaving home.

Later, a teacher and two pupils saw Dresser in the car with the two men.

National Guard units were ordered out at Fort Scott, Pleasanton, Coffeyville, Iola and other cities to form a cordon across highways leading southward. The guardsmen were equipped with machine guns and rifles.

Armed with clubs, the convicts overpowered Guard Clyde Deer and fled.

The guards reported they fired on the fleeing group and feel sure they wounded one of them.

Roosevelt Restores Benefits to Veterans

In an apparent effort to dissipate a storm cloud rapidly gathering in Congress, President Roosevelt yesterday signed four Executive orders restoring $21,092,205 in benefits to veterans by liberalizing provisions of the economy act.

How successful this would be in appeasing disgruntled members and heading off the prospect of a sharp fight remained to be seen, but in announcing the concessions the President let it be known they were as far as he planned to go.

The restorations, which were recommended to the President by Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, include two points of the four-point program of the American Legion, behind which sentiment was growing in both branches of Congress.

Thus some of the heart was taken from the drive for increasing veterans' alowances. In some quarters it was believed Mr. Roosevelt had parried the threat, but other sources, including many members of Congress, thought he still faced the possibility of a major dissension.

Reaction will be heard next Tuesday, when hearings will be begun by the House Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation. Meanwhile, a poll of both Republican and Democratic members of the Senate was under way by Administration leaders to determine the extent of sentiment in favor of modifications.

City Rum Bill Goes Today To President

O'Connor Assails Bride and "Rotten Stuff" as Senate Changes Pass.

House and Senate yesterday approved the District liquor control bill, providing for a licensing system, and the measure is expected to go to President Roosevelt for signature today.

Only the signing of the bill by Speaker Rainey and Vice President Garner is necessary to complete Congressional action on the measure. The Speaker is to sign the measure while presiding over the House today and Vice President Garner is to do so soon afterward. Authority for the Vice President to sign the bill when the Senate was in recess today was given yesterday.

Approval of the conference report was given by the Senate without debate after Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, asked and received unanimous consent for its consideration out of order.

Bride Under Fire.

There was a brief flare-up in the House, however, when Representative Mary T. Norton brought the report up under unanimous consent.

Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, protested the Senate had adopted several important amendments without debate or thorough consideration.

William W. Bride, corporation counsel, who has been in close conference with House and Senate committee members during consideration of the measure, was described as a "Republican corporation counsel who had contributed to the Hoover campaign" by Mr. O'Connor.

"I think it is most unfair to bring up a matter of that kind in connection with the consideration of this measure," Representative Norton said. "That is what I have heard gentlemen describe as hitting below the belt."

Flays "Rotten, Blended Stuff."

Representative O'Connor denounced the Senate provision giving drug stores 60 days after enactment to dispose of liquor which

Senators Act To Question NRA Chief

With Senators Borah and Nye attacking Gen. Hugh S. Johnson for his reference to them as "political tom-tom beaters" because of their criticism of NRA, a move took shape on Capitol Hill yesterday to bring the general before a Senate committee to account for his stewardship of the National Recovery Administration.

Johnson's remarks, which were made in a New York speech Thursday night, provoked the statement from Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, that "it appears there are two Johnsons to deal with in any NRA matter. At least it is evident that he has let reason fly from his chambers. As a speechmaker he has outdone himself."

"His approach to his subject may have also undone him as a successful administrator," threatened the North Dakotan. "Plainly, he was not himself when he prepared for his engagement of last night. Nero may rant and roar, but all the browbeating he may resort to will not destroy, though it may delay, knowledge of what NRA policy is doing to destroy small business and unnecessarily further burden the consumer, all to the end that plunderbund may enjoy larger monopoly and maintain profits on fictitious capitalization."

Senator Dickinson, (Republican), Iowa, who has been a consistent critic of the New Deal, and who is proposing to repeal the NRA, said if he could get committee action on his proposal he would ask for Johnson's appearance. Senator Borah, Republican), Idaho, another subject of Johnsonian invective along with Senator Nye, wants to take from the Recovery Administration the power to nullify anti-trust laws. Gen. Johnson believes such a move would destroy NRA, and presumably would go before a Senate committee to expound his views.

"No amount of denunciation can change the fact that trusts and

Mistrial for Dr. Wynekoop Waits Word of Physicians

Chicago, Jan. 19 (AP).—Judge Joseph B. David indicated tonight that he may declare a mistrial in the case of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, charged with murdering her daughter-in-law, pretty, 23-year-old Rheta Gardner Wynekoop.

He awaited a report of physicians examining the 62-year-old defendant, critically ill of a heart ailment, before announcing his decision. He ordered a court recess until Monday.

"If the doctors find that continuance of the trial will endanger Dr. Wynekoop's life I will declare a mistrial upon the motion of either the defense or the State," the gray-haired judge said.

Concern for the life of Dr. Wynekoop was expressed after she failed to recover satisfactorily from a second collapse during the trial.

She was revived by an injection of nitroglycerin, given by her daughter, Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, and was carried from the courtroom to the county jail hospital. A heart specialist was called, and physicians watched at her bedside all night.

Pale and trembling, she was brought into court today, borne up by her iron will to "carry on." Overruling her pleas that the trial go on, Judge David heeded the advise of physicians that another collapse might prove fatal, and ordered a recess.

Postmaster General Seeks to Devote More Time to Postoffice.

Senator Will Hold Hearings on Bill

Widespread Practice of "Favor Purveyors" Is Soundly Scored.

By Raymond Clapper.

A clean sweep of political lobbying in Washington will be made if the aims of the New Deal are carried out.

President Roosevelt hopes to put a death sentence on the sale of political influence which has flourished as one of Washington's greatest industries since March 4.

Political lobbying, always a lucrative business for thousands of men who have lived by their wits here, gained a fresh lease on life with the burst of new activity under the Roosevelt Administration.

The change of Administrations, the addition of dozens of new emergency agencies and the outpouring of billions of dollars in Government money have drawn political racketeers to Washington in unprecedented numbers.

Racketeering Is Target.

The Administration, it is learned, will encourage the most drastic dealing with this situation in the interest of protecting citizens having legitimate business with the Government, who, in many instances, need no legal help, inside pull, or backdoor influence to get a hearing.

President Roosevelt is out to divorce racketeering from the conduct of the Government business.

He is also desirous of disentangling, so far as possible, the operation of the Government from the management of the Democratic party.

The way is being prepared for the retirement of Postmaster General James A. Farley as chairman of the Democratic National committee as soon as a successor can be found.

He already has asked President Roosevelt to be relieved of his political burdens, but will serve until a new chairman is chosen. It may be some time before a change can be made.

Meantime White House support made it probable that Congress would soon enact legislation to stamp out political racketeering in Washington.

A Senate judiciary subcommittee is expected to meet today to consider the bill of Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to amend the criminal code to forbid National committee members of either party from handling cases before Government departments or from accepting positions under the Treasury Department.

If the Congress chooses to go even further than this in the direction of exterminating the other forms of so-called law practice which in many cases are regarded as thinly

Mother, 2 Sons Die in Plunge

Leaps From Building in Shanghai With Boys in Her Arms.

Shanghai, Jan. 19 (AP).—Mrs. W. S. Grooch, of El Paso, Tex., took her two sons, William, 6, and Thomas, 7 — the under each arm — and jumped off the roof of an eight-story apartment house today. All three were killed.

Mrs. Grooch was the wife of the operations manager of the Pacific-American Airways.

When he heard of the tragedy, Grooch lost consciousness and is now in a serious condition. Mrs. Grooch came here in December from Rio de Janeiro.

Grooch is one of the leading aviation officials in the Far East. He came here in May, 1932, for the Pacific American Line, which is a subsidiary of Pan-American Airways, and operated between Shanghai and Canton.

Last August 14, he flew an exploratory plane from Hong Kong to Manila, preparatory to the establishment of a Shanghai-Manila Air Line.

Authorities learned that Mrs. Grooch had been scheduled to sail for the United States tonight aboard the S. S. President Wilson to reach the bedside of her father, who is seriously ill.

Boy Hangs Himself "Because I Got a C"

Michigan City, Ind., Jan. 19 (AP). The parents of Frank Williams, 13-year-old grade school pupil, today read this note after he had hanged himself in the basement of his home:

G. O. P. Fights Equalization Fund Set-Up

House Minority Report to Oppose Making "Czar" of Morgenthau.

An attack on the section of President Roosevelt's gold bill, which establishes a $2,000,000,000 equalization fund controlled by the Secretary of the Treasury, will be made by Republicans in the House today on the ground it "places the economic destiny of the American people in the hands of one man."

A minority report on H. R. 6976, the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, will be presented by Representative Ralph R. Eltse (Republican), California, and Representative Harold McGugin (Republican), Kansas, who will offer an amendment to have the fund controlled by a board of five, including the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and two members appointed by the President, with salaries of $10,000 a year.

See Creation of Czar.

Declaring the bill, as reported to the House for debate and passage today, makes Henry Morgenthau, jr., "a czar," the minority report says:

"We believe control of the two billion dollar fund places autocratic and dictatorial power in the hands of one man over, directly, the control of the value of money and credit, and, indirectly, over prices."

There will be a fight, also, on the provisions of the President's bill which takes title for the Government to the gold now in Federal Reserve Banks.

The minority report favors leaving such gold where it is, "in justice to the people who hold Federal Reserve notes as currency."

Representatives Eltse and McGugin also reported in favor of stabilizing the dollar definitely at 63 2-3 cents, instead of leaving it variable as at present.

Oppose Seizure of Gold.

The only witnesses before the House Coinage Committee yesterday were George W. Norris, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, who expressed apprehension over the plan to have the Government take title to the gold, and Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, who declared that "whenever the Federal Reserve Board sets itself up in opposition to the Government, someone will rise up and destroy the Federal Reserve. States bank in the '30s."

Chairman Somers will introduce the bill at 11 a. m., amended by his committee to provide that "a general report on the operation of the stabilization) fund shall be made by the President to the Congress within a period beginning 90 days before and ending 90 days after the expiration of three years from the date of enactment of this act."

Stage Subsidy Embroils Paris

Comedie-Francaise Merger With Odeon Proposed to Save Money.

Paris (U.P.).—Leading French actors and drama critics are up in arms against the government's proposal to merge the repertory companies of the celebrated Comedie-Francaise and Odeon Theaters.

Recently, however, the chamber finance commission held up the proposed 33,000,000 franc subsidy for these historic organizations. The deputies, less concerned with the art of the theater than with reducing government costs, maintained that two state theaters for the legitimate drama, under present-day conditions, were a dispensable luxury.

On the other hand, the government showed itself more generous toward state-supported opera, leaving untouched the 1934 subsidies for the Opera and the Opera-Comique.

The government's urgent recommendation that the two "legitimate" organizations be merged provoked howls of protests from jealous supporters of the two theaters, whose traditional rivalry dates for more than 150 years. Even neutral observers maintain that each theater has its own peculiar role in the French stage, and that a merger of the two companies would produce ludicrous if not harrowing results.

Rescue Efforts Fail For Six Entombed

Workers Unable to Find Men in Building Ruins.

Hull, England, Jan. 19 (AP).—Rescue workers are still trying to save six men entombed yesterday when a warehouse collapsed in a heap of masonry and grain.

Authorities expressed hope the men might still be alive, but had found no trace of them after hours of effort.

Ten others were injured. The foot of one man was amputated so he could be removed from under a fallen timber.

Bette Davis, Film Star, Ill at Hollywood Home

Hollywood, Jan. 19 (AP).—Bette Davis blonde movie actress, has been seriously ill at her home for the last five days as a result of a sunstroke and intestinal influenza.

Chewing Gum Wrappers Clew.

Detroit (U.P.).—Two patrolmen investigating a grocery robbery followed a trail of chewing gum wrappers for several blocks. At the end of this trail began a trail of coffee beans. Following this clew for several blocks they discovered six men dividing their $1,000 loot, minus several packages of gum and a bag of coffee.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

The Socialist Party in America has never come within miles of winning a National election. But it would seem that it didn't need to. For nearly the whole of the Socialists' platform in 1912, when Eugene V. Debs was running for President, has already become an accomplished fact in our Government. As to their platform in 1932, its aims have been visibly paralleled by recent legislation. The meek have inherited America.

We are very likely not to see the forest for the trees in this matter. To correct that, Henry Savage, jr., a South Carolina lawyer, has written a clear and brief study of our Governmental drift—"America Goes Socialistic" (Dorrance, $1.75). Whether the term be socialism or collectivism or state capitalism, the drift remains apparent. The Constitution did not intend this. But the Constitution, because of judicial interpretations of the phrase "general welfare," because of Congress' power to appropriate funds, and because of the extension of executive power over activities not foreseen by its makers, has likewise not been able to halt the movement. Mr. Savage points out that this rise in the power of the masses is a reaction from the plutocratic Gilded Age of the 1880's. He also points out that the old passion for "individual liberty" has all but vanished. His thesis is worth thinking about and his book very much worth reading.

What the makers of the Constitution definitely intended is the theme of "Our Unknown Constitution" (Real Book Co., $2.), written by William Harman Black, a justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

He traces the spirit of the Constitution as shown in its makers, its terms, its later interpretations, and its amendments. Although the legal learning of Justice Black comes to the fore, his book is not dull. He has made it a thoroughly interesting adventure in ideas to learn what our Constitution says and means.

The whole story of the WONPR (Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform) is told by Grace C. Root in "Women and Repeal" (Harper, $1.50). From the day in 1929 when Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, at a luncheon in her honor of the Women's National Republican Club, of New York City, announced rather dramatically that she had resigned as National Republican Committeewoman in order to work for a change in the prohibition law, the book narrates the progress made by the movement until the climax came at its victory dinner on December 6 last, one day after the eighteenth amendment was repealed.

It may be possible that prohibition would have died without the ministrations of the WONPR, but it is not likely that the end would have come as soon as it did.

The Italian writer, who flew over Rome on October 3, 1931, dropped thousands of anti-Fascist leaflets upon its roofs and streets, and disappeared entirely thereafter, left behind him a stirring last message. "The Story of My Death" (Oxford, $1.), is Lauro de Bossis' description of the events which led up to his propaganda air-raid. He suspected the worst, and mailed the manuscript to a friend just before taking off. But to protect those who had aided him, he left most of the details extremely vague.

The book prints the French text of his message, a translation by Ruth Draper, the Italian and English texts of the three sorts of leaflets he dropped, and a short biographical note. A martyr to his political faith, Lauro de Bossis stands an impassioned and tragic figure.

It is the burden of the man who once turns humorist that no one will take him seriously thereafter. But Clarence Day, author of those delightful yarns about "Father," which have appeared in the New Yorker, now utterly disproves that observation. Early this month he wrote a little piece which came out in the New York American. Very briefly, very simply, he described the last day, the death and burial, of Calvin Coolidge. The result was a minor masterpiece of prose.

The Yale University Press has just made a little book of it, ($0.50) with the title "In the Green Mountain Country." No one who reads it can escape feeling the monumental power of its plain and honest English. Mr. Day may be a humorist. He is also consummately capable of another effect.

vided for a thorough combing of Minnesota communities by Legionnaires and establishment of a bureau of information on the case. Legionnaires of neighboring States also were to be asked to lend their aid.

One possible clew was under investigation by Federal forces, directed by Harold Nathan, assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation at Washington, and Frank J. Blake, who came here by plane from the Southwest, where he directed the search for abductors of Charles Urschel, millionaire Oklahoma oil man.

That was the story of George St. Marie, an acquaintance of Bremer, who said he had seen two strangers whispering and intently watching the bank president and even pointing to him the night before the kidnaping.

Chinese Start NRA Campaign As Experiment

Ten-Year Idea by "Model Governor" Aims at Modernization.

Peiping, China (U.P.).—An NRA campaign of its own differing from the American brand, but decidedly unique so far as China is concerned, is proceeding in Shansi Province, where power is in the hands of Marshal Yen Hsi-shan, once known to the world as China's "Model Governor."

The campaign has been inaugurated in connection with a ten-year plan for Shansi. The inauguration was featured by the issuance of a decree requiring every man in the province to contribute 13 days of free manual service and labor each year. Every man between 18 and 49 is to work on road building for ten days a year and on forestation for three days a year.

Only students, policemen, soldiers, teachers, physicians, public officials and the physically unfit are exempt.

All workers, who are employed in the vicinity of their own villages, will be required to feed and house themselves during their compulsory service.

Reports indicate the compulsory public service decree already is in force.

Marshal Yen Hsi-shan and the Shansi Provincial Government officials are represented as determined to bring prosperity to their province by introducing modern industrial and agricultural methods and by building a network of highways.

Shansi is a province of 81,853 square miles. It is a plateau crossed by mountain ranges with a climate so severe as to permit but one crop a year. Taiyuanfu, the capital city, has a population of 250,000. Shansi has coal fields among the richest in the world and corn, tobacco, cotton and rice are its major crops.

The province-wide mobilization of labor, if sustained over the period planned for it by the Shansi authorities, is expected to result in at least partial success for the ten-year plan. For a considerable period Shansi has been free from civil war. This is a factor which should contribute favorably to the modernization program.

American Ordered To Leave Germany

Attorney Is "Undesirable Alien," Reich Says.

Berlin, Jan. 19 (AP).—Leo Gallagher, a Los Angeles attorney who interested himself in the recent incendiarism and treason trial of five Communists, was ordered today to leave Prussia within three days as "an undesirable alien."

The American was not told the exact nature of the complaint, but said that he had been "quite decently treated" during a long grilling by police. He informed the American consulate of the order.

Gallagher was not allowed to take an official part in the supreme court trial of three Bulgarians, Ernst Torgler, former Communist whip in the Reichstag, and Marinus Van der Lubbe, young Dutch brick mason.

Collapse of Ice Mountain Just Misses Byrd Flagship

Little America, Antarctica, aJn. 19 (AP), (Via Mackay Radio).—The collapse of a mountain of ice near the flagship and the narrow escape of a scaplane from a crash nearly spelled disaster today for the second Antarctic expedition of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

This morning the plane, which will carry out most of the expedition's exploratory work, had taken off for its first flight, when it was noticed that both its skiis were hanging vertically from its undercarriage.

Crashes Without Warning.

About non the 10,000-ton flagship., creeping along the Bay of Whales seeking a mooring place, approached the landing place used in the previous expedition.

Admiral Byrd studied the roof of the barrier, which rose sheer 70 feet from the water's edge, and asked the meteorologist:

"What do you think of the place? Does it seem safe to you?"

Before he finished, something happened without warning. One moment the cliff face seemed as solid as the palisades; the next minute there was a sound like a skyscraper collapsing, and a quarter of a mile of ice barrier tumbled into the sea, 200 yards from the ship. The impact rocked the ship and a hundred thousand tons of ice spread fanwise over the water.

Plane's Escape Dramatic.

There followed several minutes of silence.

"Well," said the meteorologist then, "now that you've asked me, Admiral, I don't think I'd care to tie up there."

The ship subsequently swung back to the edge of the bay ice, about 2½ miles northwest of Little America. It will unlaod there, and a survey party was sent to mark a trail to the base.

The plane's escape was just as dramatic.

Since the flagship's arrival yesterday, most of the hours have been sleepless, because of the mishaps and efforts to excavate the old camp and build new roads to it from the ship.

The Federal Diary

INEQUITIES in pay and classification still exist in Division of Insolvent National Banks, Treasury, affecting approximately 150 employes. In the finance section and file room of this division there are persons in executive positions with long Government experience whose salaries are $1,440, while newly appointed stenographers assisting them get $1,620. Most of these employes have Civil Service ratings, but a few do not.

BAKER.

Pay and classification were adjusted in the Audit Section December 15 following petitions filed last July with the Comptroller of the Currency. Yesterday, the employes of Finance Section turned in a similar petition to J. H. Worthen, finance clerk. Mr. Worthen is said to have promised to forward it on to the Comptroller of the Currency immediately.

The Division has been organized several years, but last year it was expanded from about 25 employes to more than 150. It handles reports on District insolvent banks as well as National banks throughout the country.

PLANS for the January meeting of the Federal Bar Association scheduled for next Wednesday at the Shoreham Hotel were announced yesterday. The program will be in four sections, beginning at 2:30 p. m. with a pridge party in the palm room. A reception for the women members will follow at 5 p. m. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m. and will be followed by dancing.

MRS. EVALYN A. PHILLIPS.

WIDELY known in bowling circles, Evalyn A. Phillips, Construction Service, Veterans Administration, is one of the best women athletes in Washington. She is captain of Veterans, No. 2, team in the Ladies Federal Bowling League.

Mrs. Phillips celebrated her tenth anniversary in Government service this month. She is a native of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. As her office is very busy on CWA projects (buildings and grounds), she could not spare the time for a more detailed interview. Oh, yes, she is a good bridge player, we learned, because that is our hobby, too.

State G.O.P. Chief Jailed in Killing

Shot Georgian in Defense, Says J. W. Arnold.

Athens, Ga., Jan. 19 (AP).—James W. Arnold, Republican National committeeman from Georgia, today was arrested on a charge of murder and placed in the county jail here following the shooting to death of George Hawks, tenant farmer on Arnold's Oconee County plantation late yesterday.

Arnold's arrest followed a coroner's jury verdict earlier in the day charging the committeeman with the killing.

Arnold issued a signed statement saying Hawks attacked him with an ax handle, and that he fired one shot from his gun.

Herndon Churchwomen Elect Leader 29th Time

Miss Ida Lee Castleman was elected president of the Women's Auxiliary of the St. Timothy's Episcopal Church of Herndon for the twenty-ninth consecutive term at the annual meeting of the organization.

Photos Reveal "Cold Steam" Metal's Enemy

High Pressure Stream Studied in "Tech" Laboratory.

Cambridge, Mass. (AP).—Cold steam, an enemy to power production instead of a servant, is revealed in a glass-windowed water pipe at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The window shows that cold water, running through a pipe at high velocity, is not always all water. Part of it may be steam, formed without heat, as cold as the water but able to drive holes in the hardest metals yet devised for utilizing water power.

Superspeed Trouble.

The window pipe was set up to study cavitation, a phenomenon causing erosion of metal by water when it runs around a corner at high speed. Cavitation attacks the blades of turbines and the propellers of fast naval destroyers. It does not bother other shipping, for it is a superspeed trouble, a threat to blades which move too fast.

The water flows at speeds of 50 to 60 miles an hour in the window pipe, driven by a centrifugal pump.

As long as the flow is in a straight line this speed does no harm. But when the water passes over a hump in the pipe a white plume forms, not at the hump but some distance down stream.

Photographs Taken.

The plume is cold steam. How it gathers is shown by "Tech's" high-speed camera, which can take 2,000 pictures a second. As the water passes over the hump its particles separate, like the boy tossed off at the end of the line in a game of crack-the-whip.

The separation forms open spaces in the water areas of high vacuum. In these spaces the water boils while cold.

Thousands of bubbles form. Past the hump they form a cloud streaming down stream. Then the water particles come together again and the steam bubbles collapse with an unending rumble.

Metal Worn Away.

The breaking bubbles act like little hammers wherever they touch a metal surface. Steel is rapidly ground away. Brass disintegrates with equal quickness and also bends slightly upward, as if being pounded from underneath. Glass pits deeply. Only rubber has withstood the pounding, but no method has been found for fitting rubber coats over turbine or propeller blades.

Complete solution of the cavitation problem will not only add to knowledge of hydraulic phenomena, but will cause vast savings in turbine and propeller replacement and repairs.

Insull May Get Stay on Ouster

Greek Council Is Reported to Favor 2-Week Extension.

Athens, an. 19 (AP).—Although the state supreme council was told today it could not controvert the Greek government's decision to expel Samuel Insull on anuary 31, it was said in a well-informed source that the former Chicago utilities operator would be permitted to remain until February 14.

Insull's last hope of remaining in his Athenian retreat indefinitely lay in the possibility that the council may defy the deportation order.

Theodore Angelopoulos, the council's reporter, told the body it had no jurisdiction in the case of the former utilities operator, whom the United States twice has sought vainly to extradite to face charges in connection with the collapse of the Insull utilities.

The eight judges were reported evenly divided as to their course, but reserved their decision, probably until Tuesday.

The government is determined Insull must leave, even if he has to be carried out on a stretcher. This was made known after his physician again protested that his patient is too weak to travel.

$26,000 Cigarettes Taken by Hijackers

Baltimore-Bound Truck Robbed Near Here.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 19 (AP).—Hijackers, operating on the Petersburg highway below Richmond, early today seized a $26,000 cargo of cigarettes en route to Baltimore from Winston-Salem after stopping the truck and removing and blindfolding the drivers. One shot was fired into the truck.

Paul Holt, of Burlington, N. C., and R. W. Wortham, of Richmond, drivers, told the story here today shortly after they returned with the empty vehicle.

Lieut. H. B. Nicholas, of the State Motor Vehicle Police, said there had been several cases of cigarette truck hijacking in Virginia lately, and he believes the culprits to be operating from some Northern point.

plead with Judge David to continue the trial.

"Now, look here," she said with emphasis, "I'm going to die, and we all know it. For heaven's sake, let's get on with the trial. My name must be cleared before I pass away."

Defense Attorney W. W. Smith shook his head and advanced to the bench.

"She wants to go on with it," he said. "She came here this morning against the advice of physicians. But I feel, your honor, that if we proceed with the trial today, she will die."

Orders Examination.

Judge David heard his motion for a delay.

"It is obvious," he said, "that the case can not be brought into court. I will be forced to grant a mistrial if the doctor's condition is as serious as indicated."

Possibility that Dr. Wynekoop's illness might be feigned, or induced by drugs or injections, was suggested by Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty.

"It might be well," he suggested to Judge David, "for the court to appoint impartial physicians of his own to make an examination and to report to the court the condition of this woman."

The court ordered Dr. Arthur Byfield and Dr. William J. McNally to examine the physician and determine exactly the seriousness of her plight.

Alienist Declares Harriman Is Sane

Calls Banker Competent to Stand Trial.

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Joseph W. Harriman, the banker, was called sane by an alienist testifying today in Federal court.

Dr. Menas S. Gregory, chief of the psychiatric division of Bellevue Hospital, testified the banker was mentally competent to stand trial on an indictment charging him with looting accounts of depositors in the defunct Harriman National Bank & Trust Co.

Virginia Urged To License Rum Sale in Hotels

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 19.—Virginia resorts will lose most of their Washington trade unless hotels serve whisky, witnesses agreed today at General Assembly liquor hearings.

Later sessions of both the House and Senate were curtailed to commemorate the birth of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Bills for revision of sterilization laws and to do away with virtually all of the 1,400 State-owned automobiles were introduced before adjournment until Monday.

Chairman Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, predicted the house finance committee would favorably report by Wednesday his bill for a State-operated liquor dispensary system. He insisted the committee would reject proposals for whisky sales by hotels and restaurants.

Nevertheless, reports persisted tonight that Democratic leaders would sponsor an amendment to the dispensary plan, authorizing issuance of licenses to hotels and restaurants at the discretion of the alcoholic beverage control board.

Wets Oppose Dispensaries.

Four opponents of State stores monopolized the hearings. They included H. W. Davis, Norfolk lawyer; Mrs. George Sloane, Warrenton, former Virginia chairman of the women's organization for National Prohibition Reform; Mrs. Julia Keith, Warrenton, wet leader, and Senator E. R. Fuller, Richmond.

Davis urged a licensing plan under which spirits could be sold in hotel dining rooms. He predicted thousands of persons from Washington and elsewhere who ordinarily visit Virginia Beach and other watering spots in this State would flock to the Eastern Shore of Maryland if hotels were denied whisky privileges.

The dispensary plan, Davis argued, would encourage drinking in hotel bedrooms.

Restriction of liquor sales to hotels of more than 75 rooms, he added, would protect the financial interests of many small investors. He said such establishments, many near bankruptcy, paid $600,000 in taxes last year on property assessed at $24,000,000.

Virginia hotels, Mrs. Sloane reported, must sell liquor or lose invaluable conventions.

Urges Open Drinking.

"We should take the mystery out of drinking," she declared. "If we don't, speakeasies will be encouraged. You must remember many of us don't like to drink in a bedroom."

Only 77 hotels, Mrs. Sloane said, have more than 75 rooms. She said she would not oppose whisky licenses for reputable restaurants.

Mrs. Keith contended many localities in Virginia were ideal for vineyards. She asked a low tax on wine as an incentive to farmers and to reduce liquor consumption.

"The people are tired of childish liquor restrictions," she remarked.

Senator Fuller contended the dispensary system would result in control of political machines by liquor interests. He said the license plan would prove much more effective.

Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, Front Royal, led the fight for another session of the finance committee later today, but hearings were postponed until Monday night.

The sterilization measure was advanced by Delegate W. Stuart Moffett, Staunton, and C. G. Quesenberry, Waynesboro. The bill would provide that persons suffering from mental diseases, but not considered dangerous to their neigbors, could elect to be sterilized or enter State hospitals.

Aims at State Autos.

Senator Robert O. Norris, Lancaster, offered the bill to reduce State care and pay employes 5 cents a mile for using their own machines. He said the proposal involved a potential saving of $100,000 a year.

Another Norris measure would extend from five to seven years the prohibition against changes in textbooks by school authorities.

Delegate William D. Medley, Clarendon, and other members from the Washington area, were expected to support a bill introduced by Delegate Frank Moore, Lexington, calling for opening of election polls between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m. instead of sunrise to sunset. Virginia voters living near Washington have complained they seldom finished work in time to vote.

Ministers Oppose "Blue Law" Repeal

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—The Harrisonburg and Rockingham County Ministerial Association today adopted resolutions protesting repeal of the so-called "blue laws" by the Virginia General Assembly.

The resolutions call upon Senator Aubrey G. Weaver and Delegates J. O. Beard and John W. Morris to vote against enactment of the race track betting laws and to vote against modification of laws which prohibit Sunday baseball and Sunday movies.

Richmond, Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Maj. Samuel Rolfe Miller, of Front Royal, and Mrs. Dorothy Angus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Treece, of Richmond, were married here today in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Beverly Tucker officiating.

Maj. Millar served overseas in the World War and is now a major in the Virginia National Guard and a member of the governor's staff.

Maj. and Mrs. Millar left immediately after the ceremony for a trip through the South. They will live at Front Royal.

Printing then was a new invention and books were so rare no chances could be taken.

Chamber for Rare Books Will House Varied Collection.

Harriet Stowe Will Meet "Three Fast Widows" There, Too.

The James Boys are going soft.

It is not such a surprise to learn that "Three Fast Widows," Homer, and Harriet Beecher Stowe soon will dwell together in marble halls, but —The James Boys.

Yes, and Deadwood Dick, too, that "Prince of the Road"—shootinest hombre who ever pounded a pony's flank—obsequiously allowing all and sundry to paw him in a sepulchral chamber where voices don't rise above a whisper!

Such a situation almost calls for a Latin quotation.

And such a situation will come into existence in a few weeks, with the opening of the new home in the Library of Congress for its rare books collection. It will be not only a library within a library but a museum, art gallery, scholars' workshop and side show as well.

The new quarters will be finished soon and moving operations are expected to begin in March. Ninety-thousand titles now crowded together in Deck 37 will be transferred to shining, freshly built shelves.

This will give an idea of the collection's catholic complexion—and pricelessness:

The Vollbehr collection of 3,000 incunabula (books printed before the sixteenth century), complete except for the Gutenberg Bible, which is on permanent exhibition in the library proper. Among them is a first edition of Homer's Iliad, published in 1488.

Beadle's Half-Dime Novelettes. (Ask Grandma if she remembers "Myrtle, or, Child of the Prairie," by Rose Kennedy.)

A remarkable collection of 500 miniatures includes the smallest volume in the world. It is Omar's Rose Garden and no larger than a grain of corn.

Four shelves of books devoted exclusively to sermons, speeches, articles and either written or spoken material eulogizing George Washington, all of which were published immediately following his death in 1799.

A predime novel section containing 600 titles along the line of "Three Fast Widows and Naughty Men." This period flourished between 1840 and 1860.

Volume 1, No. 1, of "Deadwood Dick," by Edward L. Wheeler, and its hundreds of successors belonging to the dime novel era, which began about the time of the Civil War.

Here also are bound copies of the National Era, the old Washington newspaper, including the issue of June 2, 1851, when the most important story was the first instalment and first appearance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." "Poor Richard" is here with hundreds of other almanacs. Did you know that the first book printed in Rhode Island was an almanac? Almanacs, along with the Bible and sermons, provided the chief source of reading a couple of hundred years ago.

There are editions of "Paradise Lost," Shakespeare's four folios, an extremely rare pamphlet revealing that Boston appealed to Dublin for sympathy following the Boston Massacre, and practically all books printed in the Confederate States.

The reading room will seat 83 persons. Air conditioning and fastidious regulation of temperature and humidity will preserve the books. A guard will be continuously on duty.

Brown's Letter to Farley

Work of "Character Assassin" Detected in Placing of Missing Air Mail and Ocean Mail Files Among Private Papers.

The following is the complete text of the letter which former Postmaster General Brown delivered personally to Postmaster General Farley regarding missing Post-office Department files:

Hon James A. Farley,
The Postmaster General,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Postmaster General: Last Tuesday evening, a few minutes before the leaving time of the train I was taking to keep a pressing business engagement in Ohio, I opened for the first time a box of books, printed reports, and personal correspondence which members of my personal staff in the Postoffice Department had packed for me late in February last year. My purpose in opening the box at that time was to provide myself with copies of the Senate documents on air mail and ocean mail printed at the suggestion of Senator McKellar two years ago, also copies of the hearings before the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate relating to the air and ocean mail services which I had directed my secretary to place in the box.

I planned spending some of the time on my railroad journey refreshing my memory with respect to the details of ocean and air mail contracts in anticipation of being called to testify before the Senate Committee of which Senator Black is chairman.

Amazed by Discovery.

When I got the box opened, the lid of which had been held in place by more than 20 long screws, I was amazed to find among the mass of books, printed reports, and personal correspondence two files of official correspondence, one labeled "Air Mail," and the other "Merchant Marine." I need not tell you what concern this discovery caused me in view of the insinuations and innuendoes recently aimed at my administration of air-mail operations.

The task of separating and packing my personal correspondence and belongings last February was entrusted to members of my personal staff, Mr. McPherson, Mr. Martin, Miss Mummenhoff, and the departmental messengers, all of whom were capable, loyal, and honest public servants. They had explicit instructions from me to leave every official paper in its place in the departmental filing cases. My personal correspondence and papers I directed should be removed from the files, carefully examined, the portion that had no permanent interest or value destroyed, and the residue packed and sent to the Shoreham Hotel.

Three Theories Advanced.

One of three theories would account for the inclusion of these official files with my personal books and papers. First, that the official files were placed in the box above described through carelessness on the part of some member of my personal staff. Inquiries which I have been able to make convince me that this theory is altogether improbable.

Second, that the official files were placed in the box above described intentionally by some one of my personal staff. No motive that would appeal to the intelligence of a 6-year-old child can be assigned for such an action. All official letters written by the Postmaster General during my service were accompanied by three carbon copies, one of which was placed in the Postmaster General's file, one in the file of the chief clerk, and, if the subject matter of the letter was air mail or ocean mail, the third carbon was filed in the bureau of the Second Assistant Postmaster General.

Removing the carbon copies of official letters from the Postmaster General's file could not possibly operate to suppress the contents of such letters, since the other two carbon copies would remain in the other files of the department. Removing any official files relating to the air mail and merchant marine from the departmental cases of course could not fail to be a disservice to me, particularly when a committee of Congress was investigating the air and ocean mail operations.

Work of Enemy Perceived.

Moreover, I never wrote or received an official letter dealing with the air or ocean mail, or any other subject, which I was not willing the whole world should see. I therefore dismiss the theory that these official files were placed in the box with my private papers intentionally by any member of my personal staff. There remains only one other theory, to wit, that these official files were surreptitiously placed among my personal papers at the instigation of some one who was engaged in a conspiracy of character assassination. There is some evidence to support this theory.

The box which contained these files, after it was packed and closed, was sent to the storeroom of the Shoreham Hotel at Washington. A few days later, together with our household goods, it was sent to the warehouse of the Security Storage Co., at Washington. A few weeks later, the box in question, with the rest of our goods, was carried by motor van to the Barclay Hotel, in New York, the box supposedly containing only my personal papers and books and being placed in the hotel storeroom, where it remained until a few days ago, when it was brought up to our apartment.

During the brief time that has elapsed since the box was opened, no one has had access to its contents except Mrs. Brown and myself. Nothing has been removed from any of these official files, and their contents have not been disturbed in any particular.

Delivered in Person.

To make absolutely certain that the official correspondence in question is safely returned to the Post-office Department as promptly as possible, I am personally delivering to you, herewith, by my own hand, the packet labeled "Air Mail" and the packet labeled "Merchant Marine," together with a small file of letters from President Hoover which was also contained in the box in which were packed my personal papers. These letters, I believe without exception, were answered by me in person, and generally were intended only to direct my attention to matters which the President wished to discuss with me. If you should reach the conclusion that these letters will be of no further service to the department, and that with propriety they may be returned to me, I shall be most happy to have them.

I am delighted to be able to return the official files relating to air mail and ocean mail unscathed by their fantastic experience in the fiery furnace, as were Shadrach and his companions of old.

With personal regards and best wishes for the New Year, I am

Very truly yours,
(Signed) WALTER F. BROWN.

Projected Airport Approval Held Up

New Market Plan Termed Second Class.

New Market, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—New Market officials were notified today the airport project involving an expenditure of $18,806 had been termed a second class project by the CWA, and in event no more important airport projects were filed prior to February 15, approval probably would be given, provided additional appropriations are made after that date.

Shenandoah County, it was stated at Woodstock, has exceeded its allowance of man hours and no further funds are available for the county. It was further stated in the event additional appropriations are made the local application will have to be resubmitted after some modification.

Bishop Perry Will Disclose Church Plan

Speaks Tomorrow to "All Episcopalians" From Cathedral.

A message presaging "one of the most significant movements of rehabilitation and progress which has ever occurred in the life of the Episcopal Church," a message intended for Episcopalians throughout the Nation, will be voiced from the Washington Cathedral pulpit tomorrow at 4 o'clock by the Rt. Rev. James DeWolf Perry, presiding bishop of the denomination.

Never before has a presiding bishop tried in a similar manner to gain the attention of the entire communion of the church. The exact terms of the "call" will first be known to the members in this personal utterance. It is the result of plans which have been maturing for many weeks.

The message, it is understood, will have even though individual dioceses and parishes generally have at this time grave financial problems.

Washington Cathedral was chosen by Bishop Perry from which to make this Nation-wide statement in response to an invitation from the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, because this structure has caught the imagination of Episcopalians as a National church center.

The event has unique interest to Episcopalians all over the world. While every possible means have been adopted to disperse Bishop Perry's call throughout the church by carefully timed mailings, its terms will reach them chiefly through the secular and religious press.

the present restorations a continuation of his policy of correcting by Executive order what was shown to be inequalities. In this, he still stood pat on his Chicago speech, in which he favored restricting benefits, and was believed admant to any general upward revision of compensation.

"In accordance with the previous announcements of the President," a White House statement said, "the Administrator of Veteran's Affairs has caused to be made continuous studies of the effect of veterans' regulations.

"With the completion of the review of cases under the economy act and the amendments contained in the independent offices appropriation act of last year and in the light of these studies, the administrator presented to the President certain recommendations which are contained in Executive orders further amending veterans' regulations, which were signed today.

Affect 228,000 Veterans.

"These Executive orders will affect 228,000 veterans at an additional cost of approximately $21,092,205."

The announcement, which was made following a conference with Gen. Hines and Director of the Budget Lewis W. Douglas, listed the following changes:

1. Increase from $90 to $100 a month in pensions to veterans suffering total service-connected disability; proportionate increases for lesser disabilities. ($8,000,000.)

2. Free hospitalization for veterans suffering nonservice diseases requiring emergency or extensive care, if they are unable to pay for their own treatment. ($8,362,492.)

3. Pension of $15 monthly to Spanish-American War veterans honorably discharged after 90 days' service, or, having served less than [illegible] were discharged for service disability, and who are 50 per cent or more disabled without regard to service origin. ($2,000,000.)

4. Increase in funeral allowance for veterans from $75 to $100. ($1,227,700.)

5. Veterans discharged for disabilities incurred in line of duty, now suffering permanent, total disability, need no longer prove 90 days' service to obtain pension of $30 monthly, even though unable to prove present disability resulted in service. ($204,258.)

6. Restoration of old pension rates up to $30 monthly for widows of regular Army men who died of disabilities received in line of duty. ($47,755.)

Pensions Are Modified.

7. Modification of prohibition against payment of pension to Federal employes receiving salaries over $50 monthly to permit payment to employes receiving $1,000 annually, if single, and $2,500, if married or supporting minor children. ($1,250,000.)

8. Provision authorizing renouncenouncement of pension to permit trained employes of Veterans Administration, who otherwise under the Economy Act would be barred from making decisions on veterans' claims, to retain their positions.

The first two provisions are among points of the American Legion proposal, which has taken the form of bills introduced in both Houses. Senate Republicans, in caucus, have already agreed on the same legislation in a move which would embarrass the Administration, and indications are the fight for increased benefits will be continued.

Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the House Veterans Committee, called the Tuesday hearing and announced that representatives of the Veterans' Administration, veterans' organizations and members of both Houses would be heard.

"There are some injustices in the present law that can not be cured by regulation," Mr. Rankin said. "Besides, it will be much better for all concerned to have veterans' legislation come through the regular legislation channels than to have it tacked on as riders in the Senate."

Other champions of World War veterans, including Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, predicted substantial legislation favoring veterans. Momentum behind this shift in Congressional sentiment was first reported to President Roosevelt Wednesday by Senators Joseph Robinson, of Arkansas, and James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina.

After this conference belief was widespread the Administration would capitulate on veterans' legislation. Whether present sentiment, which Majority Leader Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, yesterday freely said favored modifications, could be kept within the President's action constituted the problem.

Haddon, Freed at King's Wish, Told to Forget Kinship Claim

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—Clarence Guy Gordon Haddon pleaded guilty to a charge of menacing King George, whose nephew he claims to be, and then went his way today, promising to put the "maggot" of his alleged grievances aside.

The 43-year-old unemployed engineer was placed under two sureties of £100 each to keep the peace for three years, and upon his honor, by Justice Charles of the famous Old Bailey Court, to abandon the belief—"this maggot preying on your mind," the court called it—that he is the illegitimate son of the Duke of Clarence, the monarch's late elder brother.

The justice told Haddon "the person against whom these intolerable threats were made has, through the attorney general, expressed a desire to be in no way vindictive."

He left Haddon with some fatherly advice to comply with the court's order, saying:

"You are man enough to do it. If you let that maggot remain in your brain, there will only be one dismal end, I am sure."

One of those signing the sureties was a woman who Haddon's counsel asked be undisclosed.

Haddon promised to abstain in the future from making any statement that he is the son of the Duke of Clarence and to refrain from causing or encouraging any other person to make a like statement.

He was accused of writing letters to the king demanding money and threatening to publish widely, through various means, the details of the alleged kinship.

District Liquor Bill Goes Today To Roosevelt

does not meet the requirements of the U. S. Pharmacopeia. The bill as passed by the House forbade sale of so-called blended whiskies. Mr. O'Connor described such liquor as "rotten, blended stuff." The change, he said, had been won by the lobbyists for the druggists.

He criticized what he said was Mr. Bride's "extreme interest in the druggists" and added that Mr. Bride had approached him in a corridor earlier in the day.

"Isn't it true that Mr. Bride was walking through the corridor with me and the gentleman from New York started to talk to me?" asked Mrs. Norton. Mr. O'Connor apparently accepted Mrs. Norton's description of the incident.

Insurance Profits Attacked.

The provision requiring applicants for licenses to file performance bonds backed by surety corporations recognized by the United States Treasury was criticized by Mr. O'Connor. The Commissioners recommended that requirement. The House struck it out. Mr. Bride worked to have it put back in. He and the Commissioners wanted the surety companies to act as extra-official investigators of applicants as an additional safeguard. The Senate put the provision in.

Surety companies will enjoy the monopoly thus given them to reap rich profits, Mr. O'Connor said. They already have decided to charge $20 for a bond of $1,000, which is twice the ordinary charge, he said.

Representative O'Connor made no effort to have the conference report disapproved. Others who disagreed with some of the provisions of the bill also accepted the report without debate.

$99,617 Asked Here For Liquor Control

A request for $99,617 was sent yesterday to the Budget Bureau by the District Commissioners to finance operations of the liquor control board during the current fiscal year and the fiscal year 1935.

Of this sum, $86,824 is for salaries of the three liquor commissioners and their staff, and $12,793 is for the salaries of three new assistants to the Corporation Counsel. The Commissioners yesterday decided to fix the pay of inspectors at $2,600, which is $600 above their original figure.

The salary figures sent to the Budget Bureau were based on the 15 per cent pay cut for the present fiscal year and a 10 per cent pay cut for 1935.

California Asks 170 Millions For Rivers Plan

Sponsors Predict 2 Streams Will Pay for Work; Expect 25,000 Jobs.

Sacramento (AP).—Making the flood waters of California's two largest rivers eventually pay for a $170,000,000 development is the plan lying behind the Central Valley water project, for which applications for Federal loans and grants have been filed.

The undertaking has five main objectives:

Flood control.

Generation of power.

Extension of navigation on the two streams, the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers.

Checking the intrusion of tidal salt water into agricultural and manufacturing areas.

Impounding of fresh water for agricultural and manufacturing use.

The many-phased project involves the building of several large dams, hydroelectric power plants, many miles of transmission lines and distributing systems and large stretches of canals and conduits.

25,000 Jobs Foreseen.

Its sponsors, headed by Gov. James Rolph, jr., stated jobs for 11,000 to 18,000 men would be provided the first year of construction; that, before completion, work would have been supplied for 25,000.

At Kennett in the upper Sacramento River canyon a 420-foot-high dam would create a reservoir storing 3,000,000 acre-feet of water and yielding 275,000 kilovolt amperes of electricity. A secondary dam at Keswick would provide 50,000 kilovolts more.

A 252-foot-high dam across the San Joaquin near Fresno would store 400,000 acre-feet of water capable of generating 30,000 additional kilovolts.

Power Distribution.

The plan approved by the State's voters at a referendum election contemplates building of more than 220 miles of transmission lines and creation of a central power distribution system. Agencies of the State would have preferential rights to the acquisition and use of the power.

By maintaining a uniform flow of water in the two streams, the destructive run-off in rainy seasons would be curbed, it is claimed. In dry seasons sufficient water would be released to keep the salt water out of the rich delta agricultural areas and the manufacturing sections along Suisuin Bay and Carquinez Straits.

Water for Industries.

The impounded water, State Engineer Edward Hyatt declares, will save from impending ruin, because of depletion of underground storage water, 400,000 acres of highly developed crop lands in the San Joaquin Valley; save from salt 400,000 acres of land in the delta areas, with an annual crop value of $30,000,000, and keep about 2,000,000 acres in other parts of the State from reverting to desert.

Fresh water is necessary, he states, to relieve seriously handicapped industries in the upper San Francisco Bay area with an annual output of products worth $112,000,000 and an annual pay roll of $13,000,000.

A network of canals and conduits would be constructed to transfer water to widely separated districts where a deficiency exists.

Eventually, the project contemplates reversing the flow of a portion of the San Joaquin River and, by a series of pumping stations and locks, conveying 3,000 cubic feet of water south instead of north in the river's own channel.

Nazi "Influence" Trial Disrupted

Judge Quells Argument; Witness Threatened.

Los Angeles, Jan. 19 (AP).—Disturbance flared anew today in the trial of charges that the German-American Alliance here is rominated by Nazi influence.

Superior Judge Guy F. Bush, who stopped the trial yesterday and had everyone in the courtroom photographed after anonymous threats had been made against his life, rushed into the corridor today to quell a heated argument between a witness and two unidentified men.

Capt. John H. Schmidt, the witness, told Judge Bush the men had threatened hi slife.

Spineless

That's What Snell Calls House Democrats.

House Democrats were told yesterday by Republican Leader Snell—and they took it—that they constituted the "most spineless majority, the least thinking for yourself majority, of any majority there ever has been in the House," the Associated Press reported.

The Democratic leader, Representative Byrns, had just obtained consent of the House to meet at 11 a. m. today to consider the President's gold devaluation bill.

veneered forms of selling political influence, it would encounter no objection from the Administration.

Drive Will Continue.

President Roosevelt is still wearing the frown which he directed several days ago at National committeemen who claim to have backdoor influence in Washington. There is no doubt but that Mr. Roosevelt is out to drive the political money changers from the National Capital.

There is, however, no loss of faith at the White House in Postmaster General Farley, and his contemplated retirement as chairman of the Democratic National Committee arises in a different way.

He is devoting probably 90 per cent of his time to political matters because he is not only chairman of the National committee but of the New York State Democratic Committee. His office is filled all day long with political job hunters. They follow him to his hotel at night.

He is waylaid at every train stop when he goes out of town. As reported in The Post yesterday, his intimate friends know that he wished to free himself of this burden and concentrate on conducting the Postoffice Department, one of the biggest business institutions in the world. It is operating at a deficit and administrative duties call for more time than Mr. Farley has been able to give.

Norris Raises Question.

Senator George Norris, Nebraska Republican, has also raised the question of the propriety of such a Cabinet officer holding an important political post. Norris, who recently urged Mr. Farley to give up one job or the other, said yesterday that the Postmaster Generalship was the "worst place" for a party officer since the postoffice employes thousands of workers and lets contracts running into millions of dollars.

In some Administration quarters it is also felt, without the slightest reflection on Mr. Farley, that it it not a good thing for a man to combine the two offices.

Signs of a general sweeping out extended to the Civil Works Administration where Administrator Harry Hopkins dismissed C. E. Myers, of Philadelphia, as chief engineer of GWA in Pennsylvania. It was charged that he had approved a project for which he received a fee as a consulting engineer. Information has been turned over to the Department of Justice, Mr. Hopkins said.

Chairman Ashurst of the Senate Judiciary Committee, acted without waiting for a regular meeting of his committee to set machinery in motion for the Vandenberg anti-racketeering bill. He named a subcommittee consisting of Senator King of Utah, chairman; Senator McCarran of Nevada, and Senator Norris. Senator King announced he would call his sub-committee together today. He was uncertain whether hearings would be held.

Affords Plenty of Testimony.

Hearings on this measure would, if there was any attempt to go into evidence, develop one of the juiciest investigations in many years. The attitude of members on the subcommittee is favorable to drastic legislation.

Senator McCarran has been active in the Senate investigation of air-mail and ocean mail subsidies which have uncovered numerous specific instances of political racketeering. Senator Norris' presence on the committee is an influence in behalf of the most aggressive treatment of the situation.

That there will be no disposition to lay this subject on ice is also apparent from the attitude of Senator Ashurst, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who wil lhave charge of the legislation on the Senate floor.

"It is a sad commentary," he said, "that such legislation is necessary, but it is. Common decency and fairness and an exalted sense of propriety should be sufficient to keep party committeemen from practicing before departments of the Government."

Asked if he had seen much evidence of political lobbying around Washington, Senator Ashurst was obliged to fall back on Milton for language adequate to express himself.

"Lobbyists Are Thick."

"Yes," he said, "the lobbyists in Washington are thicker than the leaves that strew the brooks of Vallombrosa."

There was a visible increase around Congress in the desire for action after it became known that President Roosevelt would not be sorry to see a clean sweep made, and the broader the better, even to the point of including members of Congress and Government officers who resign to go into private practice here.

This would strike a heavy blow at one of Washington's most thriving industries. The law now forbids former internal revenue employes from practicing before the bureau within two years after leaving government service. An extension of this principle to other Government departments would help. But some voice the thought that in addition to legislation, an improved sense of ethics is equally important if any real cleanup of conditions is to last.

Washington has seen a drive on lobbyists in almost every administration. Herbert Hoover swung the White House club at what he called the "locust swarm" but these crusades soon wear off and after those under fire have had vacations in Europe they soon come back to work.

Dozens of instances are being bandied about in Washington gossip. Some hint at vicious transactions. Mostly, however, they deal with the easy way in which citizens having business at stake in Washington are duped by the idea that they must have inside pull to get action.

Some Sharp Practices.

One lawyer drew a fee several times what he had expected for speeding up a tax case for a client. He ascertained the papers were in order and only awaited a routine signature. Two telephone calls to a friend in the bureau resulted in his client's papers being taken from the bottom of the pile. They were placed near the top and consequently were signed within a few days.

Another famous case is that of a man who wished certain information from one of the Government departments. He could have had it by writing or calling for it himself, as it was a matter of public record. But he hired a lawyer. After the lawyer left, the Government official who had given him the data said cynically to a friend: "Now that lawyer probably will go back and ask a $5,000 fee, claiming he had to give me $4,000 of it to get the information."

Not all of the legal business in Washington is of this nature, by any means, and Government departments are full of complicated cases which only a thoroughly competent lawyer is able to handle satisfactorily for a client.

Because there is such a wide variety of work, ranging from the most legitimate legal work to the virtually fraudulent collection of fees for services of no real value, listing of names of lawyers here who formerly held political office would work injustice unless it were known exactly what kind of cases they were handling.

Another question which has come up for undercover discussion is that of Senators and Representatives handling law work on the side. Probably two-thirds or more of the members of both houses are lawyers and followed the law for years before entering public life.

Law Insures Future.

Many of them seek to hold their law practices against the time when their constituents might decide to dispense with their services at Washington. As a result many of them handle law cases back home during recesses of Congress.

Those in the Administration who have given thought to the matter feel that if the Government is not involved in a case, such as an equity suit, it is entirely proper for a Senator or Representative to act as counsel.

On the question of extending political favors, it is felt in some Administration quarters that Senators and Representatives should refrain from any such which involve financial reward. It is accepted as part of the political system of the country that legislators will extend political favors in the hope of being reelected or, in other words, receiving political reward, and, so long as no direct financial reward is involved there is no disposition here to raise a question.

commander of the Cuban army and a center of political developments that led to Mendieta's assumption of power yesterday, prepared to take over the duties of secretary of war and the navy.

Col. Batista who was accused of being a "military dictator" publicly announced that henceforth the military will be subordinated to civil authorities.

Mendieta himself speeded up the task of completing his cabinet with the appointment of Felix Granados, a member of the ABC political society and a newspaperman, to be secretary of the interior.

Palace circles buzzed with reports of cabinet appointments. Well-informed persons agreed that Cosme de la Torriente would be appointed secretary of state and that Manuel Marquez Sterling was slated to be ambassador to Washington.

Strike Continues.

A strike involving doctors, nurses, chemists, pharmacists and veterinarians continued in force throughout the island.

All hospitals, drug stores and laboratories were shut down, but a small emergency force of surgeons was maintained at the University Hospital here "to take care only of cases of life and death."

The strike also affected slaughter houses throughout Cuba as veterinarians refused to certify to the health of animals and sanitary authorities were not permitted to kill the animals. Fresh meat therefore could not be obtained in Havana and other cities.

Several leading members of the Spanish colony called at the presidential palace today. Afterward, it was learned from a reliable source that Mendieta instructed the Labor Department to "delay the enforcement of the 50 per cent law until the matter can be thoroughly studied."

The measure provided that 50 per cent of all employes in firms throughout the island be Cubans.

CWA Jobs End Feb. 15; Can't Meet Pay Rolls

ruary 15 in the South and working North with the planting season.

Beginning February 15, 1,000,000 workers will be laid off every two weeks, he said, or the May 1 date never will be reached.

Hopkins revealed that when the program started, he anticipated a weekly pay average of $12 per worker. With the enlistment of common labor in the early part of the program, it stayed at this figure for several weeks, and then began to rise as skilled workers at higher wages were added.

Last week, the average wage was $14.37. The difference of more than $2 per person on a pay roll totaling over 4,000,000 shot expenses more than $8,000,000 weekly above estimates, and threatened the Treasury.

Ban on Purchases Ordered.

Only by the drastic reduction in hours can February 10 be reached, Hopkins indicated. To effect further economies, he ordered State directors to refrain from purchase of new materials and equipment without specific confirmation from him. The reduction to 15 hours weekly in rural areas rescinded his order of last week, which allowed 15-hour weeks in those areas by doubling the forces and halving hours. The reduction yesterday also put an end to hiring new CWA help.

Hopkins indicated he had somewhere around $200,000,000 left out of the $400,000,000 granted by the Public Works Administration, and $100,000,000 from the emergency relief fund.

One of the first protests to be received came from the executive committee of the United States Conference of Mayors, which termed the reduction order "the first blow against 4,000,000 people who have been given work at regular wages.

Meanwhile, on the Hill, Senator Dill asserted the CWA program not only would have to be continued, but would have to be enlarged. He declared the project should be made permanent, with greater inheritance taxes to foot the bill.

19,000 Lose $50,000 Weekly.

Curtailment of the program in the District will cost the 19,000 workers here about $50,000 weekly, and officials wondered if men would not have to be laid off in some cases. It was not certain last night whether the number of workers here would have to be cut.

Hopkins explained that his order restricting purchase of materials and equipment was designed to centralize authority in Washington. He emphasized that if any proposed purchase is found to be worthy, it will be approved.

Reduction of the program was termed by the administrator to be caused solely by need for economy and was not related to complaints about CWA wages being too high. He said he expected the President would move to provide new funds.

Artist Fisher, 'American Girl' Creator, Dies

Ill 4 Months; Bachelor, "Knew Too Much of Pretty Women."

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Harrison Fisher, whose beautiful American girls have smiled from magazine covers for more than 25 years, is dead.

He died unexpectedly in Doctors Hospital today after an emergency operation last night. He had been ill for four months, and was rushed to the hospital yesterday for the operation. The cause of death was not disclosed.

Fisher once said he decided the American girl was hte most beautiful of all when he watched them pass as he played in the yard of the house in Brooklyn where he was born, 57 years ago.

"First Blood" at 16.

After years of travel and education in England and France, he said he was sure of it, and begun drawing them.

He studied art under his father, Hugo A. Fisher, an artist, and perfected his work at the Mark Hopkins Institute in San Francisco.

The first of his sketches appeared in a San Francisco paper when Fisher was only 16 years old.

When he began to build a reputation as an illustrator of books and magazines in New York a few years later his mail box was full of letters from stenographers and society women, all begging for the honor of being the model for one of his magazine covers.

"That's why I've married," he once said, "I've seen too much of beautiful women."

Twenty-five years ago he signed a contract with a magazine for a cover every month, and he never missed one. He was even ahead of schedule, so even after her creator's death, Fisher's "American Girl" will be smiling on magazine covers.

He was proficient in other fields besides illustration. In 1908 he began working in oils and had completed many portraits and etchings.

Illustrated Many Books.

In addition to his magazine covers, he illustrated numerous books and did the drawings for short stories in a host of magazines.

Fisher always desired privacy. The only member of Fisher's immediate family surviving him is his brother, Hugo Fisher, who lives in Paris.

Drive for Full Pay in Lower Rates Begins

Immediate Action Is Plan in Senate for All Up to $1,800.

sent Senator Byrnes and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, to the White House Thursday, it was said.

Nye Sees Enough Votes.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, said yesterday the pay cut opponents had sufficient votes to override a possible Presidential veto. Senator Arthur Robinson (Republican), Indiana, said only the influence of the President could keep the vote down and stop a Democratic stampede. The Republicans have made pay restoration and modification of the economy cuts and restrictions on veterans a major part of their program.

Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, Republican leader, is not loquacious on the subject, but he favors restoration and sees a good prospect for victory.

Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, wants the full 15 per cent restored forthwith.

"Conditions throughout the country and the increasing cost of living make restoration necessary and just," Senator McCarran said. "I very much concur in the statements and arguments presented before the appropriations subcommittee by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor."

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, predicted at least a part of the cut would be restored immediately for the low-paid Government workers.

"I know of one young woman whose pay was reduced to $90 a month," he said. "She is caring for an ill brother and has been forced to take a job operating a switchboard at night to get enough for the necessities."

"I believe the Senate will make a partial restoration at once, certainly for those receiving less than $1,800 a year. The full amount will be restored July 1."

Robinson is Silent.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, refused to discuss the question with newspapermen. The program decided on will be announced later, he said.

Those planning to restore pay to normal sought to interpret the President's statement that he stood on his program. They contended the President could say little else without putting himself in a position where it might be difficult to pick and choose among the items he would accept.

It was pointed out at the White House that the President's program was based on the action of Congress which last spring said the cost of living should be the determining factor. Investigation had shown that compared with 1928, living costs now were minus 21 and pay had been reduced only 15 per cent, the maximum fixed in the law.

Nonetheless, it was reported in the Senate that the President would accept what Congress decided on salaries.

Tied to Veterans' Payments.

Salaries are closely tied up with payments to veterans. Many of the most ardent salary restorationists also are determined advocates of increased benefits to veterans. The President's action in increasing pensions and allowances to veterans was said to be recognition of this and an effort on the part of the Chief Executive to stop the salary restoration drive from accumulating veterans' increases like a snowball rolling down hill.

Should the Senate upset the President's pay cut program the House is in a mood to approve the action, it was said by leaders there.

House members are put out because of the reported yielding on the part of the President to the demands of the Senators.

"Many members feel the President has left them holding the bag," a prominent Democrat said. "He sent word he wanted his program put through and many voted for it against their will. Naturally they don't feel very good about it."

House Passes Appropriation For Interior

Bill Carries $2,047,710 for Four District Institutions.

The House yesterday passed the second of the big supply bills, the $31,128,504 Interior Department measure, increased only $30,000 over the total reported early this week by the House Appropriations Committee.

Slashed $19,350,767 under current appropriations, the bill as passed carried only minor amendments. Two offered by Representative Ross Collins (Democrat), Mississippi, and approved by the House, allotted $30,000 additional to the office of education.

The measure carried $2,047,710 for four local institutions—$1,064,961 for St. Elizabeths Hospital; $119,600 for Columbia Institution for the Deaf; $605,000 for Howard University and $258,150 for Freedmen's Hospital.

The huge cut in total appropriations was attributed to failure to provide for construction projects being financed through public works funds, including Boulder Dam, reclamation, National Park and Indian Service construction.

The measure follows the independent offices bill, passed last week by the House, to the Senate, where the Senate Appropriations Committee soon will order hearings.

Foes of Gold Devaluation Launch Three-Way Attack

the Treasury," Mr. Owen asserted. "I would sooner he have it than the New York bankers." Senator Glass did not retort.

Warren to Testify Today.

The hearings will be resumed at 10:30 a. m. today, when Prof. George Warren, Prof. James Harvey Rogers, James P. Warburg and other witnesses will be heard both in behalf of and against the measure. It is hoped to complete hearings by the Senate committee today.

Earlier in the day House Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns announced that the Treasury wanted the bill passed by Tuesday. He said the House would meet at 11 a. m. today and remain in session until a final vote is taken. But a final vote in the Senate by Tuesday is apparently impossible. The bill may not be reported from committee until Tuesday.

Haste in passing the bill was "imperative," it was contended, due to the strengthening of the dollar in foreign exchange. Chairman Andrew L. Somers of the House Coinage Committee, after visiting the White House revealed that his committee would propose an amendment to the bill keeping the operation of the stabilization fund secret for three years, when a report would be made to Congress.

Snell Decries Haste.

Although the object of this amendment appeared to be an effort at secrecy, the official White House view was that it would act as an unspecified limitation on the life of the stabilization fund. If on receiving the report three years hence Congress wished to abolish the fund it could do so, the White House explained.

Meanwhile, Republican Floor Leader Bertram Snell assailed the way the gold bill is being "railroaded" through the House. He characterized the Democrats as "the most spineless and lacking in ability majority I have seen since I came here."

"Here is the most important measure in 50 years to come before the House, and under the present leadership we are forced to act on it without due consideration," he asserted, adding he did not think more than 10 per cent of the membership knew what the measure provided.

Senator Glass inserted into the Congressional Record a memorandum citing the two Supreme Court decisions which pointed out that the fixing of compensation for property seized by the Government was a judicial and not a legislative function. The bill would pay the Federal Reserve banks for their gold with gold certificates with a dollar value equivalent to $20.67 an ounce for gold.

Hastings Joins Glass.

Conceding that the Attorney General's failure to cite these Supreme Court rulings might have been "inadvertent," Senator Glass pointed out that Mr. Cummings had referred to the case of the Monongahela Navigation Co. versus the United States, but had omitted the "very vital" part relating to the fixing of compensation.

The Virginian also cited the decision in the case of the United States versus New River Collieries, which likewise held that no other department of Government except the judicial could fix the compensation for seized property.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, a former jurist, later in the day issued a statement questioning the constitutionality of the bill, pointing out that while Congress may determine what property is needed for public use it "can not itself fix the compensation that shall be paid." If the act is later held unconstitutional, it would cause "more distress and more confusion than this country has ever witnessed in peace time," Senator Hastings warned.

Gov. Young expressed his views to the Senate committee in a calm, quiet manner, almost indifferent. At the outset he said he recognized the Government had been in the process of devaluating the dollar since April 18, and that he would argue the question of devaluation.

"Irredeemable Currency."

The pending bill he termed "helpful in stabilizing to a degree our currency." He thought it would be "helpful to stabilize between 50 and 60 per cent if it stopped there." He was not sure, however, that under the bill "it would stop there." He pointed out the bill committed the Nation "permanently to an irredeemable currency." He was opposed to that, believing that after a temporarily specified period currency should be redeemed in gold.

Asked why, the former governor of the Reserve Board said he "assumed that some day we will go back to the free movement of gold." He also expressed opposition to the unlimited power given the Secretary of the Treasury. While this authority did not nullify the open market section of the reserve act, he added, it gave similar powers to the Treasury. The result might be a conflict of policies.

He upheld views recited yesterday by Gov. Eugene R. Black of the Federal Reserve Board, adding that while the profits on the enhanced value of gold should go to the Government it would be better to take this profit through a franchise tax, leaving the gold with the reserve banks. He pointed out there would be an increase in excess reserves as the Treasury spends the profit. Later he agreed with views expressed by Mr. Anderson.

Profit Idea Questioned.

Senator Alben Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, argued that the primary purpose of the bill was not to make a profit on the Federal reserve gold but to get it into the Treasury for all time. Gov. Young asked: "Am I to understand this means a Government central bank and abolition of the Federal Reserve banks?" Senator Barkley said "no."

Pursuing this aspect of the matter, Senator Hamilton Kean (Republican), of New Jersey, wanted to know what would be left to the reserve banks after passage of the act. Gov. Young said "that is the inquiry I made after reading the bill." He said there was no limit as to what the Secretary of the Treasury could do with the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. He supposed the reserve system would "just settle down to being a machine." He thought the regional system of banks far better than a central bank.

Under demands to illustrate his point, Gov. Young cited the possibility of the reserve system deciding to sell Government bonds at this time. Under the bill, he said, the Secretary of Treasury could nullify the effect of such action. But in that case, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, argued the Government should be the dominating factor.

Fate of Federal Reserve.

During the colloquy which ensued Senator Glass contended the Reserve System had been made "a football of the Treasury." He said the only way the actions of the Treasury Secretary could be predicted was on the basis of what he had done and he pointed out that the funds of the Deposit Insurance Corporation now are being used to stablize the price of Government bonds.

Governor Young said that stabilization of the dollar could be achieved only through agreement with Great Britain, France and other countries and therefore he doubted the wisdom of "tying your hands at 60 per cent." He added, however, he was not an expert on that phase of the matter and did not know whether revaluation should take place at 60 or 65 per cent or some other figure.

Former Senator Owen's testimony was in the form of a speech to the committee reviewing recent financial developments and in pointing out the right and duty of Congress to regulate the value of money. He thought the Treasury should take over all gold in the country and expressed disappointment in the operation of the Reserve System.

Coughlin Creates Flurry.

As he talked in stentorian tones, Father Charles E. Coughlin, the Detroit radio priest who has advocated currency inflation, entered the room and the spectators lost all interest in Mr. Owen, craning their necks to see the clergyman. The photographers quickly deserted their posts at the committee table and swarmed around Father Coughlin.

Mr. Owen thought the bill offered the first real opportunity ever presented for stabilizing the purchasing power of the dollar. He saw no reason for any time limits on any of the provisions, adding, on the contrary, that "it would be a terrible thing if the Government should be limited in the power to protect the purchasing power of its currency."

Mr. Anderson said although he believed in "a full gold standard," he did not come to protest against the bill, but to suggest changes so it would accomplish its designed purpose and to prevent "terrible harm from being done."

He said his points might be technical but they represented "the difference between blowing the country sky-high and allowing the Government to hold on to the coming inflation." He reviewed the expansion of excess reserves during the 1922 and 1928 period and undertook to point out how this development brought on inflated values and finally the depression.

"Defect" in Reserves.

Although excess reserves increased only $578,000,000 in the 1922-28 period, credit expanded $13,500,000,000, he explained. He argued that under the bill as drawn the $2,000,000,000 stabilization as spent would be added to the present excess reserves of $800,000,000. He called that "the most important defect in the bill."

"If the bill goes through in this form," he added, "not even the President can pull down the inflationary movement that will result."

His remedy to correct this "defect" would be to permit the Reserve banks to keep all their gold, but pay over to the Treasury in the form of Government bonds they now own the equivalent of the enhanced value of the gold resulting from dollar devaluation. At the time of currency devaluation in France it was done this way, he explained.

He would have the Treasury obtain the $2,000,000,000 for its stabilization fund from the regular sources of its revenues, either from taxation or by borrowing. The bonds turned over by the Reserve banks, he said, could be resold. He urged the committee to get the view of Governor Young and others on this aspect of the matter.

Young Supplements Views.

Governor Young arose and expressed general agreement with Mr. Anderson's line of reasoning. He said that as soon as the Treasury started to spend its gold profits, the excess reserves would be increased by $4,000,000,000, the enhanced value of all the gold, based on a 50 per cent devaluation.

Mr. Anderson maintained that if the Government take its profit in Government bonds there would be no change in member bank reserves. The possibility remained, he explained that the Reserve banks would put out a larger volume of credit but only if the member banks discount commercial paper or if the Reserve banks buy acceptances or Government bonds.

Some of the Democratic members of the committee expressed sharp disagreement with Mr. Anderson's views, contending these excess reserves could be used to help the country back to recovery and to buy Government bonds which must be offered.

Mr. Anderson also argued the Treasury should not control credit policies because it is such a larger borrower of funds. He said the 50 to 60 per cent revaluation limit was "too wide a range to beget confidence," adding that the margin between 50 and 60 is "twice as great as between 90 and 100" when measured in proportional terms.

He will complete his testimony today.

combines and monopolies are fixing prices in this country for the American people," declared Senator Borah yesterday. "Nothing can dispose of the fact that many small firms are being driven out of business by the practices of combines and trusts. When those things are remedied, I will cease my efforts and not until then."

Resignation Rumor Revived.

There was a revival of the old rumor that Gen. Johnson, who has been described as "more of an evangelist than an administrator," would resign. There soon will be forthcoming an overhauling of a great many NRA codes. But the recovery administrator began this overhauling move himself and he has repeatedly and with characteristic vehemence denied any intention of leaving his job.

In his New York speech, however, he declared "I thank God that the strength of my official position here is that I am without political ambition, and am free to close the window, whistle to the dog and finally walk out the private door of my office any day that this kind of despicable thing (senatorial criticism) becomes too much for my self-respect to bear."

Meanwhile, another situation hung in the air. This was a senatorial proposal, which Gen. Johnson said he anticipated, to substitute the Federal Trade Commission for NRA. The commission, traditionally, is the agency which is supposed to protect "the little fellow" from the "big fellow."

"Rude Awakening" Foreseen for Johnson

Philadelphia, Jan. 19 (AP).—Spencer D. Baldwin, of Washington, president of the National Retail Lumber Dealers Association, said today that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson has a "rude awakening" in store if "he thinks prices can be cut, wages increased and hours reduced."

"We lumbermen have got to be allowed to make some money," Baldwin declared in an address at the convention of the Middle Atlantic Lumbermen's Association.

Baldwin criticized Gen. Johnson's speech in New York last night, and stated "you can't be nice in Washington these days," because "there is a 'tough baby' in charge down there and you have to fight fire with fire."

Gunmen Lose All-Day Battle

Posse of 250 Wins Fight in Woods With Fugitives After Bank Robbery.

Quinck, Ill., Jan. 19 (AP).—Four of of five men accused of robbing the State Bank of Girard of $2,000 surrendered after a spirited gun battle with a huge posse that trapped them in a woody near Basco, Ill., tonight.

Shortly after the four surrenhorseback about a mile from the dered, the fifth fugitive was caught on horseback about a mile from the scene of the gun battle. All were rushed to jail at Carthage. The arrests climaxed a gun battle as darkness fell. A posse of 250—sheriffs from four counties, State police from Bissouri and Illinois, Quincy police, and hurriedly deputized farmers—fired volley after volley into the woods in answer to fire from the trapped men.

Virginian Is Found Hanged in Quebec

Montreal, Jan. 19 (AP).—The body of Harry Walker, 41, cashier of Canadian Indutries, Ltd., and native of Virginia, was found today hanged by a rope to a tree near his home at Beaurepaire, Quebec, a few miles from here. Passengers on a passing train saw the body and notified police. An inquest will be held.

20 Children Rescued As Bus Catches Fire

New York, Jan. 19 (U.P.).—Twenty ill and crippled children had a narrow escape when a bus in which they were riding caught fire after colliding with a passenger car today. Three of the children, suffering from lacerations and bruises, were removed to a hospital.

Britain Studies Issue Of Women Diplomats

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—The question of admitting women to the British consular and diplomatic service will be studied by a special committee appointed today by Sir John Simon, British foreign minister.

Advocates of the proposal pointed out that the United States, Bulgaria and Soviet Russia have several women dimplomats.

Moyers, of Dayton, Va., as supply preacher in charge of the Mount Solon circuit, succeeding the late Rev. N. C. Rice.

Mr. Moyers is a senior ministrial student at Bridgewater College. The appointment was made by Bishop William F. McMurry, of Fayette, Mo.

Rabbits to Be Put In Allegany County

Restocking Contracted by Wills Creek Club.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.). The Wills Creek Rod and Gun Club has contracted delivering rabbits for stocking in Allegany County, although the Maryland Conservation Commission has put a ban on them following a request by the State Department of Health because of deaths from tularemia.

The Allegany County Game and Fish Commission also expects to import rabbits for propagation. There is no ban on organizations or private individuals in this connection.

State game wardens and sportsmen at a meeting in the city hall drafted plans for legislative sanction to have the hunting season moved up to November 1 instead of November 15. Dr. Edward Harris, Joseph Hughes, State game warden from West Virginia; Harry R. Kenney, district deputy game warden, and Joseph Minke, secretary of the meeting, spoke. Meetings are to be held throughout this county and in Garrett County.

Charles Town Kiwanis Hears Fishery Expert

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—"The United States Bureau of Fisheries" was the subject of a talk by F. F. Fish, associate biologist of the bureau, before the Kiwanis Club here last night at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel.

Mr. Fish will remain in Charles Town until March, conducting research experiments at the fish hatcheries in Leetown, near here.

Capital Men Will Speak Today Before Virginia College Club

Dr. Thomas, Dr. Reid and Prof. Alley on Program at Fredericksburg.

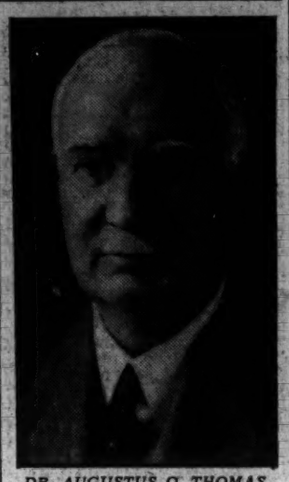
Fredericksbug, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). The first session of the International Institute, sponsored by the International Relations Club of Fredericksburg State Teachers' College, was opened at 2:45 p. m. today by Prof. Oscar H. Darter, of the faculty.

Representatives from every college in Virginia were welcomed by Miss Rosalyn Moore, president of the club. "Interdependence," a motion picture illustrating the dependence of individuals, committees and nations upon one another, then was shown.

The significance of foreign policy in the welfare of the individual nation was brought out by Stanley K. Hornback, chief of the division of Far Eastern Affairs of the State Department, in the featuring address of the second session, this evening.

Mr. Hornbeck emphasized the threatening significance of Japanese development in the Orient, pointing out the respects in which foreign policies of the nations involved may influence future developments of the world's looming Oriental problem. Following Mr. Hornbeck's address there was an open forum.

At the first session tomorrow morning Dr. Augustus O. Thomas, secretary-general of the World Federation of Educational Associations, in Washington, will speak on "Education in the Present Crisis and Its World Significance." Dr. William A. Reid, foreign trade adviser of the Pan-American Union, will speak at 2 p. m. on "The Inter-American Situation Today."



DR. AUGUSTUS O. THOMAS.

The key address of the institute will be tomorrow night by Prof. Alden G. Alley, representative of the National Council for the Prevention of War, who will explain "What Is Happening in Europe and What It Means to America."

Hiner Tax Bill Passes; To Get Test in Court

West Virginia House Sends Disputed Measure to Governor.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Moving swiftly in a crowded session, the West Virginia House of Delegates today accepted a score of amendments to Speaker Hiner's tax collection plan made by the Senate, and gave final legislative approval to the administration's third effort to collect property taxes under the Constitution's tax levy limiting amendment.

The Senate amendments were accepted without question. Leaders plan to send the measure immediately to the Supreme Court for a test of its constitutionality. Gov. Kump had urged its passage, and promised approval.

The measure is a revision of the original tax plan voided last summer by the Supreme Court because it provided excess levies. As rewritten, it sets aside 30 per cent of the levies for debts, and provides excess levies if this percentage is insufficient to meet any local requirements.

Milk Bill Killed.

By a vote of 15 to 13, the Senate today killed the controversial milk regulation bill.

The House approved the drug store whisky bill and sent it to the Senate. Under the bill, whisky may be purchased on "certificates," instead of prescriptions, and the tax is reduced from 50 to 20 cents. a pint.

The Senate had a brief inning today with its so-called Washington plan for reapportionment of members in the National House of Representatives. Drawn by a Senate committee, the plan was recommended for immediate passage and shoved into position for a vote. The House has a plan of its own, increasing representation of six industrial counties and cutting that of eight rural counties.

Relief Inquiry Started.

A special committee of three was named by the House to investigate complaints against relief administration in Braxton and Jackson Counties.

Final approval was given by the House to a bill authorizing the City of Wheeling to borrow Federal funds for improving the Wheeling Center Market. A swimming pool project was eliminated.

The House pased a bill creating a housing authority for slum clearance.

The Senate passed and sent to the House a new Huntington city charter, substituting a mayor and council of 13 members for the present mayor, two commissioners and a citizens' board of 21 members.

Weston Cadet Named West Point Editor

Weston, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—George E. White, jr., of Weston, was named editor of the Pointer, semiweekly publication of the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. He will assume the editorial chair at the beginning of the next scholastic year.

White is a son of former State Senator George E. White, also formerly a newspaper editor, now connected with the West Virginia State Highway Department.

In Tribute

Sen. Wickham Honors His "Greatest American."

Richmond, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—To those who knew him closely, Gen. Robert E. Lee will ever remain a heoric figure.

Today in the General Assembly, Senator Henry T. Wickham, Ashland, drew tears from his auditors as he paid tribute to the great soldier-statesman-educator.

A student at Washington and Lee while the Confederate commander was president, the 80-year-old Senator declared: "Gen. Lee was a father to all the students. We worshiped the ground he walked on.

"He was the greatest man America ever produced."

Gray Veterans Guests at Lee Birthday Fete

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). William H. Fletcher, 93, oldest Confederate veteran in Loudoun County, and one of the three survivors of the Southern Army in this county, was an honor guest today at the dinner given by Loudoun Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, in commemoration of the 127th anniversary of the birth of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Mr. Fletcher, who now lives with his son, Arthur Fletcher, at Round Hill, enlisted in the Army in 1857 at the age 16, four years before the Civil War, and served for its duration. During the Civil War he served two years in White's Battalion, Thirty-fifth Virginia Cavalry, and two years with Mosby's Rangers.

Col. Magnus S. Thompson, 87, of Leesburg, and Dr. J. E. Copeland, 88, of Round Hill, also were honor guests. Col. Thompson was born at Stephens Depot, Frederick County, and enlisted in the Confederate Army at the age of 14. He served as a courier for Stonewall Jackson at the first battle of Manassas and for A. P. Hill at the battle of Winchester. He joined the Independent Partisan Rangers in Loudoun County when it was formed and later served with Company C, White's Battalion, until the war ended.

Dr. Copeland was born at Hillsboro, Va., and enlisted in the Army while a boy. After the war he taught school, then studied medicine at Baltimore University. Dr. Copeland, a Mason for 67 years, ranks among the oldest Masons of the State.

The dinner exercises were in charge of Mrs. Magnus S. Thompson, president of the local chapter. Commonwealth's Attorney John Galleher was the principal speaker. Bruce McIntosh, commander of Clinton Hatcher Camp, S. C. V., also spoke. Col. Thompson read Lee's farewell address to the Army. Mrs. Charles Norris presided at the piano for the singing of Southern airs.

Program at Culpeper.

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Mrs. Severn M. Nottingham, of Orange, State president of the Virginia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, was the principal speaker here today on the Lee-Jackson-Maury program, given by Culpeper Chapter, U. D. C., and the Hendrick Literary Society of the High School. Principal Robert R. Tolbert presided.

Mrs. Nottingham eulogized Gen. Lee and warned the students of untruths regarding the Civil War in Virginia textbooks. Miss Ann Watkins gave a sketch of Commodore Maury, "The Pathfinder of the Seas." Miss Nancy Green, also of the student society, gave a paper on "Gen. Stonewall Jackson." Mrs. Berkeley G. Calfee spoke on "Light Horse Harry Lee."

Old Southern songs were rendered by the School Glee Club with Miss Julia Baggett, pianist, and B. B. Shotwell, leader.

Holiday hours were observed in the banks and public buildings. Flags displayed in front of all places of business in honor of the Southern heroes.

Rites at Martinsburg.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Local United Daughters of the Confederacy observed the birthdays of Gen. Robert E. Lee and Gen. Stonewall Jackson in a joint service here tonight.

Music by a male quartet, readings, solos and a paper by Miss Mary Stribling, former president of the West Virginia division, U. D. C., constituted the program.

Legion Members Mount In District of Virginia

Winchester, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Capt. Edward C. Goss, Winchester, commander of the Seventh District, American Legion, Department of Virginia, has been slated for citation by the State Department of the Legion for the membership work conducted in his district.

This district led the State at the start of 1934. Robert Y. Conrad Post, Winchester, of which Capt. Goss is a member, passed the 100 mark in paid-up memberships.

Antipollution Fight Looming For Virginia

Gov. Peery Denies Eight Road Districts Will Be Abolished.

Richmond, Jan. 19 (Spl.).—A fight was brewing today on the antipollution bill recommended to the General Assembly by the governor's commission appointed to investigate conditions in the Hampton Roads area.

The revolutionary measure, proposing establishment of a permanent body to enforce regulations against stream pollution to safeguard seafoods, had the overwhelming support of members of the commission, but minority reports were submitted by two disagreeing members, Joseph C. Biggins, city manager of Newport News, and A. E. S. Stephens, of Isle of Wight County, chairman of the House of Delegates committee on the Chesapeake Bay.

From the lower peninsula communities came assertions that Capt. G. A. Massenburg, representing Elizabeth City County, would support the proposal if it comes before the House of Delegates committee on the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries. He is a member of this committee.

School Funds Urged.

Full influence of State officials and teachers will be placed behind Gov. Peery's recommendations that the General Assembly appropriate $2,000,000 more to public schools than was available for the present session, it was learned as the State Board of Education in session here announced its unqualified approval of the Governor's proposal.

Informed that his recommendation for an additional $1,000,000 in the highway gap-closing fund was being interpreted as portending a virtual abolition of eight highway construction districts into which the State is divided, Gov. Peery said this was not his intention.

"I think the construction districts will remain," he said. "Of course, the transfer of $1,000,000 from the highway funds for allocation to the gap fund will take a substantial portion of the fund which remains for allocation."

Ashton Dovell, House appropriations chairman, at the initial meeting of the committee, said he interpreted the governor's recommendation as virtual abolition of the eight districts.

Theater Tax Opposed.

Virginia motion picture theater owners meeting here to discuss Gov. Peery's recommendation that they be taxed 5 per cent on their gross receipts, or approximately $150,000 more a year than they now are taxed by the State, unanimously agreed that if any such tax is to be paid they will be forced to pass it straight on to the public in the form of higher admission prices.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Two prominent Virginians from this region are included in the score of names mentioned as candidates for the chairmanship of the State liquor control board.

W. Worth Smith, of Louisa, State Senator from this district and unsuccessful candidate for nomination against Gov. Peery last August, is not considered sufficiently "in with the powers that be" to win the position.

Also prominently mentioned is Edwin H. Gibson, of Culpeper, assistant State attorney general.

Farmers Oppose "Dog Law."

Berryville, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Clarke County board of supervisors has fallen in line with similar boards from Frederick and Shenandoah Counties to request that the Virginia Legislature enact a bill providing that dogs be confined from sunset to sunrise. The purpose of the measure, it is said, is to lessen sheep killing.

No sooner had the supervisors lined themselves up for the proposed dog legislation that a number of farmers in Clarke County expressed opposition to such a measure. The farmers claim that confining their dogs at night would weaken protection of chicken roosts and homes. They declare that all sheep killed by dogs are paid for by funds raised through taxation of the dogs.

The farmers received support for their arguments when it was shown by County Treasurer W. A. Bradford that dog owners paid $1,400 in taxes last year and sheep claims only amounted to $700. The State received 15 per cent, the game warden $270 and the balance was converted to another fund.

Beck Urged for Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Action of Gov. Peery in leaving open the position of State Commissioner of Agriculture has stirred local interest in behalf of C. Nelson Beck, of Charlottesville, president of the State Dairymans Association.

The board of the local chamber of commerce has indorsed him for the place, as have the individual members of the Albemarle board of supervisors. He is now acting secretary of the Virginia Farm Debt Adjustment Committee.

Sen. Rust Reports Tax Needs Change

Richmond, Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Real estate tax rates in political subdivisions throughout the State average $2.13, Senator John W. Rust, Fairfax, chairman of a joint legislative committee studying land levies, declared today.

He announced the committee would submit a report to the General Assembly next week. While he refused to reveal possible recommendations, he said taxes should be equalized to lift some of the burden from real estate owners.

Jordan Indorsed for Post.

Bedford, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—H. B. Jordan has been recommended for postmaster here by the Bedford Democratic committee.

Topsy, Just Persistent Pony, Wins Right to Study Printing

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—The proverbial "bull in the china shop" has been gone one better by Charles Town's "pony in the print shop."

Topsy, pet Shetland pony of Randolph Roderick, 11-year-old-son of R. H. Roderick, has won herself the right to roam at will through the composing room of the Spirit of Jefferson print shop and local newspaper office.

The animal has been fascinated by the clicking of linotype machines and the mysterious activities of shop workmen at the edge of her pasture, but efforts to gain admittance by means of gently knocking on the door with her forefoot proved unavailing.

Undismayed, Topsy watched the technique of opening the door as practiced by workmen she saw entering the establishment. After several weeks of observation, according to shop employes, the pony trotted up to the door, pressed the latch with her teeth and swung the door open. Her persistence not only gained admittance, but won the favor of the office staff to the point where her right to enter and leave at will is now unquestioned.

Two Jefferson Women Buried

Services for Mrs. Briscoe, Mrs. Crawford Held.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Mrs. Minnie G. Briscoe, former Jefferson County resident and member of the Bee Line Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was buried today in Edge Hill Cemetery. She died Wednesday at her home in Westminister, Md.

Services were also held for Mrs. Emma Shaull Crawford, 76, who died Wednesday at Summit Point, two weeks after the death of her husband. Rites were conducted by the Rev. W. D. Eye. She leaves one son, Fenton Crawford.

Simonds Speaks At Naval Academy

War College Chief Guest of Admiral Hart.

Annapolis, Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, commandant of the Army War College, addressed the senior class midshipmen at the Naval Academy tonight at their lecture assembly.

A salute of 13 guns was given Gen. Simonds and a company of Marines, and the Academy Band paraded. He was the dinner guest of Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent.

Clubs Cooperate For New Airport

2 Charles Town Groups Will Obtain Land.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Construction of a city airport as a Civil Works Administration project is planned by civic leaders here, with the Kiwanis and Lions Clubs underwriting the expense of the property.

An airport committee of members of these clubs and of the city council has been created to select and enter into negotiations for a suitable site. Jerry White heads the committee.

Acquisition of the airport site will be either through outright purchase or by a long-term lease. In either case, local merchant organizations will carry the expense and will reduce the unpaid balance by means of civic benefits and popular subscription.

Arthur Pittman Killed, District Pair Escape.

La Plata, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Arthur Pittman, of Welcome, Md., was killed here early today when an automobile in which he was riding with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Patterson, of Washington, overturned halfway up the hill leading to Chapel Point.

Patterson was driving, it was learned, and as he turned his wheel to the left, Pittman corrected him. The sudden shift to the right sent the closed automobile skidding on the gravel road until it overturned. Pittman's skull was fractured.

A coroner's inquest held the accident unavoidable.

John Strother Covington Is Buried at Culpeper

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). John Strother Covington was buried in the family section of Fairview Cemetery here following death from acute heart attack Wednesday.

In point of service the senior member of the Town Council, Mr. Covington was president of the Culpeper National Bank, dairyman, stock dealer and member of a distinguished Virginia family. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lillian Biggers Covington and two sisters, Mrs. C. H. Tinsley, of Culpeper, and Mrs. Thomas Lews, of Missiouri.

Dixie States Eulogize Lee And Jackson

Homage Paid Memory of Heroes in Rites on Anniversary.

Richmond, Jan. 19 (AP).—The South rode in the saddle with Robert Lee from Stratford to Appomattox and Lexington today and paid homage to his memory on the one hundred twenty-seventh birth anniversary of Dixie's chieftain.

Over the wide expanse that served as the battlefield for the Confederate armies, the Stars and Bars were unfurled again while school children, their parents and grandfathers united in a song of praise and devotion.

Students Honor Hero.

In the Carolinas students in public schools and colleges paused to praise the soldier. The Stars and Bars flew over the State capital at Raleigh. Lee's birthday was a holiday in Georgia where Sherman's march to the sea is still a poignant memory to a fast-thinning few. At Palm Beach, Fla., Mrs. John Eliot, whose mother, Julia Ward Howe, wrote "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," told her Southern friends that the love and respect in which Gen. Lee is held will "continue as long as America loves its heroes."

At New Orleans members of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity, formed at Washington College—now Washington and Lee University—where Lee was president after the war, made a pilgrimage to the monument at Lee Circle where wreaths were placed. War-torn Tennessee, that divided its fighting youth between Southern and Federal armies, was united in its praise of the gallant leader of a fallen cause.

U. D. C. Programs.

Throughout the South, chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy sponsored programs in memory of Lee and his right-hand man "Stonewall" Jackson, who died at Chancellorsville, shot down unwittingly by his own men. In Virginia there was praise to spare for Matthew F. Maury, "pathfinder of the seas."

There were exercises, too, at Stratford, the Lee estate on the Potomac River.

At Washington and Lee University, Lee's birthday was observed as Founder's Day. Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department of the University of North Carolina, was the speaker.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.), John W. Gladwell, of Bridgewater, 102-year-old Confederate veteran, walked to the Harrisonburg High School today to attend the Lee-Jackson memorial exercises held under auspices of the U. D. C.

Three other Confederate survivors of Rockingham County attended. They are D. N. Funkhouser, 90; J. D. Hillyard, 88, and J. W. Gangwer, 86. Ten county veterans were unable to attend.

Resignations Of 3 on CWA Board Refused

Spotsylvania Committee Is Urged to Stay Despite Labor Quarrel.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—George W. Guy, State reemployment director, today refused to accept the joint resignations of the three members of the Spotsylvania County reemployment committee tendered in person by two of the committeemen yesterday.

Insistence on the part of Miss Adele Clarke, State labor supervisor and former leader in the women's suffrage movement, that Scott G. Perry, one of the members, withdraw because his reputed opposition to organized labor made his affiliations with the Civil Works Administration, "undesirable both to the Virginia Federation of Labor and to George W. Guy," resulted in the joint resignation of Commonwealth's Attorney E. R. Carner, chairman; W. R. Linthicum, county agent, and Perry.

Lack of Unity Protested.

At a meeting of the unemployment committee to consider its enlargement Miss Clarke demanded the withdrawal of Perry, who already had agreed to the placement of organized labor representatives on the committee and asserted himself "not opposed to organized labor but not in sympathy with the disorganized kind around here."

The committee at that time approved the addition of W. Weeden, a member of the Sylvania Industrial Union here, and Mrs. L. R. Colbert to its membership.

Jack Byrnes, president of the Sylvania union, had sent affidavits to the Richmond office and to the American Federation of Labor office in Washington stating Perry to have said in answer to inquiries as to why Byrnes and Fred Johnson, also a union man, had not been given jobs: "We are not employing any union men whatever. It is a Federal Government order that no union men be hired under the Civil Works Administration. No men who are busy breaking up labor will be hired in Spotsylvania."

Miss Clarke Criticized.

Mr. Guy told Mr. Carner and Mr. Perry that he will inquire into the circumstances and that he hopes the original committee may be retained. When he heard affidavits had been sent to Washington, as well as Richmond, he sent Miss Clarke to investigate complaints in Spotsylvania. Mr. Guy stated Miss Clarke had no authority to ask Mr. Perry to get off the committee.

Perry contends that of the eight organized labor men registered in Spotsylvania reemployment rolls four have been hired.

The letter of resignation, signed by Perry, Linthicum and Carner, criticized Miss Clarke, saying "she is very obstinate and unreasonable in her views and demands," and she has been "very inconsiderate of our time and work, arguing for hours over matters that could have been settled in 15 minutes."

Women Making Survey Are Believed Agents.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Women making a survey in connection with improved sanitary conditions have had their duties made difficult, according to their supervisor, Arlie C. Phillips, by many persons who suspect the women of being agents trying to sell them something.

Three women have been conducting the survey, made for the combined Federal and State governments, under State sanitary laws.

Improvements recommended by them, if built, are to be made with the assistance of CWA funds.

Criminal Brain Idea Is False, Expert Avers

Man Who Made Study on Killer Zangara Urges More Research.

Baltimore, Jan. 19 (AP).—It is "a crime against civilazation that we fail to let any brain pass unexamined when it has done its life work," said Dr. Adolph Meyer, psychiatrist in chief of the Johns Hopkins Hospital and internationally known authority on brain research, today.

Dr. Meyer recently dissected and studied the brain of Giuseppe Zangara, the man who shot at President Roosevelt and fatally wounded Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago. The reluctance of many Americans to allow their own brains to undergo a similar post-mortem study is, said Dr. Meyer, "such a foolish idea."

"We have a great deal to learn about the brain and we can learn it only through the study of brains in connection with what we know about the life and the condition of the person at the time of death," he said.

All Types Needed.

All types are needed, he asserted—bishops, wrestlers, Senators, criminals, everybody.

"Occasionally one gets the brain of a criminal for study; but it takes an Arthur McDonald to ask that the brain and the whole persons of our responsible Senators and Congressmen become an object of study."

Dr. Meyer was asked what science expects to learn from the laboratory examination of the brain and what it already has learned.

"The public may first expect from science that it will strive to know consistent differences between the brilliant man and the dullard, the scholar and the professional wrestler," he answered. "It will strive to know whether the brain can show what has to be born; and how much the brain we are born with can be expected to develop by use as well as suffer from misuse and disease.

Necessary Organ.

Asked what the criminal brain shows, Dr. Meyer replied:

"There is no structure or center of crime. Crime belongs to the story of the life and its events; so do the varieties and motives of behavior. And yet we feel sure that the brain is the necessary organ and that even subtle changes will change its disposition, receptiveness and responsiveness and its responsibility.

"We should today decline the idea of a 'criminal brain.' There are some conditions that predispose, such as alcoholism and epilepsy. However, many men are kinder drunk than sober—but never wiser."

Moving Location of Fair Fredericksburg Topic

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Citizens of Caroline County have been urged to bring their opinions before a meeting of the supervisors, called for Monday by Chairman M. G. Broaddus, to consider the proposed transfer of the county fair buildings and establish parking grounds back of the courthouse.

A number of citizens have urged the board to purchase a new fair site. The present location may be used for automobiles.

County School In Winchester Limits Planned

Other Virginia Projects Display Activity in Week.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Frederick County will erect a large public school within the corporate limits of Winchester, W. Earle Edwards, civil works administrator, has announced following approval of a CWA application for funds for the project.

Preparations for building will cost $10,948 and will employ 78 men. The county school board will erect a six or eight room grade school to accommodate pupils from Stonewall, Shawnee, Gainesboro and Back Creek districts.

The $10,948 will be spent on grading the grounds, laying off an athletic field, construction of a loop driveway, installation of sanitation and drilling a well.

The school board plans within a few days to apply for necessary PWA funds for erecting the building.

500 Busy in Loudoun.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Five hundred men are at work on CWA projects in Loudoun County this week, an increase of 200 over last week. Painting and repairing of county school houses, the largest project, added a number to their list.

Remodeling the clerk's office and extending the vault in the rear was begun this week with a large force and 25 young women are at work in the clerk's office reindexing court records.

CWA Pay Protested.

Luray, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Farmers of the Shenandoah Valley continue to protest the big pay given CWA workers, saying they are unable to compete with the scale.

Farmers until recently were paying $1 for a day's labor, from daylight until dark, but say they have been compelled to pay more.

Orange Using 1,800.

Orange, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—E. E. Wambersie, head of relief work in Orange and Orange County, reports 1,800 workers are on CWA pay rolls for local projects. The paint and repair projects on the courthouse and the schools are near completion. The CWA work on the streets and sidewalks is making progress. A sewing project for unemployed women is now being planned.

Sewers Want Material.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—The CWA sewing rooms are seeking donations of material and patterns, both old and new, from citizens. Unemployed women will make the material into garments for the needy.

1,459 Idle in Danville.

Danville, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Danville still has 1,459 unemployed men, although 900 are working on civil projects.

The local reemployment committee met yesterday. John Weber presented statistics and answered criticism. Reports that farmers have been hiring Negroes to strip their tobacco and then have come to Danville to take CWA jobs are not supported by facts, Weber told the committee. The only out-of-town people employed, he said, are those having trucks, the Danville supply being exhausted.

Before launching the CWA program, 1,079 workers were registered, but after that program started 1,280 more were registered. The increase is ascribed in part to tobacco concerns reducing their forces in the stripping plants.

30 Study at Bristol.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Another first-aid class of 30 CWA employes was organized last night by Jim Ingoldsby of the local police. The 18-hour course for study will be official Red Cross material.

Brief Illness Fatal To E. A. Michel

Funeral Today for Pdominent Augusta Banker.

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—E. A. Michel, 62, cashier of the Bank of New Hope for nine years and lifelong resident of Augusta County died at his home early today after a brief illness.

Death was the result of a heart disease. He was prominently identified with civic and religious affairs and widely known throughout this section of the State.

Funeral services will be held at the home tomorrow, with interment in Mount Horeb Cemetery. His widow is the only survivor.

Fire Hits Theater At Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—An early morning fire, of undetermined origin, damaged the interior of the Paramount Theater here.

No estimate of the loss could be furnished tonight by insurance appraisers, although it was estimated damage would be several thousand dollars. The theater is owned by Hunter Perry.

Cycle Sales Talk Ends With Crash

Romney, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Ed Kiester, 20, while demonstrating a motorcycle to a prospective buyer in front of his home here yesterday, lost control of the machine, which plunged into an earth bank across from his home and turned over four times. Taken to a Cumberland Hospital, he was found to have suffered bruises and a ruptured kidney.

Desolate

Pet Mother Skunk and Her Litter Stolen From Boys.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—It was hard enough to persuade their parents to permit them to adopt a family of skunks as pets, but George Eakle and Albert Thomas, local youngsters, were persuasive enough to win that consent, after promising to remove the defensive weapons of the mother skunk and her litter of six.

All was going well for the past week after the boys built the family a home until yesterday, when they found some one had visited their skunkhouse during the night and stolen the mother skunk and five little ones.

Now the boys have a problem on their hands feeding the lone baby.

Cancer Nuclei Suggests Key To Malignancy

Abnormal Cell Division Reproduced at Will by Science.

Baltimore, Jan. 19 (AP).—A slightly hard-boiled condition of the egg-like cells of cancer is one of their distinguishing and possibly significant differences from healthy tissue.

This is reported by the Carnegie Institution of Washington, in whose embryological laboratory here the observations were made by Dr. W. H. Lewis and Mrs. M. R. Lewis.

They found that the nuclei of these malignantly growing cells are more coagulated than normal, and that this coagulation is "reversible." Ammonia vapor cleared up the hard-boiled appearance, and gave the cancer cells nuclei like those of healthy cells.

This reversibility can be likened to unboiling an egg which has started to turn white. The principal difference is lack of reversibility on the part of the hard-boiled egg.

Process Twice Reversed.

After the cancer cells had been converted into normal clearness with ammonia, the Lewises found that placing them in a slightly acid medium would restore them again to the hard bodied state.

These experiments were undertaken because "it becomes of importance to learn whether the malignancy is due to permanent visible alteration of the cell or whether it is due to an invisible factor which in turn is the cause of the alteration."

They observed other differences in the appearance of cancer as against normal cells, while studying mouse sarcoma. As a result the report states that "the possibility is suggested" that a "key to the malignancy of the cells" may be found in what is called the "centrosomal mechanism." This mechanism is a series of changes when a cell divides into two cells, thereby producing growth of the cancer.

Division Difference Noted.

One result of these changes is a difference in the manner in which chromosomes tear themselves in two. Just before a cell divides, its chromosomes, the carriers of its heredity, split into two each. Half go to each cell, insuring each a full set.

In the cancer, the report states, the dividing chromosomes separate themselves by a wider space than in normal growth. The Lewises caused healthy cell chromosomes to do exactly the same wide splitting as the cancerous ones, merely by adding distilled water to the medium in which the cells were growing artificially under the microscope.

Middlesex Audit Bares Confusion

Richmond, Jan. 19 (AP).—The records of W. W. Pitts, treasurer of Middlesex County, were reported by State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs today to be in "utter confusion."

The treasurer was not in debt to the Commonwealth, the auditor reported, but his report showed that the State and county owed him $4,100.13.

Downs said the auditors were forced to great expense in assembling Pitts' accounts. Checks and money orders were reported to have been found mixed in the "trash that was to be thrown away."

Fireman Hurt in Fall At Anacostia Blaze

Falling from a ladder while fighting a fire at 1621 U street southeast, Ralph M. Drummond, 39, fireman at No. 7 Truck Company, received ankle injury yesterday. He was treated at Gallinger Hospital and removed dto his home at 1240 U street southeast.

The upper floor and roof of the home of William E. Johnston were almost destroyed by the flames Damage was set at $1,500.

Veteran Ill

Faints in Strasburg on Way to Army Hospital.

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—John Kennedy, who was turned over to Shenandoah County officers Tuesday night after he fainted here, has left for Walter Reid Hospital for a mastoid operation.

After buying a railroad ticket for Washington at New Market, Tuesday evening, Kennedy got off at Strasburg Junction, and walked here, where he collapsed. After some hours of questioning, Kennedy told officers to call a priest in Washington, who solved the mystery by urging that the veteran continue to Washington for his operation.

15 Per Cent Cut Hits CWA Jobs In West Virginia

Workers to Be Released Wherever Possible as Projects Gain.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—After announcing approval of various county projects giving employment to 2,500 more persons, William H. Beehler, State Civil Works Administrator, proclaimed a cut of 15 per cent in the quotas in all 55 counties of the State.

The cut was made following Beehler's request for the approval of 10,000 additional CWA jobs in West Virginia. The cut was ordered from Washington because 80,000 persons already have been assigned to CWA jobs in the State and its quota should be only 71,000.

Beehler has ordered all county administrators to release those persons who can get along without CWA jobs.

The additional projects approved by the State administration include sanitary projects in Marion County giving employment to 100 men; sanitary work in Preston County to employ 18 men; a road project in Roaring Creek district of Randolph County giving jobs to 41 men; street projects in Weston to employ 40 men; two additional Harrison County road projects to employ 50 men and additional school health sanitation and nutrition activities in the same county giving work for 39 additional persons. The latter work already is under way at Shinnston and Wyatt.

New Road Work Planned.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Bids have been asked for two more Federal road aid projects in Washington County. One is a mile of macadam road from Gapland to Cramptons Gap and the other a mile of macadam road along the road to Woodmont.

Work for Transients.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—It is proposed to put transients, temporarily sheltered by the Federal Transient Bureau here, to work in the forests of this section. This proposal by Miss Catherine Sponseller, secretary of the bureau, followed a conference with District Forester H. C. Buckingham and CWA officials. It is expected the plan will be approved by Federal CWA headquarters.

Forester Buckingham is anxious to get some worthwhile work done by gangs of transients on Dans Mountain to minimize forest havoc by opening fire lines and trails and removing dead timber. It is expected that eventually a camp will be opened above McCoole, similar to the CCC camps.

55 Berkeley Projects.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—There are now 56 CWA projects in operation over Martinsburg and Berkeley County, involving a cost of $303,000 and using 1,500 workers. These totals do not include the newly approved Shepherd Field work porject, which calls for 120 workers and cost of $17,000.

Dam to Flood Big Area.

Grafton, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Considerable property damage will be involved in the construction of the 215-foot flood control dam in the Tygarts Valley River here by the PWA, preliminary surveys have disclosed. An area of 3,900 acres will be flooded by water to be backed up by the dam.

New routes will have to be provided for 15 miles of Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks in the area, and 100 families will have to find new homes or else live in house boats. A bridge must be constructed on State highway route No. 56 at a point where water will be backed up from Pleasant Creek.

All fences, trees, buildings and debris will be removed from the flooded area before the dam is filled. This will require a vast number of workers.

Relief Camps Planned.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Capt. W. H. Arnold, State director of transient activities, announces the selection of Grafton for one of four service camps in West Virginia. Others are to be established at Bluefield, Huntingtonfield, Huntington and Wheeling.

Several farms adjacent to the city are under consideration for the camp site, and arrangements have been made to take over the Cole-Bush Building on East Main street in Grafton for a relief depot.

Formal requests for loans and grants from PWA funds totaling nearly $2,000,000 have been submitted to the State advisory board on public works.

The largest is by the recently organized Morgantown Hospital Association, which seeks $650,000 for a new hospital and nurses' dormitory.

The Raleigh County Court wants $400,000 for a new courthouse and a jail at Beckley, the county seat.

The applications have been forwarded to PWA officials in Washington.

Former Banker Settles With Woman He Sued.

Trial of the suit of Edward D. Shriner, jr., former banker of Fredericksburg, Md., to recover $30,000 he had paid Maude Marie Stogner, of Rockingham, N. C., was ended yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court after it was announced that a settlement had been made.

Under the agreement Shriner gets half of the balance of the money, or $12,522.98, and Miss Stogner keeps an equal amount. She had spent nearly $5,000 when the account was attached.

Shriner said he had paid the money to avoid a breach of promise suit, while Miss Stogner contended that she had sold to Shriner the letters he had written her for $30,000.

Sergt. Bargagni Is Speaker At Culpeper Fire Banquet

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—The annual banquet to the fire company and guests, including the mayor and town council, the municipal band, officers of the Chamber of Commerce, of Rotary, members of the clergy and the medical society, was held last evening in the Municipal Auditorium with the Ladies Auxiliary to the fire company, headed by Mrs. Page M. Graves, as hostesses.

Ira Thomas, of Philadelphia, and Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, of Washington, president National Firemen's Association, were among the speakers.

Others present were Chief Rouse of the Orange Fire Company, Chief Campbell of Luray, Chief Bartenstein, Warrenton; Chief Duncan, Alexandria, and Chief Vetta, Manassas.

Chief Swan, of the local company, now in his thirteenth term, was given a gold watch by the men of the company. Birthday gifts consisted of $100 check to the fire company from the auxillary, and one to the municipal band for $50; a silver well and tree platter to Mrs. Graves from her co-workers.

Community Mule Ends 38-Year Toil

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). — Residents of Stafford County just across the Rappahannock River from Fredericksburg, are deeply deploring the death of "Old Jack," who served his master, Luther Gardner, 38 years.

Regarded as a "community mule" because he was so extensively borrowed and hired out, "Jack" was shot by his master when the mule became too old to stand.

DOOR-TO-DOOR INCOME TAX DRIVE.

("Secretary Morgenthau proposes a door-to-door canvass to check up on income tax payers."—News item.)

Canvasser as the door bell is answered)—Good morning, ma'am. Could I . . .

Housewife—We don't want to buy any more brushes.

Housewife—And I just bought a new vacuum cleaner.

Housewife — Morgenthau? Morgenthau? Why, I paid that delicatessen bill two months ago.

* * * *

Canvasser (still keeping one foot in the doorway)—If you will please bear with me for just a moment I will try to explain why I am here.

Housewife — No matter what you're sellin', we don't want it.

Canvasser—I am here to try to interest you in the matter of income taxes.

Housewife — Taxes? We have plenty already.

Canvasser—But the Government has a very fine line of income taxes and I am sure you will be interested.

Housewife—I'll ask my husband and if he wants any income taxes I'll have him write you.

* * * *

Canvasser—But you see . . .

Housewife—Try the people upstairs. Maybe they could use some.

Canvasser—It isn't a question whether you want any income taxes or not, my dear lady. No home should be without them. Surely you've heard about them.

Housewife — I've heard about them, but we can't afford them. My husband says they're a luxury. They're only for the rich.

Canvasser—The poor man can use them as well as the rich. That's the reason I have been sent out. My job is to explain and demonstrate the income tax and get it into every home.

Housewife—You'll have to excuse me. I've got the washing to do. There's a family across the street that looks as if it might be in the market for an income tax.

Canvasser—But you'll let me leave one of our circulars, will you not?

Housewife—The house is full of circulars—soap circulars, automobile circulars, cigarette circulars, tooth brush circulars . . .

Canvasser—But this one you will find very interesting. It describes the various income taxes, with a special word about the 1934 streamline models. It has illustrations of upper brackets in three colors, some hand-drawings of typical surtaxes and some charming rhymes on exemptions for the kiddies to read. We have tried to make the income tax interest everybody in the family.

Housewife—Maybe the children will like it. You can leave one.

Canvasser—Thank you. Read it yourself and try to interest your husband. You have heard about our prize offer?

Housewife (at last interested)—Prize offer?

Canvasser—Yes; as a special inducement to get people interested in income taxes we are numbering all income tax blanks. Twice a month we hold a drawing and give away six automobiles to the holders of lucky numbers.

Housewife—Come inside. I want to hear all about it.

Baltimore, Jan. 19 (AP).—Two persons were killed near here today when their automobile left a corkscrew curve on the Harford road and crashed into a tree.

The dead are H. Thomas Dee, 34, advertising solicitor for a Baltimore newspaper, and Miss Mary D. Morrison, 30.

Dee, who was driving, apparently mistook the last twist of the curve, the last of a series of nine on a grade leading into the valley of the Gunpowder Falls.

Baltimore County officials discovered the wrecked automobile, with both occupants dead.

Dee is survived by his mother, Mrs. Anna Dee, and a brother, Robert, of Concord, N. H., and a sister, Anna, who is Sister M. Borromeo, at the Convent of Mercy, East Boston, Mass.

Mrs. George W. Parrish, 69, Dies at Winchester

Winchester, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be conducted Sunday from the Lutheran Church at Fairview, near here, for Mrs. Emma Margaret Parrish, 69, wife of George W. Parrish, who died at her home here Thursday. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Surviving are her husband, two daughters, Miss Nora Parrish and Mrs. Pearl McIlwee, both at home, and two brothers, Arthur Slonaker, of Dillon's Run, W. Va., and Henry Slonaker, of Capon Bridge, W. Va.

Milk Shippers Nominate Five At Frederick

Montgomery Resolutions Discussed; McGill Tells of Code.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Five Frederick County directors were nominated at a meeting of about 200 dairymen, members of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, here yesterday.

Resolutions which Montgomery County will present at the annual meeting in Silver Spring February 5 were presented for consideration. John McGill, jr., secretary-treasurer of the association, gave a review of the milk situation in Washington, with special reference to the pending milk code.

Only one change was made in the county directorship. Albert N. McCerdell, this city, was nominated to succeed Ernest C. Speaks, who has served for a number of years. J. Homer Remsberg, was reelected from Middletown; Erle C. Biser from Adamstown; Alvey M. Etzler, Walkerville, and William J. Wilcox from Urbana. The nominations will be presented with those from the other counties of the association at the annual meeting and are equivalent to election.

Three resolutions adopted by the Montgomery County members were presented by L. R. Sabine, Gaithersburg. The first would place one man at each of the distribution plants to which shippers send their milk that he may check the weights and see that proper checks are drawn up. Another deals with penalization for what looks like a better market and later comes back to the association seeking readmittance as a member. While the penalty was not given, it was estimated 10 per cent on his basic milk. The third was in reference to taking over a surplus plant where surplus milk could be processed, but not to retail milk. He said there is criticism of the way surplus milk is being handled and many shippers are dissatisfied.

Mr. McGill said the experts are not through figuring on the code, and he still hopes that they will get down to what is best for the Eastern markets. He said from what he has been able to learn the new setup of the milk situation would cut out production areas and work the milk proposition on a National basis. He said code prices are being figured out, and when they are drawn up if producers want the code they can accept it or leave it.

The codes, he declared, would be beneficial if enforced, but the present outlook is that some of the prices in some of the codes might not pass muster in court. Mr. McGill said there is a tendency among certain distributors to "put on pressure" in an effort to amend restrictions of the District of Columbia Health Department and let milk "of any kind come in." He said he opposes any amendments to the health regulations.

The meeting was in session nearly two hours and was attended by Washington shippers from practically every section of the county.

Dr. Motte Martin, Congo Missionary, Will Preach at the Church of the Pilgrims

Presbyterian Has 30-Year Mission Record

Will Speak at Morning and Evening Services.

Dr. Motte Martin, noted missionary to the Belgian Congo, will be the guest preacher tomorrow at both the morning and evening services at the Church of the Pilgrims, of which the Rev. Andrew Reird Bird is minister.

Dr. Martin is senior missionary of the United States Presbyterian Church in the Congo, and is an acknowledged constructive force in the church work in central Africa, where schools, hospitals and industrial farm centers are maintained.

A native of Texas, Dr. Martin took up work in the Congo mission field 30 years ago. At the time of the World War he was decorated by King Albert of Belgium for services which resulted in saving the lives of hundreds of the Congo natives.

Dr. Martin will remain only for a short time in Washington, as he sails next week to continue his work in Africa.

Lutheran Mission Society Holds Annual Roll Call.

The Lutheran Inner Mission Society of Washington, with Miss Frances Dysinger, executive director, is now holding its seventh annual roll call, to close January 26. The Rev. E. H. Meuser is chairman of the membership committee, in charge of the roll call.

The annual dinner terminating the drive will be held on Friday at 6:30 p. m. at the Lutheran Church of the Atonement, North Capitol street and Rhode Island avenue. Carl M. Distler, president of the Inner Mission Board of the United Lutheran Church in America, will speak.

The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy Returning to His Pulpit.

The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy will return to his pulpit in the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church tomorrow morning, after his convalescence from an operation, to begin the fourth year of his ministry in Washington. He will preach on "How We Discover Certainty."

Mr. Clinchy came to the church three years ago this week from the Broadway Tabernacle Church, New York City, where he was associated with Dr. Charles E. Jefferson. He also is chairman of the Congregational Commission on Inter-Racial Relations, president of the board of directors of the Middle Atlantic Conference of Congregational Churches, and a member of the board of the Washington Mental Hygiene Institute and the Social Hygiene Society.

Dr. Taylor to Preach At Sunday Service.

Sunday morning at Central Presbyterian Church, the pastor, Dr. James H. Taylor, will preach on "The Challenge of the Gospel," and at night will continue his series of sermons on Old Testament characters.

The Westminster League will hold its meeting at 5 p. m., after which there will be a fireside hour for all the young people of the church and congregation.

The Christian Endeavor Society will meet at 7 p. m.

Beginning Monday there will be a prayer service each night in the interest of home missions. The General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church has set apart the week from January 21 to January 28, inclusive, as a week of prayer for home missions.

On Thursday night there will be a congregational dinner, and the Rev. Dr. P. D. Miller, one of the executive secretaries of the General Assembly's Home Missions, will speak.

Mount Vernon Place Church To Hear Two Sermons.

Dr. Forney Hutchinson will preach on "The Man Who Lived Too Long" at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow. The subject of the evening sermon is "My First Sermon." The Church School will meet in the various departments at 9:30 a. m.; the Chinese Church School at 2:30 p. m. The young people's Young Adult and Adult Departments will hold their regular services at 7 p. m.

Mr. Shure, director of music, will present his organ recital, "Through Palestine," a series of 12 impressions of the Holy Land, his own compositions, in the church auditorium, January 31, at 8:15 p. m. The Rev. T. Eugene West, of Front Royal, Va., will be narrator.

Mrs. Baker to Give Talk on Occult.

Mrs. Aleta B. Baker will continue her informal talks on occult subjects January 22, at 8:15 p. m. at 917 Eighteenth street northwest, apartment 36. The subject for the talk will be "Constructive Demonstration," as governed by the occult law.

Mrs. Baker is the founder of the Order of the Portal, which has its headquarters in Boston and branches in New York, Washington and other cities.

"Life," Lesson-Sermon Topic of Scientists.

"Life" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Matthew 19:17: "If Thou Wilt Enter Into Life, Keep the Commandments."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "All the commandments which I command thee this day shall ye observe to do, that ye may live, and multiply, and go in and possess the land which the Lord sware unto your fathers. And thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee these 40 years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldest keep his commandments, or no. And he humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with manna, which thou knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live." (Deuteronomy 8:1-3.)

The lesson-serman also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Father, Eternal Life; the one Mind; the Divine Principle, Commonly called God." (Page 336).

Christ's Early Ministry

Removal to Capernaum, Business and Political Metropolis, Expanded Field of His Influence; Inspiration of Followers an Example to Teachers.

By William T. Ellis.

One of New York State's outstanding editors was talking with me about his paper and the reasons for its success. He began to tell me about a boy who came to him as a cub reporter, and developed a genius for news-gathering and for writing. At great length, he extolled the value of this, his star man. The implication was that his paper's growth was due to his finding and developing the right sort of staff.

That is the way every enterprise succeeds, from a farm, a factory or a store clear up to a nation or a religion. That is the way Jesus established Christianity, and kept it going. He trained a few men and bade them train others. As a result, the church that could at first be carried in a single rowboat could not now be transported by all the ships that sail all waters. Beginning with a dozen men, Christ's disciples now number more than half a billion. They are to be found under every flag in all quarters of the earth.

To inspire and train a life for greater greatness than one's own is about the biggest achievement possible. This is the hope and the reward of the teacher, and the test of an educational institution. All of us know colleges which have produced a succession of great men; and other colleges that never graduated anybody who has made a mark in the world. Some preachers have a record of producing from their congregations many candidates for the ministry and other college students who serve their generation notably. Out of some Sunday school classes have come boys and girls who have "made good."

Self-Effacing Teachers.

All really great teachers make disciples, as did Jesus. Unlike him, many teachers succeed in developing disciples who become greater than themselves. A commonplace person, with this genius for disciple-making may be the means of giving the world a great life.

In this ancient fellowship of disciple-makers, at whose head sits Jesus, are the millions of Sunday school teachers whose incentive and reward are wholly spiritual. They deserve the world's gratitude. Unsung and unsalaried, they give themselves, week after week, to carrying on the work begun by Jesus Himself. They are one of the fundamental forces for morality and good citizenship in our world. Next October 6 a Nation-wide series of celebrations is planned in their honor. Theirs is not the varied curriculum of the class room, but simply the teaching of the Book that changes lives.

"We search the world for truth; we cull
The good, the pure, the beautiful
From graven stone and written scroll,
From all old flower-fields of the soul;
And, weary seekers of the best,
We come back laden from our quest,
To find that all the sages said
Is in the Book our mothers read."

Two Kinds of Towns.

Not all communities are equally responsive to the best influence. Some have traditions of public spirit, progressiveness and idealism. These usually are the ones so fortunate as to have a high-souled newspaper, one or more great preachers, an educational institution which functions vitally, or else an inherited tradition. Others are sunk in sordiness; I have visited many towns in which I would not care to live.

Jesus had to move to a more responsive region, after the death of John the Baptist. Judea was too narrow-minded and prejudice-ridden. So He went to Galilee, with its cosmopolitan population, its open-minded tolerance and its hospitality to new ideas. He carried the old Message that He had been speaking down South—and be it remembered that Jesus continued to sound John's note of repentance—but it seemed to broaden in this more spacious air. Although He was born in Bethlehem of Judea, Jesus has been known to history as the Galilean and the Nazarene—Nazareth, His early home, being a Galilee town.

In recent months a great discovery has been made by the archeologists at the head of the Lake of Galilee. They have found seemingly sure evidence that the City of Capernaum was not at the traditional Tell Hum, but farther west, on the Plain of Gennesserat, with its many springs. The modern Tabgha, where genial Father Toepper has his hospice, is nearer the true site. I am eager to return to this loved spot, to talk it all over with my friend.

Ministry in Capernaum.

Capernaum bulks large in the world's spiritual history; for it was the home and headquarters of Jesus during most of His ministry. The small-town Man moved to the big city for His great work. There he was at the confluence of the tides of travel, trade and politics between the East and the West.

The marching legions of Rome, the culture of Greece and the sharp-eyed traders from all of Asia commingled in Capernaum, and were familiar to the eyes and ears of Jesus. It is absurd to try to make Him out an ignorant country peasant.

We know, from the records in the other Gospels, that this was not the beginning of the Master's public work. He had been busy about it from the time of the temptation; and had even made a first choice of His earliest disciples. But here in Galilee He formally organized His ministry, and called to full-time service the men who were to carry on with Him and after Him.

When Jesus summoned His first four disciples—Peter and Andrew, James and John—there were no signs of greatness about them that their neighbors ever saw. They were just journeymen fishermen, toiling in the lake. But the wonder which thrills sensitive spirits is that Jesus saw in these commonplace men potentialities which made them saints and apostles, trustworthy leaders of the new Kingdom.

A New Genesis for All.

Highbrows argue endlessly as to whether heredity or environment is the greater force in shaping character. We know something more potent than either or both. That is the transforming power of Christ in the lives of plain people. As He turned these ordinary Galilean fishermen into immortal world leaders, so Jesus has throughout the ages been taking commonplace characters and making them uncommon. This perennial transformation is the wonder of the ages and the hope of our day. It transcends birth and circumstances, and makes men and women new.

Perhaps Christians have underemphasized the present power of Christ to effect complete changes in the life and lot of individuals; and, consequently, in society as a whole. We study this present lesson of how Jesus went about all of Galilee teaching, preaching and healing, so that a wide radius of people flocked to His sensational presence. But there is danger of overlooking the more important truth that right now, in this year 1934, Jesus is still at work, bringing to the world life, and life more abundant.

Iturbi to Play Music of U. S. Composer Here

Spanish Pianist Returns in Constitution Hall Tomorrow.

Jose Iturbi, who is no stranger to concert goers in Washington, returns to give a piano recital tomorrow in Constitution Hall at 4 p. m. A great admirer of the United States, where he has been well received, the Spanish virtuoso takes particular pleasure in playing at the Nation's Capital.

"The thing I admire about the American," said Senor Iturbi in New York recently, "is his feeling of selection. If you ask him about a certain composition, he will admit that he is unfamiliar with it. But if it is worth-while, he will hurry out and listen, and study, and learn of its history, and tomorrow when you meet him, he can tell you all about it.

"The future of music lies in America, I believe, because there is no country in the world with so many music lovers in all classes. The discrimination shown by audiences is evidence of the average high quality of appreciation. Whenever I come here I feel as though I were returning home instead of visiting an alien land. America is unique in this respect; I do not know just why, and I can not explain it, but this country can be home to every one."

As a practical demonstration of his interest in this country, Senor Iturbi has placed on the program of his Washington recital some compositions by a young American composer, Ernst Brooks, of Tulsa, Okla. These pieces are "Punch and Judy," "The Drear Wind Is A-Spinning," "Two Inventions," and an arrangement of the nursery song, "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater."

The recital will open with Beethoven's "Andante Favori," which will be followed by the G minor sonata of Schumann. There will be a Chopin group, consisting of the "Fantaisie-Impromptu," "Valse Brillante" and the "Scherzo" in B flat minor. The concluding group will contain the Brooks pieces and Albeniz's "Fete-Dieu a Seville."

An Oxford Movement.

Every so often a note of ringing protest against the modern ways rings out from under the dreaming spires of Oxford University, where stones of college stairways are worn inches deep by the passage of generations of the British Empire's embryonic leaders. The newest "Oxford movement," however, has little in common with its predecessors of the past. It is a wave of growing irritation at the publicity to which the ancient university is being subjected.

Cause for resentment started, it seems, with the famous resolution passed by the Oxford Union—the university debating club—last summer. Its approval of the motion "That this House would in no circumstances fight for King and Country" drew world-wide attention which many graduates of conservative trend resented deeply. Long before the echoes of this debate had died away another story, referring to the penchant of the undergraduates for "shorts," had Oxford turning "nudist." And now an English film called "Men of Tomorrow" has set the university by the ears for its "travesty" of what the well-bred Oxonian really wears—and thinks.

Oxford has been aptly called the mother of universities. But she is not so ancient a mother, and not so aloof for all her centuries of tradition, as to be indifferent to what the world says of her dignity and prestige. At a time when many universities go in for press agenting, and regard almost any publicity as good publicity, it is refreshing to learn of Oxford's annoyance at being treated as "good copy," despite the advertising that goes therewith.

Upholding Tradition.

Various stirring events ought not to absorb us so completely as to make us lose sight of the fact that one of our great National traditions has been upheld this week: A Vice President has been thrown for a loss.

Having incurred the wrath of President Wilson by having an opinion on a major question, Vice President Marshall contented himself with being a delightful and charming gentlemen, and observing that "What this country needs is a good 5-cent cigar." President Harding invited Mr. Coolidge into Cabinet meetings, to shatter the traditional isolation, but the taciturn New Englander didn't achieve political weight until he graced the head of the table. General Dawes had a day under the klieg lights when he lectured senators on their snuff-box-era rules, but senators had the last laugh and Mr. Dawes went out of office best known for his underslung pipe.

Postmaster General Farley has now offered Mr. Garner escape from oblivion by assigning him half of Texas as a patronage domain. Mr. Garner seized the offer, but turned it loose even more quickly when a delegation of congressmen from Texas called on him. While they sat in his office, he addressed a letter to "Dear Jim" that reflected the despair of a Vice President. "They," he said (meaning the congressmen), "are very much worried about the proposal that I pass on qualifications of postmasters in the new districts of Texas and, to be frank with you, Jim, I am worried about it myself because of the friction that might arise between the Texas members of Congress and myself. . . . I want to ask you if you won't relieve me of the burden of saying anything about the qualifications of any postmaster anywhere in Texas?"

When "Mr. Throttlebottom," the futilitarian vice president of musical comedy, was in town two weeks ago, Mr. Garner called on him in his dressing room. When he plays a return engagement, Mr. Garner will, no doubt, have an even heartier handshake ready. Vice Presidents are, indeed, brothers under the skin.

A New Regime.

Only President Roosevelt's signature is now required to complete enactment of the District liquor control bill. As approved in final form by both House and Senate the terms of that measure do not vary greatly from those of the original bill prepared under direction of the District Commissioners. In view of the fact that extensive hearings were conducted at the District Building and the Capitol the measure probably reflects local opinion so far as can be expected in a disfranchised community.

Interest now centers in the appointment of a liquor-control board. Since broad discretionary powers have been conferred upon this board the selection of its personnel is highly important. Under this type of statute the character of the board may be more significant than the letter of the law. It goes without saying that only applicants of the highest qualifications should be chosen, and that the appointments should not be influenced by politics.

In some respects the liquor-control bill is liberal. It permits the sale of drinks in bona-fide restaurants, hotels, &c. Bottled spirits will be available in a great variety of establishments. Yet the Commissioners and the control board are given broad powers to curb abuses. If a board of high capability and integrity is chosen, it should be able to make Washington an uninviting place for bootleggers without diminishing its attractions for those who enjoy a cheering glass.

What Congress Seeks To Do.

Governor Black's statement before the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency made clear the position of the Reserve Board and the Reserve Banks on those aspects of the President's monetary policy which are of greatest immediate significance. But the statement barely touched the more fundamental issue of the role which is to be played by the Reserve System in the future.

The Reserve Board Governor indicated that the Reserve System will make no effort to retain the profit resulting from revaluation of the dollar at a lower gold content. This decision is probably wise. Technically, it might be claimed that the appropriation of this profit by the Government constitutes a seizure of property without due process of law. But this is no more true of the appropriation of the gold owned by the Federal Reserve Banks than it is of the forcible taking over of gold owned by individuals, or, for that matter, of the abrogation of the gold clause in the Government's bonds.

Governor Black indicates the importance of the deeper question of where the title of the Reserve System's gold is to be vested, stating his belief that the gold ought to remain with the central banks of the Nation "for the manifest purposes of currency and credit needs." The President, on the other hand, has urged that "it is a prudent step to vest in the Government title to and possession of all monetary gold within its boundaries," and that after this is done the Treasury should have the sole responsibility for the maintenance of a currency which is "a fairly constant standard of purchasing power."

The issue here is not merely one of immediate policy in dealing with the financial emergency. It involves the whole theory of the proper relationship between the Government and the banking system of the country. The theory of the Federal Reserve Act is in substance that on which the central banking system of every western country except Canada, which has no central bank, has been organized. This theory is that the responsibility for the control of credit conditions should be absolutely dissociated from the control of the Treasury and from all political agencies of Government.

The reason for the widespread acceptance of this principle is clear enough. Every government is under pressure from time to time to evade the distasteful necessity of balancing its budget by financing itself through some form of monetary or credit inflation. Moreover, every government—none more than our own—is constantly under pressure from all sorts of business interests to make money cheap and purchasing power abundant for the benefit of debtors and of would-be debtors. The uniformly disastrous experience which has resulted from a mixing of fiscal and monetary policies has resulted in the inclusion, in the statutes of every central bank started since the war, of provisions designed to preserve the independence of the credit authority from political pressure and especially from fiscal influences.

To be sure, the independence of central banks has often proved an illusion. No central bank maintained its independence during the war, and none has succeeded in maintaining any real independence through the acute phases of the present depression. It is one thing, however, to permit the independence of the banking authority to be abrogated during an emergency, and it is something very different to transfer the functions boldly and as a matter of policy to the Treasury Department.

Whatever may be thought as to the relative merits of Treasury views and Federal Reserve views in the immediate emergency, as a long-run matter the proposal to invest the Treasury with full control over the money question is fraught with peril. It may be possible to assume that the present Treasury is as well equipped as the present Reserve Board to judge what are the best emergency measures to take at the bottom of a world depression. But it can not be seriously argued that the Treasury will be a safer guide than a Reserve Board during the years when the seeds of another depression may be sown. If central banks have slain their thousands, treasuries have slain their tens of thousands!

The destruction of the independence and authority of the Federal Reserve Board was decreed in principle last spring when there was included in the Agricultural Adjustment Act a section providing in substance that if the credit policy of the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve Banks should not be liberal enough to meet the views of the Secretary of the Treasury, this official, under the direction of the President, should be authorized to issue greenbacks to an amount not to exceed three billions of dollars. That action potentially destroyed the control of the Reserve System over the credit position.

But the legislation now proposed formalizes the transfer of credit control to the Treasury and would make it permanent. And this is the legislation which the House of Representatives would pass with about as much consideration as is given to establishment of a Coast Guard station in Alaska!

Mr. Farley's Position.

There can be nothing but commendation for Postmaster General Farley's anxiety to conduct that department in a manner "which will merit the approval of the country and justify the confidence the President has reposed in him." It is also to Mr. Farley's credit that he has so promptly recognized the difficulty of reconciling that ambition with retention of his position as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. For it is abundantly evident that the Postmaster General can not continue to hold his key position in the Democratic party organization without also failing to indorse "the spirit of the Administration" as Mr. Roosevelt defined it Wednesday.

After all, even though Mr. Farley is not taking fees and is not representing private interests, there is no great difference in principle between his position and the position of other National committeemen who profit personally because their party is in power. Mr. Farley occupies, aside from his Cabinet position, a three-fold political relation to the Administration. As chairman of the State Democratic machinery in New York and as National committeeman from that State, he is the official patronage receiver and arbiter for that Commonwealth which probably has the greatest amount of Federal patronage. As chairman of the National committee, he is in charge of dispensing patronage for the entire country, including New York. He is, therefore, on both the receiving and the giving end.

It is proper, but not conclusive, to say that Mr. Farley profits nothing personally from his political activity. He has enormous power, which many men love more than money. He has the opportunity to play a grand-scale political game and his career has demonstrated his love for it. Moreover, according to Raymond Clapper, "probably 90 per cent of Mr. Farley's time is given over to political matters." A Cabinet officer's salary is not enormous, of course, but still it is paid by taxpayers of all forms of political affiliation on the assumption of 100 per cent—not 10 per cent—service.

To say that no one else could perform the duties of chairman of the party in New York would be to reflect seriously upon the capabilities of some 6,000,000 other good Democrats of that State. It might be possible even to find another astute and able chairman of the National committee, if Mr. Farley desires to retain his Cabinet place. Certainly it is not desirable that any Cabinet officer in any Administration should simultaneously be the chief political factotum of his party.

The Man Who Stayed Home.

The late Dr. Russell Conwell, of Philadelphia, made—and gave away to good causes—several millions of dollars on his lecture, "Acres of Diamonds." The story he told was that a South African saw the distant green fields and was lured away from his rocky home to make his fortune. He roamed the world and riches never came. But in the backyard of his old South African home, world-famous diamonds worth fabulous fortunes were later discovered.

The moral, of course, was that you had to have an eye for diamonds before you could see them, or that you had to have a proper appreciation of your own backyard. Anyway, whatever it was, if Dr. Conwell were alive he could point to Jacobus Jonker as the man who did stay home in South Africa, and did well because of it.

Jonker has been believing for 26 years that some day his strike would come. In that time, he found stones worth approximately $7,000. Persistence rewarded him this week when he found a stone weighing 726 carats, which he has sold for $315,000. Romance is added in the fact that the stone is supposed to be the missing part of the famous Cullinan diamond, discovered in 1905. The Transvaal government purchased the Cullinan and presented it to King Edward. Four of the largest stones cut from it may be seen by visitors to the London Tower, where it reposes in the case which protects the crown jewels of Great Britain. The Jonker diamond, as it is to be called, is the fourth largest in the world.

Jonker will buy, with his $315,000, a 2,000-acre sheep ranch in the Transvaal. And, we hope, he will live happy "ever after."

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications should be signed with the writer's name. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters should be limited to 300 words.

Washington Alleys.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to express to you my appreciation of the splendid articles on the Washington alleys which are now appearing in your most valued paper. I came to live in Washington about 12 years ago, but I remember well as a child digging out of the attic and reading letters written by my great-grandmother, who was then living in Washington, just before the Civil War, in which she described the squalor and misery of the alleys and slave quarters of Washington, all of which distressed her very much. No doubt some of the alleys and dwellings which she saw and described in those letters are still in existence and still inhabited. I, too, remember when I first came to Washington on a visit before the World War how charmed I was with the beautiful trees and parks and wide streets and many beautiful homes and gardens, and how shocked I was some years later when I came here to live permanently, to discover that there were such places as the Washington alleys, as they are called. I have actually seen many of them and know that the writer of your articles does not exaggerate. Some of the small, narrow streets in the colored sections are not much better. It is too bad that some of the money spent not long ago for a reptile house in the Zoo, which cost a million dollars, could not have been used to improve the living conditions of some of the human population of Washington.

MARION STUART CAKE.

A Federal Lynch Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a most hopeful sign that all shades of opinion and all sections of the country are united in the common purpose to put an end to the barbarous practice of lynching. There are inevitably sharp differences of judgment as to the best means and instrumentalities by which this noble purpose can be accomplished. But all will agree that the creation of a persistent and enduring public sentiment is essential to the enforcement of any method that may be devised. President Roosevelt in one clear, clarion call to the conscience, appeals for the mobilization of public opinion to wipe out this foul blot from the escutcheon of the Nation. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People ardently believes in the efficacy of Federal law. Several bills for this purpose are now before the present Congress. The Southern women, while urging the union of all agencies, Federal and State, within constitutional limits, express the fear that the enactment of a Federal law might arouse local resentments which would leave the last state of the case worse than the first. The premature enactment of any moral reform into law is calculated to do more harm than good.

The basic cause of lynching is that human life is held too cheap—especially Negro life. Too many people have a bad conscience as to the sacredness of human life. There must first be a rectification of the conscience before any worth-while reform is possible—whether projected under local or National auspices. The attitude of the Southern white women is calculated to do more than any other available agency to arouse a lethargic conscience where such arousal is most needed. It would certainly be unfortunate to dampen their propaganda, or cut short their ardor by premature and ineffectual legislation.

No true friend of the cause of law and order wishes to be put in the position of seeming to oppose any movement or measure intended to check lynching however unwise or ineffectual he may think it may turn out to be.

Any anti-lynching bill before Congress will lead to Nation-wide discussion as to the iniquity of lynching and will leave some residuum of beneficial effect upon the public mind and conscience, whether the proposed measure should succeed or fail. What is most needed is a wholesome public opinion and the rectification of the public conscience which of itself would speedily cause the barbarous and atrocious practice to cease, with or without the enactment of law, and without which no law will be of avail.

KELLY MILLER.

The Plowman and the Reaper.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much interested in your editorial in Sunday's issue, entitled "A Shorter Working Week." Am always interested in your editorials, they being timely and instructive. But in regard to the shorter hour labor day you have entirely left Jehovah out of the picture, yet it is He that is more interested in the subject than men. It was He who inspired the saying: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper." Volumes might be written of that which is embraced in these few words of Jehovah, but by many the text has been passed up as of little worth, when in fact the greater part of our present troubles can be found embraced in them.

The blindness of both the ministry and our legislators, in not being able to read automatic machinery in these few words, has brought us into our present condition. And, unless the shorter hour labor day is written among our National laws, to again restore the age-old balance between production and consumption, as it was during the centuries of the long hour labor day, which balance was broken by the advent of automatic-human-like machinery, we are in for a worse scourge of unemployment than we have yet experienced. For the spending of billions of dollars by the Federal Government in an effort to break the depression, if continued, will in the end break the Federal Treasury and send it into bankruptcy.

D. PAUL ZIEGLER.

A New Republican Creed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a Republican.

I have been a Republican for many years.

I believe the Republican party can carry the elections in 1934 and 1936 without trouble.

I believe it my duty as a Republican to forego all chance for Republican victory in both elections, if Mr. Roosevelt will end this financial depression right now.

I believe it my duty to give Mr. Roosevelt anything I have or can obtain to assist him in any way to end this depression. And he is to have full credit for anything or everything I do.

In return I demand of Mr. Roosevelt that he take intelligent, practical steps to end this depression, right now.

As a Republican I demand that he place his agricultural program in the hands of men with practical agricultural experience instead of a lot of theoretical, educated dreamers. This nation is an agricultural nation and, God willing, it shall remain so to the end of time. Any administration that does not give agriculture intelligent, practical care is doomed to financial wreck and the whole nation must suffer.

As a Republican I deem it my duty to prepare now, in case Mr. Roosevelt does not at once place his agricultural program in the hands of men with practical experience in the field, to give him, in the next two elections the finest beating ever handed to mankind.

I here and now subscribe to this creed, and ask all men, of whatever political-religious faith, to unite with me for the good of all the world.

HERB E. SHARP.

"Sauce for the Goose."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How can the Administration establish a sound social state by pandering to the Peters, while depriving the Pauls? To be consistent, "sauce for the geese" should also be "sauce for the ganders."

As a matter of fact, it is quite the quintessence of inconsistency for our Government to slash the pay of its workers and then issue czar-like orders to private employers that they will be subject to imprisonment if they reduce the wages of their employes.

It seems that our "alphabetical soup" has developed a most peculiar flavor.

E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My dear Louise: A chance remark you made last night reminds me of an oversight. I have never discussed with you the social custom called "necking"—chiefly, I suppose, because I have credited you with enough inherent good taste and common sense to avoid it.

But vice itself no longer seems hateful when practiced by the people you know and like, so a word or two may be of some help in time of doubt.

Youth assumes that its discoveries are something new in human history, but they are not. "Necking" is as old as the race. Only the word is new.

But since the beginning of recorded comment, there has been a sharp distinction between the momentary caresses prompted by love and the baser practices of lust.

True love is so closely allied with religion that it commonly exalts and purifies those who experience it. The boy in love for the first time not only aspires to be high-minded and noble, but is resolved to preserve and defend the purity and sanctity of the girl he idolizes.

The greater the love of man or woman, the higher its motives. No other emotion is so uniformly ennobling.

Therefore the youth and maiden in love and pledged to one another may kiss and hold one another in their arms with hearts as pure as ever hearts were.

But promiscuous "necking" is another matter. If the girl who does it knew something of sex history and realized how exactly she follows the example of the ancient sisterhood of shame, she could not face her mirror again.

For "necking" with this boy and that is nothing more than playing with lust—deliberately arousing forces that have destroyed great and small—and in spirit differs not at all from the way of outcast women that all ages have segregated or somehow branded to declare their shame.

There's no sense in saying that boys demand it. It is man's way to take all he can get, but no man except a beast goes one step farther than silence and acceptance invite him.

Permitting a boy to "neck" as payment for taking you to a 30-cent movie would be the same, in spirit and in fact, as charging him 30 cents for the necking.

Love,
DAD.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

THEY are erroneous—the reports that have gone out that the Senate does not understand the pending dollar devaluation bill.

BARGERON.

At least, they are erroneous in so far as the members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee are concerned. The rather amazing thing, as developed in the hearing of Gov. Roy Young of the Boston Reserve Bank yesterday, is they well understand it, even its hidden import, but that the majority of them, under the Roosevelt lash, are for it nevertheless.

This is not true of the committee that handled the bill in the House. It is doubtful if the youthful Mr. Somers, the chairman of the House committee, ever had a bill of such importance in his hands before, much less responsibility for the committee consideration of it. I can't recall, in fact, any major legislation in Congress with which he has ever had to do. So amateurish is he, indeed, that he has swallowed hook, line and sinker the propaganda that haste in the passage of the bill is necessary so the Government will have the stabilization fund with which to combat Great Britain and France.

• • • •

But with the members of the Senate Banking and Finance Committee it is different. They expressed not the slightest surprise when Mr. Young pointed out that the bill would displace the Reserve System and turn the country's credit system over to the Secretary of the Treasury, or words to this effect. All of them knew that the bill would do this. But what the Administration stalwarts on the committee were apparently most concerned about was that Mr. Young should not be permitted to make his point too emphatically.

They would only permit a few words from him and then some one or two Administration defenders would drown him out. It was a fine demonstration of how things have changed.

• • • •

There was a time when Mr. Young or any of the other Reserve System powers was listened to most attentively by the committee. And because of this the powers developed such a mild manner of speech that they haven't a chance in the din of today. It was apparent that Mr. Young had a lot on his chest yesterday, but the mild-manneredness of old served him badly. About all he said, in fact, was that under the bill the Federal Reserve System became nothing but a mechanical setup, that its powers went to the Treasury Secretary. Then he closed up.

His statement was almost instantly lost in the splurge of Senator Jimmy Byrnes. What virtue accrued to a man simply because he was a Federal Reserve governor that the Treasury Secetary couldn't have, Jimmy wanted to know.

Then when Mr. Young answered quietly, in effect, that it was not the virtue of one man under the Reserve System but of 108 directors of Federal Reserve banks, 12 governors and 8 members of the board, Jimmy utterly floored him with the observation that the Treasury Secretary is the appointee of the President, who is responsible to 130,000,000 people.

Hot dog! You can't beat such arguments as that, not these days. In another day, Mr. Young might have answered that a President with the country's credit system in his control does not have to be responsible to anybody.

• • • •

And had Mr. Young been most argumentative and not inflicted with a mild-manneredness that simply will not go these days, he might have asked Jimmy to apply his argument to Congress. With a President so responsive to the people as is Mr. Roosevelt, why go to the expense of maintaining a Congress? Particularly when we need money so badly.

But Mr. Young was not argumentative in the least. Why, do you know he didn't even suggest that the bill should not be passed. He just timidly asked that the killing of the Reserve System be temporary, not permanent.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

George Eliot.

Once upon a time three distinguished men were talking together about George Eliot, and discussing the question as to which of her novels was the best. The three men were her husband, George Lewes; a professor at Columbia University, Hjalmar H. Boyesen, and the great Russian novelist, Turgenev. Mr. Lewes thought her last one, "Daniel Deronda," was the best. That is certainly the way a husband ought to think, although the world has decided it is her worst; Prof. Boyesen voted for "Middlemarch," and the great Turgenev for "The Mill on the Floss."

Now while of the full-length novels "The Mill on the Floss" is probably the finest, even finer than "Adam Bede," her early short stories are undoubtedly the best things she ever did. She began her career with three short tales, afterward collected under the title, "Scenes of Clerical Life." These were "The Sad Fortunes of the Reverend Amos Barton," "Mr. Gilfil's Love Story" and "Janet's Repentance." Not long after, she wrote that marvelous miniature novel, "Silas Marner."

Radio Waves and Ripples

N.B.C. has decided that mountain music has been played and sung long enough by professional hillbillies, the majority of whom seldom set foot off Broadway.

It also has come to the conclusion that the radio audience should know just how much Tin Pan Alley owes these native music makers.

Both notions have been tied together in a new series of programs to start next month. In the first broadcast, a concert orchestra will play selections from works of modern American composers to illustrate their use of the ancient folk songs as thematic material. For subsequent broadcasts, old timers will be brought into N.B.C. studios in Richmond and Nashville to sing and play their tunes just as they are sung and played in the hills of the South.

These songs and tunes have passed orally from generation to generation from old English sources. Most of those to be heard in the series never have been written or harmonized. They will be sung for the most part without accompaniment.

No week-end is complete without an announcement from Columbia of a half dozen or so speeches. This one is no exception, the policy apparently being to allow the things to pile up.

First there is the Prince of Wales, broadcasting in Eangland on "Unemployment Relief Measures and Results," which C. B. S. feels should be worth picking up January 27. Then, Gen. Johnson is making another address in Worcester, Mass., January 25, which Columbia will air exclusively. Assistant Secretary of Interior Oscar L. Chapman will be heard January 23 on "PWA Effect on Industry and Who Must Pay the Cost."

Jane Froman having decided at the last minute upon a brief Florida vacation, Mildred Bailey has been substituted on the Seven-Star Revue show tomorrow at 9 p. m.

N. B. C. is beginning to cast warm glances in the direction of WLW, Cincinnati, which will have the world's most powerful broadcasting station when it transfers to its new 500,000-watt transmitter.

Already WLW is supplying the WJZ chain with a weekly feature in Frank Simon's Bard on Friday nights. Starting next week, it will provide another Friday night program, "The Flying Dutchman," a variety show.

Trade and Mark on Air Tonight

Trade and Mark, in one of their tweaking moods. Known outside the studios as Billy Hillpot (tweaking) and Scrappy Lambert (tweaked), the boys go on the air tonight with C. B. S. at 8:45.

This one goes to the WEAF chain.

Development and progress of American art from the time of the painters who accompanied the early explorers in recording the New World in oils for the benefit of the folks back home, has been worked out in dramatic form for N. B. C.

So the listener may better understand the subjects considered, reproductions of famous American pictures and an illustrated guide book are being prepared for distribution. As an additional aid, each broadcast will be based on paintings or exhibits available for inspection at a museum in some American city, and, whenever possible, a director of the museum will be heard during the program.

Dick Powell, Hollywood's No. 1 musical film man, will be attached to the new series with Ted Fiorito's orchestra for three performances as singing master-of-ceremonies starting February 7 . . . the Roosevelt dollar as viewed by a British monetary expert is a C. More Gallinger Nurses Asked of Mrs. Norton Legislation authorizing appointment of 10 additional graduate nurses and 30 more orderlies at Gallinger Hospital was asked of Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday by C. C. West, president of the Gallinger Lodge of the American Federation of Government Employes.

In his letter, West said the present staff is inadequate and many employes have to work 12 hours daily. Mrs. Norton suggested that the District Commissioners be asked to draft a bill to relieve the situation.

Britain Plans Airway And Mail Expansions

London, Jan. 19 (AP).—The Morning Post said today a cabinet committee was considering steps to launch an intensive period of air communication expansion and was studying routes between England and Canada and England-Australia.

The paper said the committee sought to develop an air mail service comparable with that in the United States, and that expansion would include faster service and a modified subsidy system.

Countess to Present Song Concert Today

Program at Sulgrave Club by Countess Piercy di Mignano, Guest of Spanish Envoy, Is Sequel to Concert, Followed by Reception, at Embassy.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Countess Piercy di Mignano will give a concert of French, German, Italian and Rumanian songs this afternoon in the Sulgrave Club at 4 o'clock.

Countess Mignano is the guest of the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Cardenas, and on Thursday evening the embassy was the scene of a reception and concert followed by supper. Countess Mignano, who is the daughter of the Duke of Mignano, an Italian, and of a Rumanian mother, gave the program.

The countess has a beautiful contralto voice, well suited to a group of charming Rumanian songs included in the program. Mrs. Mildred Schulze accompanied the artist.

The music room of the embassy, with its softly tinted green walls, was a fitting background for the distinguished company gathered there. At one end is a handsome brocaded hanging of a shade of green deeper than that of the walls, against which the piano and a large bowl of white calla lilies were silhouetted. The countess wore a gown of midnight blue moire threaded with gold and fashioned with puffed pannieres on either side.

Supper Is Served After Reception.

The Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas received the guests in the large drawing room adjoining the music room, the latter wearing a gown of pale gold, stiff brocade fashioned with a draped shoulder line and a bell-shaped skirt.

Following the concert the guests gathered in the drawing rooms and patio of the embassy where small tables had been placed for supper. Glimpsed during the evening were the Military Attache of the British Embassy, Col. Maurice Fitzmaurice Day, chatting with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey and Mr. and Mrs. Matthews Dick; the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, chatting with the charming Mrs. Harold Sims, wife of the Attache of the British Embassy, and Mr. Sims, who was busily engaged with the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Baroness Beck-Friis. Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts, and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts, were present, Mrs. Roberts wearing a corsage of "orchids, a birthday present from Owen." Others were the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel Frevrey Santander, and Mrs. Franklin Mott Gunther, talking to Mrs. John Caswell, who was a picture in a gown of black Lyons velvet fashioned with a pleated Elizabethan collar; the Attache of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Walravens, the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva, who arrived rather late from a dinner at the Argentine Embassy. Mme. de Lima was wearing a smart gown of deep gold taffeta fashioned on bouffant lines. Her sister, Mme. Nano, wife of the Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, was in a severely simple gown of black velvet, ornamented with a single pink rose. Signora Sbernadori, wife of the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy, wore a gown of black taffeta. Mlle. Simone Gaucheron, sister of the First Secretary of the French Embassy, was among the guests.

White House Guests Join Group.

Others present were the Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther; the Minister of Norway and Mme. Bachke, accompanied by their guest, Mme. Eide Norena, Metropolitan Opera soprano; the Minister of Canada and Mrs. William Duncan Herridge, the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Baroness van Bruegel, and Mrs. Natalie Prichett, who has recently returned from New York. Mrs. Prichett wore a gown of cloth of gold with a long train, and bands of sable on the shoulders. Her tiara was of ancient Egyptian gold and emeralds.

A large group who joined the party after the reception at the White House included Senator and Mrs. W. Warren Barbour, Representative and Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom; Capt. and Mrs. Walter N. Vernou, and Senator and Mrs. Henry Ashurst. Mrs. James M. Beck, wife of Representative Beck, was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. S. Pinckney Tuck, and the dapper Senator from Illinois, J. Hamilton Lewis, was accompanied by Mrs. Lewis.

Mr. and Mrs. Irwin B. Laughlin had with them their debutante daughter, Miss Gertrude Laughlin, who wore a simple frock of pale blue crepe fashioned with cape sleeves. Others there were Mme. van Kasthoven, Miss Josephine Patten, Mr. Ralph Hill, Mr. and Mrs. John Phillip Hill, Mrs. Alex Legare and Mrs. Waggamann Culver.

Breasted Scenario Guests Are Dined

Mrs. Greenway Is Hostess at Buffet Supper.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr entertained at dinner last evening in honor of the former Commissioner of Indian Affairs and Mrs. Charles J. Rhoads, of Philadelphia.

The guests, numbering sixteen, included the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, and the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter.

Mrs. Rhoads and her niece, Miss Louise Gurney Fugue, came to Washington early in the week, and were joined by Mr. Rhoads yesterday at the Sulgrave Club, where they are stopping.

Mrs. Quinter And Mr. Smith To Wed Today

Ceremony in New York For Couple Planning to Reside Here.

The wedding of Mrs. Grace Bagge Quinter to Mr. J. W. Rixey Smith will take place today at noon in the Little Church Around the Corner, in New York. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Russell Bowie, of Grace Church. The only attendants will be Mr. and Mrs. Homer Millard, of Washington.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. Jacob Bagge, who was vice consul at Stockholm, Sweden, in 1917. She is the widow of the late Mr. Richard Quinter, of Washington.

Mr. Smith, who comes from a long line of famous Virginians, is the son of Mr. John W. Smith, of Basic City, Va., and is a cousin of Representative Howard Smith, of Virginia. He is secretary to Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia.

Mr. Smith and his bride will return to the Capital on Monday and make their home at the Westchester. On the adjournment of Congress they will go to Florida for an indefinite stay.

Members of Bridal Party Entertained

Mr. McClenahan to Wed Miss Phillips Today.

Representative Isabella Greenway entertained informally in her home last evening at a buffet supper following a presentation of the National Geographical Scenario, which is a summary of the research and photography that has been done by Prof. James Breasted of the Chicago Oriental Institute.

The guests included Dr. Breasted, who is a house guest of Mrs. Greenway's, and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James Breasted, jr., and some of their close friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Rhoads Honored at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Carr Hosts to Couple.

Mrs. Alvin T. Hert entertained at luncheon yesterday afternoon at the Sulgrave Club in honor of Miss Sallie Hews Phillips, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips, whose marriage to Mr. Robert Wallace McClenahan will take place today. The guests were the members of the bridal party.

Miss Anne Carter Greene entertained the wedding party last evening after the rehearsal, and Miss Olivia Phelps Stokes entertained at dinner last evening when her guests were the members of the bridal party and the out-of-town guests.

McCormick House Emptied By Moving Vans

Rich Furnishings of 34 Rooms Go for Low Bids.

Chicago, Jan. 19 (AP).—Moving vans and trucks, backed in at the gray turreted mansion on Lake Shore drive, are carting away the rich furnishings that belonged to the late Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick.

The contents of the 34-room mansion, much of it appraised as museum pieces, was sold at auction and realized a total of $47,512.50.

With the furnishings of Villa Turicum, Mrs. McCormick's Lake Forest estate, yet to be sold to the highest bidder, the personal property of the social arbiter, whose wealth was once rated at $50,000,000, is going under the hammer to satisfy claims against the estate.

Mrs. McCormick's daughter, Muriel, now Mrs. Elisha Dyer Hubbard, was an avid bidder of her mother's possessions, both in New York and Chicago.

She was successful in securing for a bid of $935 the furnishings of her mother's room in the town house with the exception of a day bed, which went to a close friend of the late social leader.

Mrs. McCormick's room on the second floor was furnished in Louis XIV period with most of the pieces imported from Paris. They included a carved and gilded bedstead with rose taffeta canopy, which went to Mrs. Hubbard for $100. A French nineteenth century Louis Philippe Aubusson carpet cost Mrs. Hubbard $300.

As Mrs. Hubbard was bidding in the Louis XVI finely carved marble mantelpiece, which she obtained for $55, some one raised a window shade and across Lake Shore drive could be seen the fourth-story window of the room in the Drake Hotel where the daughter of John D. Rockefeller, sr., died in August, 1932.

The One After Another Squeeze.

In the play of the hand I am sure that more players get a great degree of satisfaction out of the development of squeezes and forced lead plays than from any other standard form of brilliant Dummy play at the Bridge table. This is natural enough because both of these plays are based primarily upon accurate reading of the opposing distribution; the player must know, in the case of a Forced lead, which opponent to throw into the lead and, in the case of a squeeze, just how the power of the combined hands is to be utilized so as to force the defense to crumble and permit the fulfillment of what appears at first flush to be an unmakable contract.

The hand below was submitted to me by Mr. Ralph Moulton, of Ambridge, Pa., who states that it was played in a four-table Howell game. At three of the tables the bidding stopped at six notrump. At the fourth table, however, the contract of seven notrump was reached, which was made by means of a double squeeze.

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ 10 9 5 4 ♡ 10 9 7 6 ◇ J 2 ♣ 8 6 3
♠ K J 6 ♡ A J 2 ◇ A Q 5 ♣ K J 4 2	N W E S	♠ A 8 7 2 ♡ Q 3 ◇ K 9 8 3 ♣ A Q 7
	♠ Q 3 ♡ K 8 5 4 ◇ 10 7 6 4 ♣ 10 9 5

The actual bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1NT	Pass	3NT
Pass	7NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

I, myself, would have preferred an Opening bid of one club to the bid of one notrump made by West. However, the East and West pair were basing their notrump bids on the high honor-trick requirements of the Culbertson System, and thus East, after the Opening bid, felt sure of a game and thought there was some prospect of a Slam. His direct Raise to three notrump is certainly fully justified. The subsequent bidding was perhaps slightly unusual.

North's Opening lead was the heart six. The three was played from Dummy and South played the eight, the Declarer winning the trick with the Knave. Three rounds of clubs then followed, as well as three rounds of diamonds, the last diamond being taken with the King in Dummy. On the seventh trick North discarded a heart, and the Declarer now knew that his hand had contained originally eight cards in hearts and spades. Inasmuch as the Opening lead was the heart six and his discard was the heart seven, it seemed reasonably certain that he had held four spades and four hearts, in addition to his holding in the minor suits.

At this point the Declarer led a small spade from Dummy and finessed the Knave, possibly a dangerous play, but apparently essential. The spade King was then laid down for the ninth trick, and with the lead still in the Declarer's hand, the situation was as follows:

	♠ 10 9 ♡ 10 9 ◇ — ♣ —
	♠ — ♡ K 8 5 ◇ 10 ♣ —

The next lead was the Knave of clubs, which squeezed North, who was forced to discard a heart. The spade eight was now discarded from Dummy, and South, forced to retain the diamond ten, also surrendered a heart. The spade six was now led to Dummy's Ace, North followed suit, and South was again forced to part with a heart as otherwise the diamond nine would be a trick winner. The last two tricks were won by Declarer with the Ace and two of hearts.

Actors Present Their Own Fete In Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 19 (AP).—Several hundred thousand of dollars' worth of talent performed for the amusements of millions of dollars' worth—or, in other wards, the Screen Actors' Guild held its first ball.

The motion picture colony turned out en masse, and from its gilded ranks produced a show that in ordinary theatrical bargaining would command salaries in six, or maybe seven, figures.

The guild, founded last year as an organization of actors for actors with many members resigning from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences to join, held its dinner dance and supper vaudeville show in the month when the academy had planned its annual banquet for the awarding of its yearly honors to members.

Star gazers lined corridors to watch the entrance of the celebrities arrive to attend the dinner at $25 a couple. Practically the whole Hollywood "hall of fame" was present.

First on the program were Ted Healy and his "Stooges." Jeannette MacDonald sang a song, Johnny Boyle and his young son tap-danced, and Jimmy Durante convulsed the assemblage with his piano recitation about the fellow who wanted to bet with him. Hal Leroy danced and John Boles sang. Rudy Vallee, billed as master of ceremonies, was not present.

A Radiant Daughter of the Lowly Poor Has Made Gowns for Three of Our First Ladies

A little girl who was born on New York's East Side grew up to be one of the leading dress designers in America. Sally Noble Milgrim has gowned three Presidents' wives, including the present First Lady.

Grid Star Just A "Clumsy Ox" On Dance Floor

He's Not Much at Romance Either, Says Dancing Expert.

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—The football star may be a hero on the gridiron, but he's just a "clumsy ox" on the dance floor.

That was the opinion expressed today by Arthur Murray, president of the National Institute of Social Dancing, who contends athletes are "the world's worst dancers."

All other things being equal, Murray declared the big, brawny he-man with bulging muscles invariably will lose in the game of love to the man who knows his stuff on a waxed floor.

"The reason for that," he explained, "is that when a girl is choosing a husband she will pick the man she can enjoy dancing with 12 months a year. The football hero may captivate her for two or three months out of the year, but the rest of the time he is just a clumsy ox."

Murray issued a solemn warning to youths planning to seek fame and fortune in the prize ring or on the baseball diamond. If they follow such callings, he said, they will find themselves "a total loss" when they meet "the girl of their dreams" and discover she is a fox-trot addict.

"Ah, but it's sad to watch them," sighed Murray. "On the football field or in the ring they are amazingly light of foot. But get them out on a dance floor and they lumber around like men on stilts.

"I remember when I was at Georgia Tech there was a big handsome brute who was a football idol at the time. A girl I knew was very keen to meet him, and she finally did. It was at a fraternity dance. Well, she was all a-flutter when they started to dance, but——"

Murray shut his eyes in pain at the memory—"the next thing I saw she was beckoning frantically to some pipsqueak to cut in on them.

Athletes, he continued, are too muscle-bound to learn dancing. He included acrobatic and ballet dancers in the athlete category, saying that while they may be graceful in their own line they are "flops in the ballroom."

Women athletes are no exception, he added. Dancing with a muscled lady is "just like dancing with a man."

"Better to be fat than muscular," he concluded, "for fat people at least are buoyant."

Alabamans Prepare For Closed Schools

Plan Private System to Replace Public.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 19 (AP).—A revival of private schools, prevalent a generation ago, is impending in this section of Alabama contingent upon the materialization of threats to close the public schools for lack of funds.

Unless money comes from some unexpected source, all State-maintained schools in Montgomery County, including the capital city of Alabama, will have exhausted their operating revenue by January 19.

Preparing for what seems to be the inevitable, Dr. W. R. Harrison, superintendent of the Montgomery city schools, and patrons are seeking to form an organization designed to set up and maintain a system by private subscriptions.

The tentative plan would have the teachers continue their classes as heretofore, except that they would be paid privately rather than have their salaries come from public funds. The suggestion has been made that the financing be based on a system of collecting tuition from the pupils. And that has been interpreted in some quarters as meaning the doors would be open only to children whose parents could afford to pay the assessments.

The city board of education expressed sympathy for the plan but made plain it could take no part in establishing private schools.

First Lady Explains Her Early Departure

Symphony concert goers who leave early might learn a lesson from the First Lady of the land.

Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, received a phone call at the Arts Club before the concert last Thursday afternoon. It was Mrs. Roosevelt.

"I have a dinner engagement tonight and am afraid I won't be able to hear all the concert today," she explained. "You won't be offended if I leave early, will you? It isn't that I'm not interested in the music, you understand."

Dr. Kindler understood.

Only Woman Shoemaker Finds Trade Profitable

Buffalo, N. Y. (AP).—Mrs. Clara Westcott, of Buffalo, says she is the only woman "shoemaker" in the country, and a National shoemakers' trade paper supports her claim. She operates her own shoe repair shop, working with her employes, and she says she can half-sole with the best of them.

Mrs. Westcott went into the business when the price she had to pay to have a pair of shoes half-soled four years ago set her wondering about the profits in shoe repairing. Investigation satisfied her the field was promising, and she took what little money she had and opened her shop. Her husband has been ill for years, and she has had to support herself.

Fritzi Scheff Sings to Pay Her Mortgage

Star Made Famous by Victor Herbert Now "Alone and on Her Own."

New York, Jan. 19 (U.P.).—The voice of Fritzi Scheff, acclaimed in the days when women wore bustles and the gasoline buggies were first appearing, as one of the greatest on the light opera stage, today entertained patrons of a hotel taproom.

Miss Scheff was made famous by Victor Herbert, and she made one of his tuneful ballads the song everyone sang. The tune was "Kiss Me Again." It once made lovers hold hands, and still does.

Miss Scheff needs $1,000 to pay off the mortgage on her home near Waterbury, Conn.

Fritzi Scheff was born in Vienna and came to New York to sing at the Metropolitan Opero at a then fabulous salary.

Her life has been as glamorous as her songs. Baron von Bardeleben, a captain of the German hussars, came to America, became a postcard manufacturer, and married Fritzi.

Her next love was John Fox, jr. He wrote "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Then she married George Anderson. Now she is Fritzi Scheff once more, alone and on her own.

Paralysis Patients' Ball Rehearsal Set

Roosevelt Birthday Cake Ready in Georgia.

Warm Springs, Ga., Jan. 19. (AP). Dress rehearsal for exercises to be held at the cutting of President Roosevelt's birthday cake here January 30 has been called for Saturday.

Balls will be held simultaneously in many cities to raise funds to carry on the curative work.

It is estimated 10,000 will attend the ball at Louisville, Ky., and ticket sales at Fort Worth, Tex., already exceed $10,000.

Virginia Considers Sterilization Bill

Provides for Voluntary Measures in Cases of Affliction.

State Capitol, Richmond, Va., Jan. 19 (AP).—A bill to permit the voluntary sterilization of persons afflicted with insanity, epilepsy of feeble-mindedness was introduced in the House today.

Persons suspected of affliction with insanity or feeble-mindedness would be brought before a lunacy commission as provided by present law, and upon recommendation of the commission, might consent through parent, the commission, near relative or next friend to voluntary eugenic sterilization.

Also when a person is brought before a luncy commission, and found so afflicted and the commission decides it would not be against the public interest for such person to have liberty except through danger of propagation of defective offspring, the afflicted person would be permitted to choose eugenic sterilization in lieu of commitment to a hospital for the insane.

Dr. Willson Denounces A. M. A.'s Birth Control Stand

Its "Hands Are Unclean," He Charges, in Speech at Hearing.

By Elizabeth Young.

Under orders to restrain their applause, several hundred men and women sat tensely on the edges of their seats yesterday as members of the medical profession crossed swords in the closing day's testimony before the House Judiciary Committee's hearing on merits of the Pierce birth-control bill.

"The American Medical Association comes into this meeting with unclean hands when, as a political organization, it refuses even to study what as a medical group it lists as one of the four major problems affecting the health of womanhood in America: Need for birth control," Dr. Prentiss Wilson, Washington obstetrician, president of the District of Columbia Medical Association and member of the national assocaition, told the committee in late afternoon.

Politics and Science.

"The American Medical Association is both a political and a scientific body. And it evidently believes in the old adage, 'Don't let your left hand know what your right hand is doing.'" He declared it a matter of record that the association's committee on maternal welfare had advocated that the subject of birth control be studied by the association and that in May, 1925, the gynecological section of the group had indorsed the purport of the proposed birth-control legislation.

Earlier in the day Dr. Henry J. Crosson, also of Washington, speaking for Dr. William Gerry Morgan, noted specialist and past president of the American Medical Association, had declared:

"This is not a physician's bill," and had read a telegram from Dr. Morgan voicing his "continued vigorous opposition" to the proposed change in the criminal code to permit medical dissemiantion of birth-control information.

Dr. Joseph J. Mundell, professor of obstetrics at Georgetown University, had disclaimed necessity for chemical and mechanical means of birth control—advocated by proponents of the Pierce bill—on the ground that "there is now available scientific medical advice which definitely safeguards women against pregnancy."

The internationally known pathologist, Dr. Henry W. Cattell, who said he is a Presbyterian, appeared and opposed birth control as contrary to Christian morality. He demanded to know why Mrs. Margaret Sanger did not respond to the challenge to debate the merits of birth control in open forum at Galveston a year ago.

In opposing his testimony to these and others who contested the advisability of legalized dissemination of birth control information, Dr. Willson struck out boldly with the statement:

"I make my living helping women to have babies. For nearly a quarter of a century the profession of obstetrics has provided my source of income. I have no axe to grind in appearing here on behalf of birth control.

"Why am I opposed to continuing this obsolete and archaic statute? Because as a private citizen, in common with a great many others, I resent this type of legislation. You can't legislate morality into this country, any more than you could legislate the desire not to take an alcoholic beverage for beverage purposes."

He said the dread of pregnancy hangs over the vast majority of mothers from month to month "like the sword of Damocles."

Other Speakers Present Many Views on Legislation.

"If it is a natural law that the number of births be not controlled, then so is it a natural law for children to die of smallpox. Are we to go back to the law of the jungle so far as control of population is concerned? Is it to be controlled alone by war, pestilence and famine?"

Exuberant applause which intermittently broke out among proponents of the Pierce bill at favorable testimony of witnesses had been bruskly checked earlier in the day by Mrs. Thomas N. Hepburn, legislative chairman of the National Committee for Federal Legislation on Birth Control, with the comment:

"We take it for granted that everybody agrees with sensible minds."

No Hand Clapping.

The attractive Mrs. Hepburn, who bears a striking resemblance to her famous actress-daughter, Katherine, had registered disapproval of hand-clapping demonstrations after the excited audience had given a lusty "hand" to the remarks of Mrs. Fred C. Thompson, of Takoma, Wash.

Mrs. Thompson, who is the wife of a minister and assistant superintendent of the Tacoma Community House, told the committee she had paid her own expenses across the continent to urge the cause of birth control.

"One to ten women come to see me every day of my life, asking me to tell them how to keep from having more babies," she said. "I have come here to get the right to such information and take it back to them."

On the other hand, William F. Montavan, director of the legal department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, contended passage of the Pierce bill would enable "diploma mill" physicians to conduct "campaigns against the morals of young girls."

Congresswoman Clarke Finds Pleasure in Legislative Job

She Is Here in the Place of Her Late Husband, Representative John D. Clarke, Whose Work She Used to Follow Carefully From the Gallery.

It's just like going to school again, this business of being in Congress.

"I feel as if I ought to take my notebook and pencil along, and at least a couple of textbooks," Representative Marian Clarke, of New York, confided yesterday.

In a December election, Mrs. Clarke was called upon to take the place of her husband, the late Representative John D. Clarke.

"It all happened so quickly and so unexpectedly that I'm still a bit breathless!" she said. Mrs. Clarke sat at her desk in the House Office Building looking a little lost in the large room still not ready for "housekeeping." She was wearing a black ribbed silk dress cut in tailored fashion. Her hair, a mass of iron gray curls, was piled high on her head.

Still Like a Dream.

"You know," she explained, looking around at the bare bookcases and bleak walls, "I only had six days after the election to close up my home, pack, come to Washington, and get settled here.

"It still seems a bit like a dream to me, but I'll get over that, I'm sure. Sitting down there in the House makes me feel like a freshman in college. I remember so well how strange and incongruous everything seemed to me then—in all except one class."

She hesitated as though not knowing whether to explain or not. After a moment's silence, she continued, smiling a bit timidly, "That was the class my husband taught!"

"After he graduated from Princeton he came out to Colorado Springs for his health and got a job teaching public speaking. That's when I met him. He was my professor.

"At the end of the course he called me to him and said he hated to discourage me but he felt in duty bound to tell me I never would be an orator. In fact, he explained that he really shouldn't pass me in the course but he would stretch a point and let me by on my written work.

She Made Speeches.

"Suppose somebody had told us then that there'd come a day when I'd be making campaign speeches for him, and then later for myself!

"You see I was always terribly interested in my husband's work and followed his activities very closely. It was a rare day that didn't find me in the gallery all eyes and ears for what was going on.

"Since I've been on the floor—maybe it's because I'm so new yet—I have a terrible time concentrating on account of all the confusion. And sometimes I can't hear a word. Of course," she added, "my ears are gallery trained.

"I'll gradually get used to it, I feel sure. Occasionally now I seem to see a glimmering of the system and organization which goes on underneath this surface confusion."

Mrs. Clarke said that she just couldn't believe she was there sometimes. "I have to pinch myself, really I do! It's just one of those queer, queer things that happen to us suddenly, and leave us a little bit dazed.

"I wanted dreadfully to come, of course. I felt the need of some absorbing work. And," she added, with an expressive glance at the papers piled high on her desk, "I certainly think I've found it!"

Green Bath Will Drive Away The Blues, 'Arty' Doctor Says

San Francisco, Jan. 19 (U.P.).—If it's the blues you have, then you need a color bath of yellow light, but if it's a torpid liver, green light should be prescribed, Dr. Ernest J. Stevens, "color doctor" extraordinary, revealed.

For the blues, fallen arches or anemia you should use Stevens' light and color bath, he recommended.

But, of course, if you're a policeman and want to determine whether a man is lying, you should use Stevens' pocket sanitarium and voice controller, an invention, the doctor whispered, that is even greater than any lie detector now in use.

The doctor, it should be explained, is the writer of 1,600 epigrams, 500 poems, innumerable books, inventor of 39 contrivances for light, color and air, painter, lecturer, Ph. D., MSC. and M. A.

Every person is surrounded by a color aura, he said, and he has found there are 50,000 shades of color.

"These color auras are visible to the advanced student of color, and photographable," he said. "Yellow denotes a religious type; red a sanguine, materialistic type, and violet a spiritual type. A person's color shifts with his moods.

Sally Milgrim's Career Began On New York's East Side

But the Tiny Shop Whose Proprietor She Married Drew Stylish Women From "Uptown," Before it Moved Up on the Merit of Its Wonderful Designs.

A new gown—what a tremendous thrill its possession brings to a woman—whether it is made of crisp dainty cotton or of gleaming metallic brocade—whether it is cut and sewed by the "little dressmaker around the corner" or whether it is created by the flaming genius of one of the great designers. But there is one thing sure: it is the great designers who are eagerly watched and avidly copied. The styles for women from Argentine to Finland are set by a mere handful of men and women comprising the haute couture.

This is the last in a series of 18 articles telling the stories of the world's great dressmakers.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Some members of the French haute couture make a great to-do over the fact that they create costumes for members of royalty. At least one American couturiere can answer their boasts by replying that she has gowned three President's wives.

Sally Milgrim created the beautiful blue gown that Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt wore at the inaugural ball. She has just completed the costume the First Lady will wear at the birthday ball. Milgrim also dressed Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Coolidge when they made their home at the White House.

Several times in the course of the Harding and Coolidge regimes the designer came down from New York with members of her staff and presented fashion shows at the Executive Mansion for the presidential families.

Child of East Side.

If anyone had told Sally Milgrim when she was a child on New York's East Side that some day the First Lady of the United States would turn to her for her clothes, Sally would not have been much surprised. She had magnificent self-confidence and knew within herself that she would not spend all her life in squalid surroundings.

She made the first step up when, as a luscious looking young girl named Sally Noble, she became a mannequin for Milgrim Brothers, who had a shop in Second avenue. That was in the day when well-dressed women practically lived in tailored suits and the Milgrim's had become particularly deft in making that type of costume; so much so that fashionable women from uptown went "slumming" to the little shop in Second avenue for their suits.

The delectable Sally was almost as big an attraction as the skillful sewing of the Milgrim Brothers. She had an unerring sense for the right lines and the most becoming colors. Gradually the clients began to ask her opinions about this and that and Sally, hugely flattered, advised them concerning the clothes that would be most becoming to them.

A Change of Name.

But modeling tailored suits and making suggestions didn't occupy all her time. She managed to find sufficient leisure in which to have some heart throbs over Charles, the youngest of the Milgrim Brothers. After a few months as a mannequin Sally Noble became Sally Milgrim.

Soon after the wedding there came a revolution in women's styles. Tailored suits did a fade-out. Casual daytime dresses, sauve afternoon frocks, and scintillating evening gowns appeared upon the scene. The bride noticed the trend before it had gained much momentum and persuaded the Milgrims to let her try designing the new type of clothes. Her things were enormously successful. The fashionable women who had come "slumming" from their tailleurs continued to come to the little Second avenue shop for street, afternoon, and evening dresses. Sally became the most important member of the Milgrim family.

It wasn't long after her debut as a designer before larger quarters were needed. Luxurious salons and spacious workrooms were arranged in a large building at Broadway and Seventy-fourth street. The establishment was known simply as Milgrim.

The little bride, by virtue of her shining talents, had gracefully shoved the "Brothers" into the background.

The Stars Stopped.

The Broadway salons soon became the headquarters for brilliant stars of the stage and leaders of the social set. The actresses were so enthusiastic about the personal wardrobes they obtained from Milgrim that they called the attention of producers to the young designer who had come up from the East Side.

The producers agreed with the actresses. Milgrim clothes certainly had "something"—and a great deal of it too. They commissioned the new couturiere to costume their plays and for years it was almost impossible to pick up a theater program without finding "Gowns by Milgrim" printed somewhere within its pages.

A large number of shows are still costumed by this designer; but, since moving in 1929 to smart Fifty-seventh street, just off Fifth avenue, she has built up an important and exclusive off-stage clientele that keeps her rushed the year round. Many designers have been added to the staff, making it possible to create literally thousands of garments every 12 months.

Sally Milgrim still maintains her own studio where she makes models for her favorite customers, including Mrs. Roosevelt. She makes no sketches and dresses no dolls. She creates her designs on a live mannequin, planning them as she goes along.

A Brilliant Personage.

This couturier says she gets most of her ideas while she is among people or while she is traveling.

She is also quite a figure at brilliant restaurants and sparkling night clubs. But, as much as she loves crowds and frivolous affairs, she loves quiet hours at home even more. In that home are two small sons who are not a bit impressed with the fact that some of mother's creations, including Mrs. Roosevelt's inaugural ball gown, are reposing in dignified museums. To them, "Mummy" is a jolly playfellow and an unexcelled teller of bedtime stories.

New Wardrobe Contains Smart Spring Apparel

Designer Drapes Garment, Drawn by Artist, to Suit Individual.

New York, Pan. 19 (AP).—Here is a spring wardrobe created by a leading American designer for a smart New Yorker:

Three suits, two wool dresses and a coat that will go with both, a one-piece crepe dress, three evening gowns, one evening wrap and a tea gown.

The designer is young Muriel King, who is widely known after a year and a half in the field. She begins with an artist's drawing, directs the draping and modifies fashion to individual needs.

Suits of Blue Wool.

The three suits are a brilliant blue wool with a short unfitted coat and enormous revers; a dark red wool worn with a navy blue sweater, a velveteen jacket with side fastenings, and a navy blue polka dotted scarf; and, for early summer, a white two-piece suit of mixed silk and wool, worn with a dark blue blouse.

The coat is cut seamen's style, of men's overcoat material in navy blue. It has a self belt, an inverted pleat in the back, and tucks like chevrons on the sleeve.

With it goes a two-piece chamois-colored wool dress with silver eyelets tied in three places down the front; also a smooth wool dress of pale sandy beige modeled on a lion-tamer's suit. This dress fits as if the wearer were poured in, and has copper buttons that protrude three-fourths of an inch.

Tea Gown and Two Coats.

The evening dresses are a canary yellow moire, a gray sheer and one of brown point d'esprit worn over a gray slip. All are cut on very long lines, fitting the figure.

The evening wrap worn with these is of gray duvetyn. It fits the waist, reaches to the floor, and has a detachable capelet with narrow bands of brown fur.

The tea gown was modeled after a "house gown" of 1880. It is of mulberry satin. Narrow ruching edges its high neck. With it go two coats—a pink moire one with huge circular sleeve ruffles and one of pale blue bengaline.

Pink Feathers Adorn Hat.

Paris (AP).—Pink feathers gave a novel touch to a brown costume which appeared at a recent smart tea at the Meurice. The feathers, in a soft shade of dusty pink, appeared in a flat motif at the front of a turned-up brown felt hat. The frock was brown crepe with a touch of dusty pink crepe at the neckline. The coat was mink.

Checking Out for a Frolic

Sally Milgrim is justly famous for her town and travel suits. The latest version of this costume is in soft yellow and brown checks with carved wooden buttons and belt buckle. The coat is in the smart three-quarter length.

Cafe Explorers Find Something New in Cuisine

By Ruth Anne Davis.

It all came about as the result of one of those friendly arguments which are likely to start any time and last forever. We made the remark that eating places were fundamentally all alike, some pretty good, and some very bad, some with atmosphere, and others without, some high and others low. It sounded like a pretty sage summary to us so we just leaned back in our chair and blew smoke rings. The retort came like a bomb shell.

"If you think they're all alike—it shows you don't know your subject!"

We sputtered!

"If you want a luncheon which includes dishes you never heard of, much less tasted, if you want service which is out of the ordinary—I might say extraordinary—and genuine atmosphere, come on!"

We hailed a cab from The Post steps and took a five minutes' drive to a large red brick house, a short block from Connecticut avenue.

A Treat Unfolds.

So far it all looked rather commonplace. But when we entered, and a charming hostess stylishly gowned in her purple hat and dress came forward to greet us it became apparent that here was a place which might be extraordinary.

To the left of the door was a room with a large table almost completely covered with casserole dishes and bowls of salads, cold meats, breads, cheeses, meats and vegetables. And there was a huge tureen of soup, lentil soup!

We seated ourselves at a table and a waitress brought two steaming bowls brimming full, and placed them before us. After that we walked around the table and selected our own hors d'oeuvres. We had a choice of heavily spiced fruit salad, Scandinavian herring salad, pickled sill, asparagus tips (decidedly lovely in a large blue bowl lined with purple cabbage leaves), cold slaw, and numerous other delicacies. Besides there were at least a dozen kinds of pickles and cheeses.

After the hors d'oeuvres, we looked at the menu to order our main course, but the names so completely confused us—neither of us knowing one word of Scandinavian—that we decided to go out and look at them before choosing. The fish cakes looked so tempting that we couldn't resist them. There were at least four vegetables prepared so that they looked like works of art, and rich with a natural flaver. Some kind of spicy Scandinavian berries were served with a main course. Lingan berries, they were called.

——And Then Some More.

As though all this wern't enough, the waitress came around with a tray filled with pastries and other desserts for us to make our choice.

Although the food had occupied most of our attention we wern't beyond noticing that the luncheon guests, who sat around two large rooms in congenial groups were smartly gowned and obviously an appreciative and conservative clientele.

Heavy red drapes hung from the high windows, their deep mulberry color an artistic contrast to the blue, hand-woven Scandinavian cloths on the tables. The glasses were that heavy, churchly red, and the silver all bone-handled. The effect was at once simple, charming, and most extraordinary.

Temptation for Dieters.

A great many men who look back yearningly on their football days still aspire to that Adonis slimness and hope to recapture it by consistently refusing desserts. But nine out of ten of them can be tempted with these extraordinary cheeses on sale at a local food shop.

There are three kinds, all coming in little pottery jars resembling bean pots. There's Edam which has been soaked in sauterne; the Cheddar and Stilton, put up in Port. For a delicacy, any one of these will fill the ticket, and tickle the palate.

The housewife who has spent tedious time squeezing the juice from lemons, limes and oranges, will be glad to hear that a shop here is featuring a new juice extractor which makes it quite simple to obtain even apple juice. It looks like the nozzle to the garden hose. The base of it is sharpened so that it plugs into the fruit and the juice runs out of the pipe-like mouthpiece. It works excellently also on grapefruit and tomatoes. When the juice pours out it is already strained, and clear enough for immediate serving.

Sandwich Spread of Ham.

Old Virginia ham has come down from the platter and joined the rank and file of spreads. A downtown foodstore which specializes in "everything unusual" has some of this choice spread which they recommend highly for tea sandwiches. Thin slices of bread, cut in delicate shapes, lightly coated with butter, and spread with the ham make extremely delectable morsels.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

Lines to a Friend.

Peace is his who sleep tonight
Under roses red and white
Wisdom now is his who sought
God in every act and thought,
But behind his friendly door
We shall sit and talk no more.

High above the crowds that press
Seeking fortune and success
And the traffic's roar and hum
To his room he'd bid me come.
There as one who loved to dream
He would talk of sky and stream.

Open wide his heart would swing
Unto every living thing.
Great his faith that God must be
Close to all that mortals see,
Source of everything that's good,
If we only understood.

He who knew no doubt or fear
While he lived and labored here
Now has gained that wisdom which
Far excelleth treasures rich;
Found that great abundant love
Which he was so certain of.

Virginia Bread Recipe Awarded Weekly $5 Prize

Mrs. B. B. Brown, of Markham, Va., Says It Is 150 Years Old.

The recipe for Virginia salt rising bread submitted by Mrs. B. B. Brown, of Markham, Va., has been awarded the $5 weekly prize. This recipe has been used by the Brown family for generations. It is about 150 years old.

The food editor urges housewives to submit more old family recipes. She will be glad to consider them in the weekly prize recipe contest.

Even though this is the twentieth century, many of the old-time recipes still hold their own and the modern housewife finds it most convenient to have several tucked away for future reference.

Mrs. Brown's recipe follows:

Take two tablespoons of white corn meal and one tablespoon of flour, stir in a cup with enough boiling fresh milk to make a thin batter. Leave this batter in a warm place until morning. Then add to it one pint of luke warm water with one-quarter teaspoon salt and enough flour to make a stiff batter. Put the vessel containing this batter in a kettle of luke warm water and keep at even temperature until it rises (about three and one-half hours). When raised take one-quarter pint of warm (not hot) water, add one-quarter teaspoon salt and then to the batter, which should be very light, add flour enough to make very stiff dough. Knead well, make in loaves, two large or three small ones, set in a warm place to rise. When raised enough (it does not rise as high as yeast bread), bake about one hour.

It is delicious sliced or toasted.

Slow-Baked Rice Pudding With Lots of Raisins Is the Delight of All American Epicures

By Ann Barrett.

When it comes to rice pudding, the proof is in eating and no mistake. For (without one mite of variation in the ingredients) it can taste just so-so or simply grand. Of course, it's the grand kind that screen star Robert Montgomery means when he puts creamy rice pudding (with plenty of raisins) on a par with any dessert the world can boast.

How does a creamy rice pudding get so good? By being stingy with the rice, generous with the milk and downright pokey-slow with the baking. Then the rice will slowly swell its starch out into the milk, and the milk will slowly thicken into the consistency of rich cream, and the pudding will turn a beautiful ivory color, and when your family comes to eat it they will grow wide-eyed with astonishment that such a simple thing can taste so divine.

Creamy Rice Pudding.

If you know this already, you'll appreciate all the more why I'd like everybody else to know it. So I'm sure you won't mind my telling the recipe, which is: Wash 2 tablespoons rice, mix with one quart milk, 6 tablespoons sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg. Turn into a buttered baking dish. Dot top with 2 teaspoons butter. Put into a slow oven (300 F.) and keep the flame low. Stir occasionally, the first hour to keep rice from sticking. Bake another hour without stirring. Then mix in ½ cup seedless raisins. Bake another hour (3 hours in all) without stirring. Serve hot or cold.

This makes a very soft, creamy pudding. If you like your pudding just a little more solid, you may use as much as 3 or 4 tablespoons of rice without making the pudding too firm. In this case reduce the time of baking, because the rice will take up the milk faster. If you like quite a sweet pudding, use ½ cup sugar. For a good chocolate rice pudding, omit nutmeg and raisins, use ½ cup sugar and stir in 1½ squares (ounces) melted cooking chocolate before baking.

Raisin Rice Custard.

Raisin rice custard, another delicious pudding, starts with rice cooked in milk, like this: Scald 3 cups milk in top of double boiler. Add 3½ tablespoons rice (washed) and cook till tender. Then mix in 6 tablespoons sugar, 3 eggs (slightly beaten) ½ teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup seedless raisins, and ¼ teaspoon nutmeg or 1 teaspoon vanilla. Turn mixture into buttered baking dish, set this in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (not over 350 F.) till pointed knife plunged into center comes out clean (30 to 40 minutes). Serve hot with hard sauce or cream. Or cold with cream or fruit sauce.

(If you want to make this pudding with left-over cooked rice, use 2-3 cup of it with 2 (instead of 3) cups of milk. All other ingredients the same. Just mix and bake as directed.)

Lemon Rice Meringue.

For another good rice pudding (lemon rice meringue) start with 2-3 cup uncooked rice in the top of double boiler with 2 cups scalded milk. Cook till tender. Then mix in 1-3 cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 3 egg yolks (well-beaten). Turn mixture into greased baking dish. Beat 3 egg-whites frothy, gradually beat in 6 tablespoons confectioner's sugar and 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind. Turn this meringue on top of pudding and bake in slow oven (325 F.) till meringue is brown. Serve cold.

Rice Souffle.

Quite different but equally good is this molded rice pudding with maple syrup: Heat ¾ cup water with ¼ teaspoon salt and 3 tablespoons rice in top of double boiler. Then add 1½ cups of milk and 2½ tablespoons sugar. Cook till rice is tender. Then add 3 beaten egg-yolks, and 3 stiffly-beaten egg-whites. Pour into greased molds or custard cups. Set in pan of hot water and bake in slow oven (325 F.) till firm. Let cool. Turn out of cups and serve with maple syrup.

Send for Fruit Recipes.

While we are on the subject of desserts, and oranges and grapefruits are so extra good, I'd like to recall to your mind my bulletin "Oranges and Grapefruit in Favorite Dishes." This tells how to make orange-nut mousse, stuffed-meringue oranges, orange layer cake with orange filling—and many other good things, not only in desserts but in salads and beverages, 6 cents in loose stamps with self-addressed envelope and coupon below will bring you this bulletin promptly.

Wing Chair of Eighteenth Century Type New Note in 2-Piece Living Room Suite

Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 19.—If you look around at living room suites these days, you'll discover something pleasantly new. That's the combination of a sofa and a wing chair in a two-piece suite.

It's an eighteenth century type, which is one of the most popular periods of living room decoration. And this inclusion of the wing chair will be a welcome innovation to many people.

The wing chair in itself is a favorite. Most everybody wants one if their room has any claim to being of eighteenth century type. And now you can have it, as you see in the sketch, matching the sofa in design details and in covering.

This suite certainly looks very different from the three-piece one most homes used to have . . . a sofa and two chairs all upholstered alike and so big it was almost impossible to crowd anything else into the room.

Liberty in Decoration.

The modern idea is to allow more liberty in decoration and permit the inclusion of other furniture in the scheme.

That's why the popular living room suite of today has only two pieces. They fit better into most rooms. And they let you choose your extra chairs in a different material and color, adding interest.

Carved Wood Frames.

Of greatest popularity is the suite with carved wood frame with some suggestion of Queen Anne or Louis XV design.

Though it is good size, the sofa is scaled down as much as comfort will allow and has a carved apron and legs of mahogany or walnut. The chair matches in design and is sometimes covered in the sofa material and sometimes in a different material and color.

Allover Upholstered Sets.

Almost as popular as the wood frame suite are those in the allover upholstered group.

In these you'll find the London club with low broad arms and low-to-the-floor seat; the club and English lounge (which are large but not so large as the London type) with straight or roll back and roll arms; the Lawson, with its trim boxed look; and the Cogswell, which has the upholstered arm and carved wood extension.

Period Types.

There are also smaller scale suites which reproduce quite accurately the famous period designs. The one sketched is one of these . . . Eighteenth Century.

Others are Louis XV, Queen Anne, Chinese Chippendale, Colonial, Early American and French Provincial.

The most fashionable colors for the coverings of all these suites is first, a warm, rich, dark rust red, and second, dark jade green. Blue is often used for an odd chair and gold is getting more and more popular. Dark brown is a new favorite in a chintz or satin covering.

Send for Leaflet.

Maybe yours is a small living room and your problem is how to make it seem larger than it really is. In which case, if you haven't already done so, we suggest you send for our new, helpful leaflet, "Ways to Make a Small Room Seem Larger."

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If January 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 7 a. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 10:30 to 11:30 p. m.

If you were born on January 20, your birth month sign of the Zodiac is Aquarius. You have a great deal of determination. Your mind is alert and grasps readily every detail of any subject presented for its consideration. You have very high ideals and a very poetic nature. You have an unlimited supply of patience, and on this date you will probably have it sorely tried. Although very sentimentally inclined, your good judgment prevents your being swayed to do the thing your common sense tells you is wrong.

The woman born on January 20 is inclined to be supersensitive. She loves the beautiful and is highly appreciative of everything artistic. If you were born on this date you are always interested in the welfare of others and show the downtrodden the greatest amount of sympathetic consideration. You are the type that a man instinctively knows will make him a splendid wife. You must be careful and not misconstrue sympathy for love. You will have much happiness in your home life and display a great deal of activity in church work. A little more liberality on your part regarding other people's religious beliefs may prove advisable. It is well to let each person work out his own shalvation.

If a man, and January 20 is your birthday, you possess a great deal of intuition. You are an excellent judge of human nature and can accurately classify both men and women. Temperate habits help you both physically and mentally and will enable you to have a successful business career. Marriage is the proper thing for you with your home-loving instincts.

People born on January 20 are usually very humanitarian and either naturally posses or acquire culture, so that people are generally anxious to cultivate them as friends.

Successful people born on January 20:

Josef Hofman, pianist.
Robert Morris, financier.
Nathaniel P. Willis, poet.
David Wilmot, senator.
George B. Robinson, lawyer.
Frances Courtnay Baylor, author.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The epidemic of tropical dysentery radiating from Chicago, beginning in May, 1933, and lasting well into the early winter, has caused considerable interest in the disease. It is an old disease and one that has been well known for a long time, but while the inhabitants of the tropics know much about it those who live in temperate zones seldom think of it as one of their disorders.

It is caused by an ameba, a small, one-celled animal that lives well in the large intestine. It has been estimated that one person out of every 10 harbors this parasite. Certainly the proportion is not less than one in 50. The great majority of those who harbor it are free from dysentery and diarrheas caused by it. Possibly most of them have never had any attacks or symptoms which could have been reasonably suspected as being amebic in origin.

So widespread is it that we must find some test by which the harmless carriers can be distinguished from those that are dangerous. For this purpose it has been proposed that the complement fixation test proposed by Col. C. F. Craig be used instead of the laboratory test now employed. This complement fixation test as a means of diagnosis may be superior to the laboratory examination, but we will have to clear up some points before we can say that it is.

Zoologists recognize at least four kinds of ameba coli. In addition they say the disease should not be termed amebic unless the ameba can be seen to move when a fresh specimen is examined on a warm stage and unless the organism contains blood and conforms to some other standards.

There are half a dozen remedies, each of which has considerable reputation as a cure for the disease. The California authorities think carbasone is the most efficient of these and also much the safest. Rogers, of India, proposed the use of an extract of ipecac called emetin. This is the best of the remedies in amebic abscess of the liver, secondary to ambeic dysentery. But, for the routine treatment of the disease, it is too dangerous. It is safe only in the hands of men of great experience with the disease.

About six years ago Dr. Frank Smithies, one of the first physicians in the North to write about amebic dysentery, gave it as his opinion that one of the best remedies was powdered ipecac. He used several procedures, but one of the most efficient was the old standby in dysentery, powdered ipecac.

There are several other remedies that have their followers. Among them are acetarsone, vioform, chinioform, Kurchi alkaloids and some of the bismuth salts. James, of Panama, who knows the disease as well as does Craig, of New Orleans, after trying chinioform extensively, went back to very large doses of bismuth salts.

There is, therefore, a fair number of drugs from which physicians can choose. It is a reasonably curable disease. Overcoming the carrier state may not be such an easy problem to solve, but doubtless some practicable way can be found.

Health authorities are not alarmed over the outlook. The epidemic was not a bad one and the number of cases was not great, as epidemics go and in the circumstances that prevail. The number of deaths was far less than the numbers resulting from diseases of which we have no fear. While the disease is contagious through pollution of food, it is not violently so. Otherwise it could not have smouldered in those hotels for so many years, doing so little harm.

We need simpler, cheaper, less troublesome, and better laboratory tests, but they will be worked out. We need a few laws and rules for food handlers and kitchen workers. These we should have in a short while.

HOW TO TEMPT LAZY MORNING APPETITES

(An old way—with a new reason)

THE greatest appetite-tempter in the world is a stack of wheat-cakes or a pair of waffles—piping hot and golden brown—drenched in butter and crowned with syrup . . . Especially KING Syrup, and here is why:

KING Syrup has an amazing NEW TASTE that stimulates even the laziest appetite. Its mellow goodness—the result of a secret process of blending—causes an immediate craving for food and makes even those who "can't choke breakfast down" eat heartily, with real relish. Try King syrup today—the better grocery stores all have it in stock.

Price Slash Heralds D. C. Gasoline War

Independents Put Third-Grade Cost Down to 13.5 Per Gallon.

Standard Oil Blamed for Failure to Meet Code Figures.

Making their first move in a price war against major corporations, independent dealers in the District last night slashed the price of third-grade gasoline to 13.5 cents per gallon.

The reduction was precipitated by the refusal of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey to conform with the 14.6 cent price set early in the week by the Petroleum Board, working under Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

The 14.6 price was for major companies, while independent companies, under the tentative agreement, were to be permitted to sell their third-grade gasoline for 14.1 cents a gallon. It is the first local price-war since establishment of the petroleum code.

After it became definitely known that Standard stations were keeping their price at 14.1 cents per gallon, independent dealers protested to Dr. John Frey, a member of the board, who previously had informed them that if they failed to comply with the 14.1 minimum the board had set they would be subject to investigation by the grand jury.

Price Change Refused.

Following the protest of the independent dealers, Dr. Frey ordered Col. Robert Stewart, vice president of Standard, to come to Washington for a conference. Yesterday Dr. Frey informed the independent dealers that Standard refused to boost its 14.1 price.

Charging that this was an effort on the part of Standard to drive the independent dealers out of the District, Joseph Amato, chairman of a committee representing all independents, announced the 13.5 cent price, 6 mills under the price accepted at the order of the board.

"This is a beginning," asserted Amato yesterday. "We are prepared to go lower and lower, and, if necessary, we will reduce our prices until we reach cost."

Amato said larger corporations, operating chain gasoline stations, objected to the 14.1 price to which the independent dealers agreed on the grounds that third-grade gasoline was the same in quality whether it was trade-marked or not.

Samples Being Studied.

He added that an investigation was being conducted by the Department of Justice to determine whether or not this statement was true. Samples of third-grade gasoline were being taken from independent stations and compared with the grade sold at stations of larger companies, Amato said.

"The principal difference is that the gasoline of major companies is given a trade name and advertised. But we can afford to sell our gasoline cheaper than they, and think we have a right to do so."

DePriest Blocks Howard U. Plan

Acts to Prevent Abolishing of Engineer School.

Representative De Priest (Republican) of Illinois, yesterday succeeded in tagging an amendment on the Interior Department appropriation bill just before it passed the House, to prevent Howard University from abolishing its school of engineering.

Declaring that he understood the trustees of the university planned to use the engineering school's appropriation for other purposes, De Priest proposed that the bill carry an amendment that $20,000 be cut off th eappropriations if the school is closed.

Rev. Cavanagh Kin Share in His Estate

Will of Priest Killed in Auto Accident Filed.

The Rev. Francis A. Cavanaugh, pastor of the Church of the Assumption, left his estate to relatives, it was shown yesterday, when a petition for administration of his estate was filed in District Supreme Court. Father Cavanaugh was killed in an automobile accident December 18.

Dr. John R. Cavanaugh, brother of Father Cavanaugh, filed the petition. Through Attorney John J. Carmody he said the estate consisted of a cottage at Wildwood, N. J., and personal property valued in excess of $1,500.

Richard A. and Mary A. Cavanaugh, his parents; two sisters, Helen L. and Mary R., and another brother, Edgar J. Cavanaugh, survive the priest. The relatives will share equally the estate.

Garnett to Take New Office Here Monday

Leslie C. Garnett, newly appointed United States attorney for the District, will be formally inducted into office at a general term of the District Supreme Court Monday morning at 10 o'clock for that purpose.

He succeeds Leo A. Rover, who resigned.

Post Staff Photos.

With 2,100 men, 1,850 employed under the PWA and CWA, and 250 Civilian Conservation Corps members, clearing timber, making roads and erecting buildings over an area of 4,000 acres, the U. S. Animal Husbandry Experiment Station at Beltsville, Md., is undergoing rapid changes, which will make it a permanent research station and the largest center of its kind in the world. B. F. Brandon is superintendent of the station. Top—View of timber being cleared on a large scale. Work is being done by CWA and CCC workers. $2,500 Annual Pension Urged For D. C. Judge

King Reveals Hearing on Judge Sellers' Successor Likely Next Week.

A bill to pay Juvenile Judge Kathryn Sellers a pension of $2,500 a year for life was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee.

Simultaneously, Senator William H. King, chairman of the District subcommittee of Senate Judiciary Committee, revealed that he probably will call a meeting next week to consider the appointment of Miss Fay L. Bentley as judge to succeed Miss Sellers.

Judge Sellers last fall refused to step out after President Roosevelt appointed Miss Bentley during the congressional recess. She was not challenged after Senator King called attention to a law which prevented the juvenile judge from taking office until confirmed by the Senate.

Mrs. Norton pointed out that Judge Sellers had served since October 18, 1918. She previously was employed in the War and State Departments, Mrs. Norton said, and during part of the World War worked for $1 a year.

The pension would be provided by the Veterans' Administration under the Norton bill. Judge Sellers' present salary is $7,000 a year.

Miss Bentley, who is now attendance officer of the District schools, is the second appointee for Judge Sellers' post. Miss Pearl M. McCarl, of the Justice Department, was named by President Hoover just before his term expired, but a Democratic Senate refused to confirm her.

Work Until Jan. 27 Assured for 4,000

District CWA Is Alloted $150,000 More.

Work for 4,000 District CWA employes, engaged in street and sewer construction, is assured until January 27 through a $150,000 allotment for materials and trucking costs granted yesterday by the Federal CWA.

The street and sewer workers had been in danger of a lay-off as a result of the order of CWA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, which forbade disbursements for new supplies without specific approval from Federal headquarters.

Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the District CWA, said the work will be centralized for the next week by temporarily abandoning minor projects.

Departmental Bank To Pay 5 Per Cent

Fourth Dividend of Closed Depository Is $40,000.

W. B. Allman, receiver of Departmental Bank, savings institution at 1726 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, which suspended operations July 14, 1932 has announced a fourth dividend of 5 per cent, or $40,000. Payment of this will begin next Wednesday. This will make dividends totaling 70 per cent, or $545,000, paid by this bank to its 4,000 depositors.

The bank will be open Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday until 9 p. m. for the convenience of Federal employes. Depositors have been instructed to present their receiver's credentials so they can obtain dividend checks.

On March 30, 1933, this bank announced an initial dividend of 30 per cent; on April 29, 1933, a second of 20 per cent was paid and a third of 15 per cent on June 14, 1933.

C. S. Robb Named HOLC Area Chief

Two Other Territorial Aides Appointed.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation yesterday announced appointments of T. T. Hawksworth, of Akron, Ohio; Nugent Fallon, of Boston, and Charles S. Robb, of Washington, as assistant general managers of the corporation.

Hawksworth will be in charge of the fourth district, comprising Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin. Robb's territory will comprise Delaware, Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia. Fallon will have supervision over the first district, which includes Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and Vermont.

AAA Offers Monthly Audit As Milk Curb

Would Prevent Practice of Selling Surplus Milk in Bottles.

An offer to make a month-to-month audit of Washington Dairy Co. books to prevent distributors from selling surplus milk in bottles has been made by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, J. H. Mason, new head of the dairy division, announced yesterday.

In his first press conference, Mason said such an audit would serve as an insurance to producers in this market that they are receiving the correct amounts for their milk and that the product is being used in the same classification as it is sold.

Three uses to which dairies put milk are outlined. These, Mason explained, are fluid milk, fluid cream and milk for manufacturing purposes. Although the regulations of the Health Department required that the same grade of milk be used for all three purposes, three separate prices were paid for milk in the three respective divisions until January 1, Mason asserted.

Thousands of gallons of so-called surplus milk, fotr which farmers were being paid approximately 10 cents a gallon, were being put into bottles and sold as fluid milk, testimony before the Senate milk investigating committee revealed recently. Farmers should have received 26 and 29 cents per gallon for this milk, according to the report.

Mason, former Iowa cooperative head, who succeeded Dr. Clyde King, who resigned from the AAA under fire of the Senate investigating committee, said yesterday the month-to-month audit plan would be incorporated in a milk marketing agreement for this territory.

Tests Are Set For C. U. Tuition

Twenty-five scholarships for young men at Catholic University for the academic year 1934-35 on the Knights of Columbus Foundation are provided in the twentieth announcement of examinations released yesterday by Dr. Richard J. Purcell, professor of history and general secretary of the university.

The foundation of $500,000 supports 25 scholarships for unmarried Catholic laymen at Catholic University. About one-third of these scholarships, which give the holders board, room and tuition, but not special fees, such as athletic, laboratory and medical, fall vacant every year because of the elimination of unsuccessful candidates and the graduation of successful ones.

Candidates are elected from a list of students whose ratings are determined from the results of competitive examinations and academic credentials.

Small Fire in Boathouse.

Buzz! So Opens New Round In the Battle of the Birds

New Plan Is All Set to Startle Starlings From Capitol.

Hoping they can scare the birds away without offending their protectors, the architect of the Capitol and his assistant are ready to test a plan to rid the building of starlings. They willingly concede that their chances for success are slim—but they are going to try.

The ring and buzzer method, intended to discourage starlings against roosting on the Capitol dome, will be used by David Lynn and his assistant, Horace D. Rouzer. Electricians were busy yesterday installing equipment and the first test may be made late this afternoon, when the birds start flocking in from their feeding grounds.

Lynn said yesterday that the problem has become more acute than ever, what with many Congressmen and Senators emphatically requesting that he get rid of the birds, while just as many demand that they not be harmed.

"What shall I do?" he asked.

One thing he will do is to give the buzzer a trial, because it won't inflict injury to the starlings and may persuade them to seek other lodgings than the spacious dome.

And if they do move, he said pessimistically, they will probably shift to the handsome Supreme Court Building and desecrate the marble. Already the monumental edifice is a haven for some of the Hill colony, he said.

Some say the law should be on the starlings but right now they're on the law.

Georgetown U. Given $10,000 In White Will

Chief Justice's Widow Also Leaves $10,000 to House of Good Shepherd.

A beuest of $10,000 for Georgetown University was provided in the will of Mrs. Virginia Leita Montgomery White, widow of the late Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, it was shown the District Supreme Court.

yesterday when her will was filed in

The fund is to be known as a memorial to her husband, Chief Justice Edward Douglas White, and it is to be expended in "advancement of learning."

In addition to the will, Mrs. White directed that a niece, Mary Ella Montgomery, is to receive $10,000 and the House of the Good Shepherd $10,000. Six $5,000 bequests were made. They go to Mrs. Mary Duncan Gibson Robinson, Ratndall Lee Gibson, Sidney Lee Brosseau Hardin, Mary Lee White Brosseau, Andre Ringgold Brosseau, and Mannsell White Brosseau.

Nazi Charges French Violation in the Saar

Geneva, Jan. 19 (AP).—A communication to the Council of the League of Nations today from a Nazi leader in the Saar Basin territory charged frontier violation by French authorities in connection with the 1935 plebiscite.

Additional protests were made before the council as it prepared to resume discussion of the vote, which will determine whether the region will be administered by France, Germany or the league.

Traction Strike Ended.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 19 (AP). Street car and bus service was resumed here today after a strike since last Friday during which the Kentucky Traction & Terminal Co. went into receivership.

Jewish Center Gives Cafritz 7th Nomination

Rabbi Wise to Speak on Hitler Here After Election Tomorrow.

Morris Cafritz, prominent builder, has been nominated for the presidency of the Jewish Community Center for the seventh consecutive year, it was announced yesterday. Election of officers is scheduled to take place tomorrow at 8:15 p. m.

Following the election Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, will deliver an address on "Hitlerism is a Challenge to Civilization."

Other selections of a nominating committee were Benjamin Ourisman, first vice president; David Wiener, second vice president; Mrs. James Lansburgh, third vice president; J. Harry Viner, treasurer, John Korman, associate treasurer; Abe Shefferman, recording secretary, and Moe Offenberg, corresponding secretary.

Nominations for election to the board of trustees were R. B. Behrend, Morris Gewirz, Simon Hirshman, Harry King, Simon Lyon, Leo Schlosberg, I. S. Turnover, Mrs. A. L. Dembitz, Charles A. Goldsmith, E. I. Kaufmann, Rabbi J. T. Loed, M. D. Rosenberg, Rabbi Abram Simon, Dr. Ivy Pelzman and Rabbi Solomon Metz.

2 Policemen Deny Extortion Charge

Alleged to Have Taken $10 From Autoist.

John R. Le Foe and Henry L. Woods, suspended members of the Traffic Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department, yesterday denied they were guilty of extortion when they were arraigned in the District Supreme Court.

The two are alleged to have accepted $10 from a colored motorist who had been arrested on a traffic charge. Attorney Joseph D. Kelly, who defended Policemen Harry G. Bauer and Rudolph Schleichert on extortion charges, of which they were acquitted two weeks ago in District Supreme Court, represented Le Foe and Woods.

Financing Cost Sums Admitted In Gas Hearing

Commission Hears Expert Add $1,661,000 to Other Estimates.

Testimony of Luther R. Nash, an expert on public utility economics, on an estimate of the cost of financing and the "going concern" value of the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light Companies, was admitted yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission over the objections of Assistant Corporation Counsel William A. Roberts and People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech.

The cost of financing, which the companies are seeking to add to their valuation on which gas rates will be based, was estimated by Nash at $1,661,000, of which $1,494,000 was allotted to the Washington Gas Light Co. and the remainder to the Georgetown Gas Light Co.

Roberts and Keech sought to have Nash's testimony on "going concern" value excluded from the record, pending the commission's consideration of briefs submitted by the opposing attorneys. The going concern value was estimated in previous testimony at $3,000,000.

The important subject of depreciation will be brought before the commission today or early next week. It is understood the gas company experts have estimated depreciation at $5,000,000 less than the figures of the commission. This difference, capitalized at 6 per cent, would mean a difference of $300,000 annually in gas rates.

The gas companies are expected to contend that nothing should be deducted from property values because of inadequacy or obsolescence. However, commission witnesses are expected to insist that property in perfect condition, even though it is out of date or is about to be replaced by larger units because of service demands, is cut substantially in value because of inadequacy.

Insurance Company Receivership Asked

Irregularities Charged to Our Home Life Firm.

The District Supreme Court yesterday was asked to appoint a receiver to operate the Our Home Life Insurance Co., on the complaint of three policyholders, who charged irregularities.

A rule requiring the company to show cause January 26 why a receiver should not be appointed was issued.

The complainants, Francis and Ignace Denko, and James Lewinski, all of Baltimore, alleged the company had failed to establish a reserve fund for the protection of policyholders. This, they said, was a violation of the laws of Florida, where the company was incorporated.

Crash Brings $10,000 Suit.

Damages of $10,000 were asked in District Supreme Court yesterday by John W. Williams, 1759 Columbia road northwest, because of an automobile accident at Thirteenth and V streets northwest, last August. Williams charged John W. Coffman, Takoma Park, Md., with colliding with his machine. The plaintiff sustained permanent injuries in the crash, he declared.

Suspicious

Hotel "Gangsters" Turn Out to Be City Detectives.

Was it a case of painting the lily? A trio of snappily clad detective sergeants strode jauntily into a downtown hotel yesterday.

They were on their way to arrest a suspected criminal.

In the lobby the sleuths began a conference. The hotel manager eyed them suspiciously.

"Snappy clothes," he mused. "Ah, gangsters. The police must be notified."

The hotel manager was astonished at the reunion a few minutes later by a squad of uniformed policemen and the trio of "gangsters."

The detective sergeants were Mike Dowd, Leo Murray and Steve Brodie.

Peace Spirit Collapse Laid To Inaction

League Held Blameless by Speakers Before Anti-War Session.

Collapse of the peace spirit throughout the world is due not to the poor working of the League of Nations but to the failure of the people to become peace conscious.

This was the main idea put forth yesterday by Alden G. Alley, of the National Council for the Prevention of War, and Frank H. Simonds, writer on foreign affairs, in addresses to the ninth annual conference of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War.

With a view to translating its peace ideals into action, the conference in its final recommendations strongly upheld reduction of arms, an embargo on armaments, strengthening of the World Court, the concentration of this country's attention upon its Latin-American policy and revision of the League of Nations in such a way as to make it more acceptable to the sentiment of this country.

According to Mr. Alley, vital interests of nations should lead them to "do in their relations with one another, what each of them has done within its own frontiers—end anarchy and establish law."

The speaker asserted the League of Nations, however weak, was, and still is, the first step towards the establishment of an international body. It is a considerable improvement over the pre-war anarchy, Mr. Alley believes, but it is not usually realized that "when the league fails to handle a dispute and war comes (as in Manchuria and the Chaco) newspapers feature it for months with headlines and front page articles. But, when the League handles a dispute successfully and there are no battles the newspapers tuck the story away on the ninth page. So, few people know that at least a dozen serious international disputes have been referred to the League and only two of them have resulted in war."

Frank H. Simonds declared the league never has been employed because "while no people wants war, none has any effective desire for peace, and by effective desire for peace I mean any readiness to pay in terms of curtailment of national soverignty and abridgement of national policies for the only conceivable form of international insurance against another war."

America, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan were declared unwilling to pay the price of peace. And, as to the future of the league, modified or not, Frank H. Simonds concluded that "no people, beginning with the American, is ready to subordinate national interest to international order; to place world peace above domestic profit or security. And until a majority in all countries is prepared to do this, while the league may survive as a bureau, it can have no future as a means to prevent war."

"3 Redhead" Brothers Admit Thefts; Jailed

Pleading guilty to two indictments of robbery, the three O'Neal brothers, Orville, Calvin, and Robert, known to police as "the Three Redheads," yesterday were remanded to jail by Justice Peyton Gordon to await a report from the probation office.

The brothers were accused of robbing a restaurant of $39 and a gasoline station of $23 the night of December 17.

Action Near For Pensions, Alleys Bills

House Subcommittee to Sift Two Measures Next Tuesday.

Expect Favorable Report on One of 3 Pending Security Plans.

Speedy action on the Capper-Norton alley improvement bill and the old-age pension measure for the District was promised yesterday by Representative Thomas J. O'Brien, of Illinois, chairman of the District subcommittee on public health, hospitals and charities, with the announcement these matters would be considered at a meeting Tuesday.

It is likely that the subcommittee will report favorably on the old-age pension bill to the House District Committee at its regular meeting Wednesday. If time permits, Representative O'Brien said, the alley bill may also be acted on.

The entire District Committee is said to favor the old-age pension proposal. Speaker Rainey has promised that the House will act if the committee reports any of three bills favorably.

Two of the old-age pension bills are sponsored by members of the District Committee—Chairman Norton and Representative Loring M. Black, jr. The third was introduced by former Representative Focht, one-time chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Norton's bill sets the minimum age at 60, and would provide a total income of not more than $9 a week. The Black bill would leave the amount to the discretion of the Board of Public Welfare and would set the age minimum at 68. The Focht measure proposes an age requirement of 65 and an income of $1 a day.

Representative O'Brien said he had not had time to study the alley bill, but he indicated he favored the purpose of the measure, which would substitute modern low-priced housing for alley dwellings. The bill would authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the District $500,000 from the unexpended funds of the United States Housing Corporation for the project.

The bill was referred to the subcommittee by Mrs. Norton after it was pointed out that the Budget Bureau has disapproved it on the grounds that it is not in accord with the President's financial policy.

Cooper Denies Plot Charge

Arraigned With Warren on Misapplication of $455,000 Count.

Arraigned in the District Supreme Court yesterday on an indictment charging them with conspiring to misapply $455,000 of the funds of the Commercial National Bank, Col. Wade H. Cooper and Bates Warren entered pleas of not guilty.

The two also are accused of actually misapplying $90,550. They were indicted two weeks ago.

William H. Collins, who resigned Monday as chief criminal prosecutor of the United States attorney's office, has been retained by Col. Cooper to assist in his defense. He will aid John W. Staggers, while William E. Leahy and Edmund M. Toland will represent Mr. Warren.

Cooper was president of the Commercial, now in the hands of a receiver, and Warren was a director and chief counsel. Both are at liberty on $10,000 bonds.

$40,000 in 4 Suits Sought in Auto Crash

An automobile accident on the Baltimore boulevard November 5, yesterday led to the filing of four damage suits, aggregating $40,000, in District Supreme Court.

Walter Brinks, his wife, Isabelle, and two sons, Jean O., and Walter J., of 814 Sixth street northeast, filed the suits against Ray D. Conklin, Maryland Courts apartment, with whom they were riding. Conklin's car struck another machine and the mother and her two children sustained injuries.

The husband's suit is based on the loss of his wife's services.

Landis Denies Reinstatement to Joe Jackson, Recalling Scandal

Game Closed Forever to Player

Veteran's Plea Refused After Review of 1919 Confession.

Recalls Testimony After World's Series Was "Thrown" to Reds.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19 (AP).—The portals of organized baseball are closed forever to "Shoeless Joe" Jackson and his confessed cronies, who staggered the National game back in 1919 by "throwing" the world series to the Cincinnati Reds.

They can't come back. The doors are closed to them for good. The most scandalous chapter in the game's history is closed.

Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who was named commissioner of the organized game as the scandal flared, shut off their last ray of hope today when he denied the application for reinstatement made by Jackson.

"Several others have asked for reinstatement in the past and they, too, have been turned down," the white-haired commissioner said resolutely. He didn't say more, but it didn't take a mind reader to see that he was definitely through considering applications for reinstatement made by the White Sox players involved in the infamous scandal of 1919. Then he passed out a typewritten statement, disclosing that he had reviewed the case of Jackson fully and turned down the application.

Sought Managerial Job.

Jackson, one of the greatest hitters and outfielders in baseball history, is now 45 years old, but advised the commissioner that he had a chance to manage a club at Greenville, S. C.

"The people of my town want me to put professional baseball back," he told the commissioner, "and they want me to manage the club. At my age of 45 years, I do not think I can play big-league baseball, but I think I could do a lot for minor league ball."

To which Commissioner Landis replied:

"With reference to the suggestion that, if reinstated, the applicant can or will participate only in minor league activities (and not in the major leagues), of course there are not, and can not, be two standards of eligibility—one the major league and another (and lower) one for the minors. The game played in a small town in a class D league is no less important to the spectators and players than is the game played in the large city in the highest class league."

Accepted $20,000 Offer.

The commissioner, in reviewing the case, recalled that Jackson had testified under oath that he accepted an offer of $20,000, payable in installments after each game, to "help throw" the 1919 world series with seven others. The testimony, Commissioner Landis said, showed that Jackson confessed to conspiracy in "throwing" the games, although he was "double crossed" later and "was paid $5,000 instead of $20,000 for doing it."

Jackson and his pals, involved in the scandal, were acquitted later by the court on the grounds that it was "not a crime in Illinois to throw a baseball game, or to accept money for so doing." Yet, the commissioner ruled, confession of guilt and the evidence barred the involved players from the game and would continue to do so.

Jackson did not contend his innocence in the scandal in his application for reinstatement, merely taking the ground that he had been punished enough and that he should be allowed to make a living playing baseball. Since his banishment, he has played in unorganized baseball, but never made much money out of it.

Commissioner Landis refused to divulge the names of the other players who had sought reinstatement.

Sir Crispin, Bostwick Horse, Wins in Britain

Newbury, Eng., Jan. 20 (AP).—The first race today was an All-American victory as A. C. Bostwick rode Sir Crispin, owned by his brother, G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, to a 3-length victory in the 2-mile Ilsley Hurdle race for a purse of £150.

G. Duller's Nosiamas was second in the field of 12. Sir Crispin paid 3 to 1.

Londos Meets Zarynoff on Thursday

Returns to Washington for First Appearance in Eight Months.

GORGEOUS JIM LONDOS, rassling's Babe Ruth, returns to the local spotlight Thursday night, appearing here under Promoter Joe Turner's Auditorium auspices for the first time in eight months. He will oppose colorful Count George Zarynoff, the bald Bostonian.

Falling in line with rassling's new deal, Londos will be meeting the slippery count for the first time. In-as-much as Zarynoff impressed in his Auditorium bow against the much heavier Jim Browning here some time ago, many are of the belief that Zarynoff will extend Londos.

Celebrated for his prowess as an acrobat and also respected for his general cleverness and class, the cue-ball count will be in a prime position completely to baffle his eminent opponent. One of the largest turnouts of the indoor season is expected to attend the bout.

Goodwin Retains Miami Golf Title

Beats Brooks Glenn, 3 and 2, for Midwinter Crown.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 19 (AP).—Tommy Goodwin, of Monroe, N. Y., with a subpar splurge on the final nine, today defeated Brooks Glenn, of Miami, 3 and 2, to retain his mid-winter amateur golf championship.

The New York State junior champion consistently outdrove the Miamian and also was longer with his second shots. Glenn, however, turned in 19 one-putt greens to stay in the running.

Virginia Track Squad Practices for Meets

University, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Archie Hahn, Virginia's track coach, is getting his charges in shape by working them indoors and out in preparation for meets during the winter and spring.

Thus far only two meets have been listed for the indoor season. There'll be a triangular contest against the track and field men of V. M. I. and Washington and Lee on February 15, and the annual conference competition early in March.

High School Highlights.

HIGHLIGHTS' Western High School Private Operator W-7 comes through with some interesting bits from his school. Here they are:

The baseball team was dealt a severe blow when it was definitely learned that "Che Che" De Stephan, All-High School third baseman last season; Bill Wood, .400 batting leader of the team, and Huck Wynne, sturdy catcher, all also members of the football team, will hang up the ball and glove and take to the cinder track this spring. The three hail from Philadelphia, where they were the relay team that set an all-scholastic mark.

The team, or rather the three probably will compete for honors in the Catholic University indoor games.

Bill Krouse, Western's 280-pound tackle, will line up with the Purdue freshman football team next September. Gamage, who paired up with a big lad, will be a candidate for the Pitt freshman team.

Joe Gardner, Georgetown coach, who taught Bill Heeskin, regular half back at Ohio State last season, and Jim Robinson, first-string center at Notre Dame in 1932 (Robinson was out the whole of last season, due to an eye operation), their football fundamentals, insists that Tommy Keating has been his best athlete to date.

Highlight note to Joe: Jock Sutherland, Pitt coach, has been informed of the sterling qualities of Maury Nee, his wingman.

Arty Boyd, Tech basket ball mentor, would like to play a basket ball game every day of the week, provided the third quarters would not count. In the three interhigh games played to date his team has tallied only 2 points in the third periods of those games.

Hall, of N. C., Advances To Palm Beach Finals

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Clarence Hall, of Washington, N. C., eliminated Jesse Smith, of Milwaukee, in the semifinal round of match play in the second flight of the Guards Golf Tournament over the Everglades Club course here today, 4 and 2. They played the nine-hole match on a scratch basis.

Dr. Edmund Dow, of New York, gave George Wright, of Boston, who will celebrate his eighty-seventh birthday a week from Sunday, a handicap of 5 strokes and overwhelmed the Boston veteran, 5 and 3.

Dunbar, Trailing, 25-8, at Half, Rallies, Wins

Dunbar High came from behind in the closing stages of the basket ball game on its floor yesterday to nose out Baltimore Vocational, 38-36. After trailing at the half, 25-8, Williams and Armstrong went on a scoring rampage that brought the Washington quintet within 10 points of its rivals at the end of the third period.

With the victory, Dunbar gained the lead in the South Atlantic Conference without a defeat.

Terp Mittmen Seek 3d Win Tonight

Meet Western Maryland After Old Line, V. P. I. Basket Ball Game.

SEEKING its third consecutive victory of the season, Maryland's boxing team squares off with a rugged and clever aggregation of Western Maryland mittmen tonight at Ritchie Coliseum in the feature end of a twin bill. The Old Line court men engage V. P. I. for the second time in a week in the curtain raiser.

Though they have not played in a week, the Terp basketers are favored to repeat their 29-to-24 victory over Poly, and by a larger score. Worn and weary after a pair of gruelling games with Catholic U. and George Washington, Poly should be soft pickings for its rangy opponents. The game will start at 8 o'clock.

Invaders are Favored.

Western Maryland, boasting a roster including three men who scored against the Old Liners last year, is a heavy favorite to win. Don Keyser, Andy Gorski and Bernie Kaplan whipped Maryland opponents last winter and should have no difficulty repeating.

Gorski, Kaplan and Tom Pontecarvo, 165, 175 and heavyweight, respectively, fought in the intercollegiate championships last year, Kaplan won the 165-pound title, and Gorski and Pontecarvo went to the finals. Pontecarvo defeated Remus, of West Point, who was an outstanding favorite, in the semi-finals. Injured in the bout, Pontecarvo insisted on fighting the finale and lost a close decision.

Have Chance to Win.

If Maryland surprises and wins the match, it appears that it will have to win all of the low-weight fights to gain the necessary points. Bill Wall 115 pounds; Harry Carroll, 125; Dick Babcock, 135, and Logan Weber have been going well in training and have an even chance of copping the bacon. The line-ups follow:

Western Md.	Weight.	Maryland.
Jim Brinsfield	115	Bill Waller
Charles Rustebers	125	Harry Carroll
Don Moore or Carroll Myers	135	Dick Babcock Logan Weber or
Dick Keifer	145	John Evans
Don Keyser	155	Lyman McAboy
Andy Gorski	165	Frank Hawkins
Bernie Kaplan	175	Stewart McCaw

Massanutten's Rally Tips Woodberry, 30-24

Woodberry Forest, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Massanutten Military Academy defeated Woodberry Forest here today, 30 to 24. After trailing by an 8-point margin at the end of the first quarter, the locals staged a comeback, which kept them well within range of victory until the last moments of play, when Fabricant and Atchison rang up 5 points between them to settle the issue.

Clabby, Once Great Fighter, Starving, Dies in Poverty

HAMMOND, Ind., Jan. 19 (AP).—In a tumbled-down shack, ar removed from the glory of his past, the body of one of the greatest pieces of fighting machinery the prize ring has ever known, was found today.

The human wreck, cold in death, was Jimmy Clabby, a quarter of a century ago recognized as the uncrowned welterweight champion of the world, and later one of the greatest middleweights.

His last refuge was a dilapidated hovel, a refuge for tramps, on the edge of Calumet City, located near Hammond, Clabby's hometown. He died of starvation and exposure. He was 43 years old.

Forgotten, Despondent.

Down and out, forgotten and penniless, Clabby, despondent and broken in health had lived in this shack since his complete downfall two years ago. He was found in death, in the squalid place, by other human derelicts who lived there with him.

Clabby, whose fame as a fighter swept around the world, had dissipated the fortune estimated at $500,000 earned in the ring. He fought from New York to Sydney, Australia, in London, England, and back again. He made a trip around the world in 1910, going to Australia and was responsible for stirring the antipodes aflame to the popularity of boxing.

Clabby achieved fame in Australia, returning there again in 1914, and winning several 20-round engagements. He won the Australian middleweight championship in 1917 by defeating Tommy Uren in 20 rounds, and fought the same opponent three other 20-rounders that year.

Met All Comers in U. S.

In this country he fought middleweights and light heavyweights alike. Among his opponents were Mike Gibbons, Eddie McGoorty, George Chip, The Dixie Kid, Paddy Lavin, Jimmy Gardner, Dave Barry, the Chicago referee who decided the Dempsey-Tunney fight at Chicago, Mike (Twin) Sullivan, and all comers, regardless of weight.

A naturally gifted boxer, speedy and clever, Clabby disdained training in his glamorous career and fought the leading boxers of his time with no interruption of his pursuit of life. He was far superior to most of them, and did not have to enter into a gymnasium training grind to insure victory. He was a handsome, curly-headed youngster, with a marvelous body that had wasted to a shell of the old fiery figure that thrilled thousands as it wove back and forth under the floodlights.

Never Knocked Down.

Clabby proudly boasted that he had never been knocked down, or out. He violated all rules of training, and his usual preparations for a fight was "a shave and a drink."

Clabby served his apprenticeship as an amateur, and before he was 20 years old branched out into the "big money" of those days. In 1910, the welterweight title was vacated by Mike "Twin" Sullivan and was in dispute.

Clabby, Jimmy Gardner, and the Dixie Kid claimed it. Clabby met the Dixie Kid in New York in 1910 and won a popular decision, and with it recognition as titleholder.

Returns Broke, to Hammond.

After wasting his fortune, Clabby returned to live with his father in Hammond. Two years ago his father was killed in an automobile accident. After that, he faded out completely, his whereabouts unknown even by his wife and three children.

Born in Norwich, Conn., in 1890, Clabby, a son of a saloon keeper, went out into the world to gain fame and fortune with his fists, and then returned—to the saloon, and to an ultimate, tragic death.

New Lott Rank Protest Plan In Chicago

Western Association Due to Seek Higher Rating Than 10th for Star.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19 (AP).—The Western Tennis Association is expected to lodge another protest with the United States Lawn Tennis Association in the fight to get a higher ranking for its champion, George Lott, when its leaders meet in annual convention tomorrow.

Lott was rated tenth on the proposed list of National rankings and the Chicago Tennis Association, led by President Ralph Westcott, is up in arms over what it terms an "injustice to Lott."

Only two stars of the Western association are listed on the proposed national rankings. Lott, who won the Western title last year, is rated two places behind Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee. On the other hand, it seems certain that Lott will be named first and Parker second on the Western rankings, to be announced tomorrow.

Another Protest Filed.

Leo Lund, member of the national ranking committee, today said he, too, had protested Lott's ranking to the U. S. L. T. A. Lund was unable to attend the meeting when the proposed national rankings were made.

"All of us out here figure Lott should be rated at least sixth instead of tenth," Westcott said. "He deserves that on his 1933 record. Last week, he backed up our judgment by beating a national field, including some of those ranked far ahead of him, in the Miami-Biltmore championship."

Lund said he thought Lott deserved sixth-place ranking.

Nevils Declines to Act In Hilltop-C. U. Breach

The Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, S.J., president of Georgetown University, yesterday declined to act in a movement to establish athletic relations between Georgetown and Catholic Universities.

A statement issued by the Rev. Mr. Nevils follows:

"The athletic directors at Georgetown need no statement from me; they know they are free to arrange schedules and all matters pertaining to their own activities provided they keep within the bounds prescribed by the recognized standardizing agencies."

Student papers of the two universities had advocated Georgetown-Catholic U. competition. The two institutions have never met in any branch of sports.

Navy's Riflists to Face Maryland and G. W. U.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—A schedule of small bore, shoulder-to-shoulder rifle contests for Midshipmen riflists, including the sectional intercollegiate competition, was announced by the Navy Athletic Association. All matches will be shot over the academy's indoor range.

The season will open with Carnegie Tech, January 27, and the rest of the dates are February 17, Massachusetts Tech; 24, Virginia Military Institute; March 3, West Virginia University; 10, University of Maryland; 17, George Washington University; 24, sectional intercollegiates.

Pitcher McKain Is Signed by Nats

Former Chisox Hurler to Be Used in Relief Role.

McKain spent three years with the Chicago club before being released to Dallas, of the Texas League, which won the league pennant in 1932. Dallas refused to meet his salary demands last season and he was idle throughout the campaign.

In a letter to Manager Joe Cronin, McKain wrote that his arm was still in shape and sought a job. He is 25 years old and is expected to be used primarily as a relief pitcher.

Dempsey Hits Garden as "Racket"

Tried to Steal Contract of Baer, Is One of Many Charges Made.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (AP).—Jack Dempsey, from Oklahoma City, wired to the Associated Press here his reactions today to Madison Square Garden's beraking off of negotiations for a heavyweight championship match between Primo Carnera and Max Baer.

"Everywhere I go," he telegraphed, "people ask 'What's the matter with the fight game?' I've given a thousand answers, but now I'll tell the real one.

"The trouble with the fight game is that Madison Square Garden is killing the goose that laid the golden egg. They're trying to tie up all the fighters. If a heavyweight refuses to agree to do all his future fighting for the Garden, he's shoved out in the cold. They then dig up some second rater and push him off on the public.

Future Fights Hitch.

"That's what they're doing in this instance. The Baer-Carnera bout is the only one that looks anything like a natural.

"But what does the Garden do? It tried to steal Baer's contract, but didn't get away with it. Then it got sore because Ancil Hoffman (Baer's manager) wouldn't sign with the Garden for future fights.

"So the Garden gives Baer the boot and picks up Levinsky as a substitute. As long as the Garden gets away with that kind of a racket the fight game never will come back."

Negotiations for a Carnera-Baer match here in June were broken off yesterday by Col. John R. Kilpatrick, Garden president, when Hoffman refused to agree to future fights for the Garden in the event that Baer won the title.

Dempsey came into the situation through his option on Baer's services. He promoted the match in which Baer gained outstanding recognition last June by knock-out of Max Schmeling. Carnera is bound to the Garden by contract until September, 1934.

'Rainbow' Name Chosen For America's Cup Yacht

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Rainbow has been chosen as the name for the new America's Cup yacht under construction at Bristol, R. I., on behalf of a syndicate headed by Harold Sterling Vanderbilt, skipper of the victorious Enterprise in 1930.

"Rainbow," said Vanderbilt, "is an omen significant of a rift, a parting of the clouds, indicating fair sailing and better times ahead."

The British challenger for the cup series, to be sailed off Newport next September, is T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavor.

Roller Skating Hockey At Silver Spring Rinks

Otis Brendle, one of the speediest wingmen in Baltimore, and James Baker, husky goalie, have been added to the line-up of the Baltimore Pirates for their exhibition roller skating hockey game with the Free State team at the Silver Spring Armory rink tomorrow night.

Play will start at 10 o'clock.

Two half-mile skating races, one for men and the other for women, will be held at the ring tonight at 10 o'clock.

Boys Club Cagesters Oppose Richmond Five

Gun Club Plans to Hold Challenge Event Today

A 100-target challenge match between ten members of the Washington Gun Club will be staged this afternoon at the traps near Benning.

C. C. Fawsett, Julius Marcey, W. F. Burrows, F. P. Williams and George A. Emmons compose the challenging team. Arrayed against them will be H. H. Shelton, Parker Cook, Dr. J. H. Lyons, R. D. Morgan and Walton Wilson.

Eastern and Tech Win In Series

Kelly Five Coasts to Easy Victory Over Western, 48-23.

THE interhigh basket ball boys who are pounding the hardwoods and the baskets in the championship race yesterday produced nary an upset. Tech, however, was extended to defeat Roosevelt, 29-25, after which Eastern trounced Western, 48-23.

The Roosevelt team throughout 38 of the 40 minutes continued to dog the lead of the Technician outfit, which took over the lead late in the second period.

McGahey Starts Scoring.

Leo McGahey, Tech center, opened up the scoring business with a pair of field goals to give his team a 4-0 lead, but Cavanaugh came through a moment later for a 2-pointer and then Rex Smith tied the count at 4-all. Ahearn's foul shot and Rex Smith's second basket of the inning, gave the Ruf Riders a 7-4 count at the end of the quarter.

After an extended bit of sparring at the start of the second period, Cavanaugh once again came through for the best shot of the series—a shoestring beauty, that even caused Old Lady Luck to smile. But the shot evidently had a coating of ill luck on it, as a Tech trio of Mullitz, Wiles and Daly sank baskets before you could say King Tut, and the half ended with Daly's shot pushing Tech in the lead, 12-10.

It was all Tech in the third stanza and up until the last three minutes of the quarter, where a slight scoring flourish by Roosevelt closed the gap, 19-23.

In the final quarter, wild shooting and wilder passing by both teams held down the scoring, with the result that Tech won by a 4-point margin.

Eastern Forges Ahead.

With Diz Dean, Tom Davis and Harry Bassin leading the Eastern attack against Western, the Lincoln Parkers cracked out a tremendous lead that scaled 12-3 at the quarter.

The second period was a replica of the first inning, with the Kellymen whipping the Western basket for all it was worth, and at the same time holding the Western shots to a minimum. When the timekeeper's whistle blew for the half time, the Eastern quintet was sporting a 28-8 advantage.

Western's Jimmy Corcoran produced a short-lived assault on the Eastern basket which brought the count to 28-14 early in the third stanza. The basket rattling was made against the Lincoln Park reserves.

Throughout the third and fourth period, the Eastern second stringers held the floor, with John McCarthy and Chick Hollidge showing up well for the Blue and White.

Jameson, of District, Reaches Miami Finals

Livesay was carried to the fifteenth hole by Forrest D. Banning, Miami. Jameson upset Fred Meyer, Indianapolis, 5 and 4.

Livesay and Jameson will meet in the 36-hole final tomorrow.

Fitzsimmons, Giants, Signs.

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Today's addition to the roster of signed contracts among the world champion New York Giants came from Freddy Fitzsimmons, the veteran right-handed heaver of knuckle balls. Fitz sent the document from his home in Arcadia, Calif., with a note of confidence in his ability to do even better than 1933, when he won 16 and dropped 11 pitching decisions.

Merrily On Winner of Feature

Love Sick Takes First Race; Lone Hand Is Victor in Sixth.

TROPICAL PARK, Jan. 19 (AP).—Mrs. J. Grossman's Merrily On, the gelding that failed when heavily played a few days ago, his rider losing both stirrup irons at the start, caused a mild surprise here today when he stuck it out for a full mile and beat a smart field in the featured Melbourne Purse. Wayne D. Wright kept the son of John P. Grier going long enough to nose out the highly fancied Repaid, representing "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons. M. Madden's Jamison was third, a full eight lengths back.

Merrily On returned $10.70 for $2 and ran the 8 furlongs in 1:39 through rain which began falling just before the race.

Stroll Along and Broad Meadows, coupled in the betting, ruled favorite, but both folded up after racing well up early. Merrily On showed the high speed which characterized his New Orleans efforts and was coasting along with plenty of daylight until forced to a drive by Repaid at the top of the stretch. The winner displayed more gameness than was expected of him to hold on to his advantage. Jamison, which kicked his ankle in the stall gates when he was badly beaten last time out, closed a great gap to be third.

Love Sick Triumphs.

In one of the closest finishes of the meeting, Love Sick just got up to give C. V. Whitney his first success of the meeting in the 2-year-old opening dash. Many onlookers thought Neon, the pacemaker, lasted long enough to win. Abner, the choice, was off slowly and worked his way up to land the show, three lengths behind. Love Sick paid $15.40.

Earl Porter, local riding sensation, and Wright, second to Westrope in 1933, put on one of the prettiest riding duels seen in many a race in the second event. Porter was on the hot favorite, Bickering, and his mount nosed out Gay Joe after the two had raced almost abreast throughout the 6 furlongs. Kings Minstrel was a beaten-off third. Bickering returned $2.60.

Dont Blush Scores.

Dont Blush, showing more early foot than usual, with Silvio Coucci doing the shoving, was a rather lucky winner of the third event, the mare beating the unfortunate Lucky Jack by a length to pay $7.60. Happy Anne was a tired third and favorite, finishing a poor third. Happy Anne carried Lucky Jack wide turning for home and Coucci shot Dont Blush through on the inside, which settled the result.

Porter again earned a double and his thirtieth local winner when Happy Scot, $3.50 favorite, took the fourth purse by three lengths. Lotta Airs headed Chain for the place. Porter rushed the favorite into a long lead and the 6-year-old held his field safe through the stretch. Earl rode him out, taking no chances. Lotta Airs came from last place to be second.

Lone Hand Pays $15.10.

Lone Hand was much the best in the mile and a furlong of the sixth. The gelding was shuffled back to last a few strides after the start, but he was good enough to overtake all his rivals on the outside and win by 3 lengths. Pencader, heavily backed, had a rough journey. He managed to beat Just Fun by a half length for secondary honors. The winner was a $15.10 shot.

Porter completed a triple in the seventh race, giving Just Buck, $6.70, a strong ride to get the gelding first home by a head in a blanket finish. O'Neill beat Everfair another head for place.

Boat Club Elects.

Strange as It Seems

Ruel C. Gridley, famous character, of Stockton, Calif., in the early days, collected $275,000 for the Sanitary Commission for the Union Army, by selling the same sack of flour over and over. The process was simple—Mr. Gridley would sell his sack of flour, turn the money over to the army fund, then the person to whom he sold the flour wold give it back to him, then he would sell it to someone else. This repeated time and again brought the total sale price of the one sack of flour to $275,000.

A monument erected at his grave in 1887 bears these words, in part: "In gratitude for services rendered Union Soldiers through the War of the Rebellion in collecting $275,000 for the Sanitary Commission by selling and reselling a sack of flour."

A fire which nothing seems able to extinguish has been burning at Summit Hill, Pa., continuously for the past 75 years. It started in a coal-mine shaft, nobody knows just how, in 1858 or early 1859, and has since burned millions of tons of coal. Efforts have been made to quench it with water, but the fire was so hot the water is useless.

The fire burns very slowly, but it has threatened extensive workings of neighboring mines. As there appears to be no hope of putting it out by direct means, engineers hope to pen it up with walls of concrete and clay, then let it burn itself out. To this end one great wall was put in several years ago, but to date it has not been successful. The fire is still burning.

N. C. State Boxers Oppose Tarheels

Fast Bouts Expected at Raleigh Tonight.

Raleigh, Jan. 19 (Spl.).—North Carolina's first 1934 Big Five boxing match will be run off here Sunday night, when State College meets the North Carolina U. Tarheels in Frank Thompson Gymnasium here.

Many fast and thrilling bouts are expected as the match will bring together some of the finest intercollegiate boxing material in the State.

with* Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 19.

Just as I was about to ask for a raise, I drifted back into the two-a-day class—and two heavily played favorites at that. I have to thank Jockey Earl Porter for both of them. I tried to root Everfair home for you in the final. Balaski was away late and Everfair ate up the ground in the stretch to be beaten a nek and a nose for all the money. And we were going to get better than 9-1. I have no excuses for the rest of them. However, we get a new deal tomorrow and I shall endeavor to take full advantage thereof. It is with a feeling of confidence that I pass these along. BILL.

First race—Polisher should leave the maiden ranks in this race. Hasn't had any the best of racing luck hereabouts. Baby John is dangerous in this sort of company. Heiress might run back to that one good race and be a keen factor.

Second race—Dornoch wasn't particularly keen about that mile race the other day, but we all know he can sprint. Mut defeat Hasty Peter to take the major end of the purse. Billies Orphan has speed and can not be taken too lightly.

Third race—Gibby's Choice goes for the Bennings marbles in this race. Needs only to draw a fair apprentice to take the heavy payoff. Bun D. is highly regarded in some circles and seems to have the edge over Lotta Airs.

Fourth race—Making Bubbles appears to have found a spot among this kind. Grayback, which found racing legs at Charles Town, to take the place award from Star Play.

Fifth race—Sandwarck is an old pet of mine but I'm not letting sentiment sway me in this selection. casions and I understand tomorrow Old Sandy can strut his stuff on odis the day. Charlie K will have a lot to say before the money is distributed and we may hear from Miney Myerson. 6

Sixth race—Momo and Don Guzman should fight it out for this purse and I'm takingthem in the order named. Well Built is being whispered along the waterfront and may be the upsetter.

Seventh race—Scout Master came through with something like a real race the other day and off that I'm giving high top ranking over Stone Martin. The sleeper of the field may be Phantom Legion.

Fredericksburg Beats Lane High Five, 16-13

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). The basket ball quint of Fredericksburg High School opened its season here tonight by defeating Lane High, of this city, 16 to 13, in the City Armory.

The game was marked by close guarding on the part of both teams, nad poor shooting from the charity mark.

The first half was hard fought, the visitors caging two baskets, while the local quint got but one, which, with a shot from the foul line by Sours, made the score stand Fredericksburg, 4; Lane, 3.

Lane started the second half with a rush and once enjoyed a 4-point lead. Haskins, a substitute, came to the rescue for thev isitors with two goals and his team mates added eight points to cinch the contest.

Bailey Gets a Job.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 19 (U.P.).—Irvin "Ace" Bailey, whose injuries forced him to retire for the next few years, will be employed on the executive staff of the Maple Leaf Gardens, the United Press was reliably informed today. The nature of the position offered the hockey star was not disclosed, but it was reported he might serve as assistant to Business Manager Frank Selke and act as scout.

Duke's Quintet Encounters Virginia

Cavaliers Invade Devils' Lair for First Time in Several Years.

DURHAM, N. C., Jan. 19 (Spl.). The University of Virginia basket ball team makes its first appearance on a Duke floor in several years by meeting the 1934 edition of Blue Devils in Duke gymnasium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. There will be no preliminary contest.

Coach Tebell, of Virginia, is well remembered by followers of Duke cage teams. In the Southern Conference tournament of 1929 in Atlanta, the N. C. State team of the present Virginia coach defeated Coach Cameron's Blue Devils for the championship.

Duke's cagers played one half of brilliant basket ball against State Wednesday night to keep their Big Five slate clean. It probably was the best showing they have made all year. However, the last half was just the opposite and probably the worst exhibition they have given this season.

Able Defensive Men.

Henry Sturm and Orlin Rogers, a pair of short but fast forwards, have led the Cavaliers in scoring this season. Both are fine shots and able defensive men. John Murphy, of Virginia, and Connie Mack, jr., of Duke, a pair of sophomore centers, should have an interesting engagement.

The line-ups for tomorrow night will probably be: Virginia—Sturm and Rogers, forwards; Murphy, center; Nelson and Marret, guards. Duke—J. Thompson and Kunkle, forwards; Mack, center; H. Thompson and Weaver, guards.

Clang Near Record In His First Start

Sets Fast Pace in Fourth at Jefferson Park.

New Orleans, Jan. 19 (AP).—Clang, a 2-year-old son of Stimulus making his first start, came within one second of equaling the track record for 2 furlongs as he spread-eagled his field in the fourth event at Jefferson Park today.

Away on his toes, the J. F. Clark, jr., standard-bearer set a burning pace from the rise of the barrier, stepping the distance in 23 1-5 seconds under 112 pounds. At the finish he was 6 lengths in front of E. K. Bryson's Moraine. J. J. Robinson's Mr. Bill, another first starter, was third.

Well favored because of brilliant work outs, Clang went to the post the public choice and paid $5.20 for $2.

Did Not Forfeit.

The Wisconsin Motor Co. five and not the Tremont team, as published, forfeited a basket ball game scheduled in the Community Center League Thursday.

Virginia Racing Bill Sponsor Cites Big Profits of Other States

$816,000 in Revenue Collected by Maryland in 1933; Hall Expects Sport to Yield Old Dominion From $225,000 to $750,000.

By a Staff Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Jan. 19.—Figures showing enormous revenue from horse racing in other States were made public today by Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, author of a pending bill to legalize the sport in Virginia.

"These statistics," he explained, "ought to prove a thing or two. For one thing, they should confirm estimates that racing would yield from $225,000 to $750,000 a year for Virginia."

Hall said State racing profits for 1932 included: Maryland, $816,000; Illinois, $570,116.80; New Hampshire, $447,567.60; Florida, $396,996.66; Kentucky, $191,500; Michigan, $125,000; Ohio, $104,058.15; California, $103,663.56; Washington, $80,359.75; Texas, $50,000; Oregon, $24,658.63, and West Virginia, $20,000.

Figures for Louisiana were unavailable.

New York failed to obtain racing revenue in 1932, Hall added, because there was no tax on bookmakers and pari-mutuel machines were not operated.

The Hall plan calls for three Virginia tracks with either pari mutuel or certificate wagering systems. Plants may be sought by Alexandria, Virginia Beach and Charlottesville.

Hall reiterated prospects for passage were bright.

G. U. Prep Five Beats Loyola High, 22 to 19

The Georgetown Prep basket ball team beat down stubborn resistance from the Loyola High School, of Baltimore, five to gain a 22-19 decision yesterday in a nip-and-tuck game played at Garrett Park.

The score was tied, 7-7, going into the second quarter, and 15-15 at the half, but in the third period the Garrett Parkers jumped into the lead which they held till the final whistle.

Court Writ Looms In Horse Release

Action May Be Taken in Charles Town Case.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Possibility that a contempt of court writ would be issued against Merle Alger, Jefferson County constable for releasing Hustle Over, central figure in the widely discussed "painted horse case," was imminent here tonight despite the statement of Sheriff G. K. Wysong that no such writ had been served.

Alger released the horse to Michael Krock, its alleged owner, after it had been committed to his care, pending final settlement of the controversy as to ownership.

The release followed Circuit Judge D. H. Rogers' decision earlier this week that previous decision by Justice J. D. Walker was invalid, although the Circuit Court has not yet determined the legal ownership of the animal.

Hagerstown Resumes Boxing Bouts Jan. 31

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Professional boxing bouts will be brought back to Hagerstown on January 31, the first for over a year. Two Baltimore promoters, Max Prock and Joe Goeller, will promote this and other shows, it was announced.

Boxing bouts, which attracted as many as 1,000 fans during the first year they were introduced here, were discontinued last year after promoters lost heavily in several bouts staged in 1932.

Stocks Stage Spirited Rally; Up 2.4 Points

Selectivity Less Noticeable as Sales Mount to 3,602,590 Shares.

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Markets tapped fresh supplies of power today and prices advanced on most fronts.

On the stock exchange, shares had rather spirited rallies. The rise was broad, accompanied by sizable volume, and recent tendencies toward selectivity were less noticeable.

Sterling's advance against dollars was just as abrupt as yesterday's decline had been, the turnabout being naturally abscribed by Wall street to control efforts of the local Federal Reserve Bank which apparently is doing the work in that connection pending establishment of the proposed equalization fund.

Dollar's Decline Moderate.

The dollar's decline in terms of foreign gold monies was only moderate, but most interest attached to sterling. That currency opened sharply higher and then held a rather narrow range for the balance of the day.

Markets undoubtedly got some stimulation from this evidence that dollars will not be allowed to get too flighty; from a technical standpoint, stocks had the advantage of their own recent coldness to selling, a development which frequently sends traders to the "line of least resistence."

Net gains for a number of leaders ranged from 1 to 3 points. Improvement was broad, though rails had a particularly good head of steam, part of which came from the latest traffic figures. Amusement issues joined the rise in the last hour when Warner Bros. reported its first operating profit since 1930. An assortment of low-priced specialties provided brisk activity and turnover swelled to 3,602,590 shares. The averages gained 2.4 points net.

On Rising List.

Leaders up 1 to around 2 included American Telephone, U. S. Steel, General Electric, American Can, Harvester, Case, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Leow's, Consolidated Gas, North American, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, New York Central, Chicago & North Western, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Illinois Central, Union Pacific and Pennsylvania.

Southern Pacific was strong, up 2½, while Delaware & Hudson, a fast mover, jumped 7½ net and Santa Fe was boosted 3½. Miscellaneous favorites included Fox Film, Warner Bros., a fast mover, jumped 7½ net and Santa Fe was boosted 3½. Miscellaneous favorites included Fox Film, Warner Bros., RKO, Hahn Department Stores, Douglas Aircraft, Congoleum-Nairn, Budd Manufacturing, Grand Union, Mengel and Adams Express.

On the side of trade, reports were again largely favorable. Carloadings last week represented the expected recovery from the previous week which included a holiday, and were 8.9 per cent above 1933.

Domestic Copper Rises.

Copper users, obviously trying to protect themselves against a possible minimum price provision in the code, inquired more actively for metal and the domestic quotation rose to 8½ cents.

Dun & Bradstreet finds general trade movements a bit slower this week, but thinks the background has been laid for continuance of the upward movement.

Among the more reassuring phases of the major trends it enumerates the unseasonally high levels of retail distribution, a broadening of wholesale buying which in some cases is nearly double a year ago, and "the rapid rate at which industrial operations are being resumed."

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Suggested Amendments to the Gold Bill by Secretary of the Treasury Are Not "Miscellaneous Minor Matters" But Changes of Importance.

By Ralph West Robey.

Secretary Morganthau's suggested amendments to the gold bill now being considered by Congress have been passed over by the press as of little importance. This probably is largely the result of their having been characterized by the Secretary as just some "miscellaneous minor matters." The fact is, however, that they are just about as far from being "miscellaneous minor matters" as anything could be. They will profoundly effect the possible financial program of the Administration.

It is suggested, for example, that the Treasury be empowered to make a restricted offering of bonds—"an offering of bonds that will be particularly pleasing to certain large investors such as insurance companies." At present the law makes it mandatory for the Government first to offer all bond issues "as a popular loan, under such regulations, * * * as will * * * give the people of the United States as nearly as may be an equal opportunity to participate therein." The only exception to this is contained in the Thomas amendment giving the Treasury the right under emergency conditions, to enter into an agreement with the Reserve Banks to buy up to $3,000,000,000 of Government obligations. The Secretary asks specifically that he be authorized in blanket terms to sell "bonds otherwise than as a popular loan.

Treasury May Sell Just to Reserve Banks.

The significance of this change should be apparent. It simply is, granting the power is given to the Treasury, that henceforth, without an offering to the general public, it can sell its obligations directly to the Federal Reserve banks and to the thousands of financial institutions in which the Government has a voice in the managment as a result of loans and capital subscriptions by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

More definitely, once this change is made in the statutes, the legal groundwork is laid for the Administration forcing banks to take its obligations. No longer will it be necessary for the Government to subject its credit standing to the scrutiny of the investment market.

A second amendment suggested is that the amount of Treasury notes which may be outstanding be increased from $7,500,000,000 to $10,000,000,000. These are notes having a maturity of not less than one year and not more than five years. Because of their short maturity these are a favorite form of Government obligation for the banks. This will be especially true so long as the banks have doubts over the financial program of the Administration. The change, therefore, will facilitate the carrying on of the spending program, for it will take less force to get the banks to buy this type of paper than it would to get them to buy longer maturities.

Third Change Concerns Gold Certificates.

A third major amendment suggested is a change in the conditions under which the Treasury may issue gold certificates. Heretofore these certificates could be issued only against gold deposited by private persons, except in payment of interest on the public debt. It is proposed that this be changed to enable the Treasury to issue such currency against any gold held by the treasurer, except that pledged against the greenbacks and Treasury notes of 1890.

This change is necessary in order to let the Government spend the so-called profit that will result from a devaluation of the dollar without having to give up possession of the metal. Such a problem has never arisen before because heretofore the Government never has received any gold except through private conversion of the metal for certificates and through taxation or borrowing. This is the first time it has had to find a way to issue currency against a "book profit."

The other changes are less significant. They cover points that will be of aid in the Treasury—handling maturities, the sinking fund, &c. By and large they do not need a vast amount of attention by Congress. On the three suggested amendments discussed above, however, it is to be hoped that Congress will not be fooled by Secretary Morgenthau having termed them "miscellaneous minor matters," or by such smoke-screens as his reference to "large investors, such as insurance companies." It would be more accurate for them to be studied and appraised as three further steps opening the way to uncontrolled inflation.

Curb's Prices Advance on Broad Demand

All Types of Issues Join Rise; Sales Mount to 473,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—A broad demand for all types of shares boosted curb prices 1 to 4 ponts today. Trading was heavy and the trend was upward nearly all of the way. Utilities again ruled favorites but wide gains were also scored by industrials.

Oils and metals did well while some improvement occurred in the recently lethargic alcohols.

Safety Car Heating rose 6 points on a light transfer while gains of around 4 were shown by Gulf Oil, Columbia Gas & Electric preferred and Axton Fisher. Shares firming 1 to 2 points or more included American Gas & Electric, Commonwealth Edison, Electric Bond & Share, Humble Oil, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Standard Oils of Kentucky and Ohio.

Transfers approximated 473,000 shares compared with 307,000 for yesterday.

Copper Prices Advance ⅛, to 8⅜ Cents Pound

New York, Jan. 19 (AP).—Copper again advanced in the domestic market today. Sales were reported at 8⅜ cents a pound, delivered, to the end of April, up one-eighth of a cent from yesterday. The custom smelter making this sale later advanced its quotation to 8½ cents.

Demand for metal was quickened by reports that virtual agreement has been reached on a code for the copper industry which will contain provision for a minimum price.

Railway General Mortgage.

New York, Jan. 19.—In response to a purchase offer which expired last Tuesday, the trustees of Mobille & Ohio Railway general mortgage 4 per cent bonds, due in 1938, received tenders at around par for $167,000. Before the offer the amount of bonds publicly held was $277,000. The remainder of the issue is held in pledge for an issue of Southern Railway Mobile & Ohio 4 per cent bonds.

Cotton Gains Again Under Trade Buying

January Closes at 11.25 as General Market Rises 13 to 19 Points.

New York Jan. 19 (AP).—Cotton recovered a good part of its recent losses today. A subsidence of recent selling pressure left the market sensitive to buying orders, and May contracts sold up to 11.50 or 21 points net higher and within 15 points of Monday's high level on a moderate trade and commission house demand. May closed at 11.45, with the general list finishing steady at net advances of 13 to 19 points.

The opening was unchanged to 4 points higher, which was only a partial response to the steady Liverpool cables and the advance in foreign exchange rates.

Liquidation and a scattered selling was absorbed by trade and commission house buying and covering, however, and the market showed increasing firmness later on the demand from these sources.

Wall Street Buys.

Houses with Wall street connections were buyers, while strength in wheat and stocks contributed to the better tone of the market, and the absence of further selling through houses recently credited with operating for Government agencies evidently made a favorable impression on sentiment.

March contracts advanced to 11.35 and July to 11.65 in the late trading making the gains of about 14 to 24 points, but closing prices were slightly off from the best under realizing.

Trading was less active than recently. The decrease in offerings encouraged talk of an improved technical position, but considerable buying was attributed to the firmer tone of the stock market and reports of a continued firm spot situation in the South.

A disposition was reported in some quarters to even up accounts pending further developments with reference to the gin control bill, and this may have accounted for some covering. Exports today, 45,480, making 4,733,240 so far this season. Port receipts, 20,430. United States port stocks, 3,873,342.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firmer on increased covering and buying of July by trade or commission houses, influenced by the firmness of cotton, together with the upturn in grain and stocks. Final prices were 5 to 12 points net higher. Sales, 53 contracts, including 16 in exchanges. Bleachable spot, nominal; January closed, 4.65; March, 4.81; May, 4.92; July, 5.15.

China's Export Of Tung Oil Cut In November

Exports of tung oil to the United States from Hankow in November totaled 4,686,000 pounds, compared with 9,590,000 pounds for October, and 1,550,000 pounds for November, 1932, according to the Chemical Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

November exports of oil from Hankow amounted to 6,154,000 pounds, compared with 12,718,000 pounds for October and 4,204,000 pounds for November, 1932. Europe took 1,468,000 pounds during November, compared with 3,128,000 pounds received the previous month and 2,654,000 pounds for the corresponding month of 1932. Stocks of oil on hand at Hankow the end of November were estimated at 3,340 short tons, a reduction of 1,160 short tons, compared with October and an increase of 2,640 short tons in contrast with stocks on hand the end of November, 1932.

Statistical tabulation below indicates that total exports of oil to the United States for the first 11 months of 1933 were considerably higher than for the same months of 1932:

Freight Loads Increase to 555,627 Cars

Week's Shipments Advance 55,688 Units; All Districts Gain.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended on January 13 totaled 555,627 cars, the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association announced today.

This was an increase of 55,688 cars above the preceding week when loading was reduced owing to New Year's holiday. It also was an increase of 45,734 cars above the same week in 1933, but a decrease of 17,022 cars below the corresponding week in 1932.

Miscellaneous freight loading for the week of January 13 totaled 184,256 cars, an increase of 13,405 cars above the preceding week, and 23,003 cars above the corresponding week in 1933, but a reduction of 3,824 cars below the corresponding week in 1932.

Loading of Merchandise.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 158,330 cars, an increase of 23,963 cars above the preceding week, but 675 cars below the corresponding week in 1933, and 28,293 cars below the same week in 1932.

Grain and grain products loading for the week totaled 29,559 cars, an increase of 6,170 cars above the preceding week, but 999 cars below the corresponding week in 1933, and 1,448 cars below the same week in 1932. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended January 13 totaled 19,229 cars, a decrease of 83 cars below the same week in 1933.

Forest products loading totaled 18,146 cars, an increase of 3,268 cars above the preceding week, 4,052 cars above the same week in 1933, and 49 cars above the same week in 1932.

Ore Loadings Up.

Coal loading amounted to 137,036 cars, an increase of 6,663 cars above the preceding week, 18,227 cars above the corresponding week in 1933, and 17,915 cars above the same week in 1932.

Coke loading amounted to 7,295 cars, a decrease of 332 cars below the preceding week, but 1,706 cars above the same week in 1933 and 1,333 cars above the same week in 1932.

Live Stock Loads Gain.

Live stock loading amounted to 17,787 cars, an increase of 2,159 cars above the preceding week, but 374 cars below the same week in 1933, and 3,655 cars below the same week in 1932.

In the Western districts alone, loading of live stock for the week ended January 13 totaled 13,811 cars, a decrease of 361 cars, compared with the same week in 1933.

All districts reported increases for the week of January 13, compared with the corresponding week in 1933, but all districts reported reductions compared with the corresponding week in 1932, except the Eastern and Pocahontas, which showed increases.

Loading of revenue freight in 1934, compared with the previous year, follows:

	1934.	1933.
Week ended January 13.....	555,627	509,893
Total	1,055,566	949,362

Canada Cuts Sale of U.S. Periodicals

The circulation of American periodicals has been greatly curtailed in Canada during the past two years, according to a report from Consul Damon C. Woods, Toronto, made public by the Commerce Department. During the same period, it is pointed out, Canadian magazines have been able to make notable gains.

The loss in circulation of American publications, the report shows, was largely due to the imposition in June, 1931, of increased tariffs on many classes of newspapers and magazines entering Canada from the United States.

A survey recently made covering thirty of the better-known American magazines showed that total Canadian circulation had decreased from 1,266,802 in June, 1930, to 663,674 in June, 1933, or approximately 48 per cent. The circulation of one American weekly registered a decrease of 88 per cent in the period covered.

The duty of 15 cents a copy imposed on the so-called "pulp" magazines imported into Canada has, in effect, barred their admission into the Dominion, the report points out.

During the twelve months ended September 30, 1933, the value of newspapers and magazines imported into Canada from the United States was $2,553,738, compared with $3,195,045 in the corresponding period of the preceding year. During the twelve months ended March 31, 1931, the period immediately preceding the effective date of the present tariff schedule, the total amounted to $4,116,620.

Monongah Bank Opens In Unrestricted Business

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). The First National Bank of Monongah, at Monongah, resumed business on an unrestricted basis this week under orders received from the Comptroller of the Currency. It had been on a restricted basis since the National banking holiday last March.

John D. Anthony, conservator, resumed his position as cashier, which he filled for many years prior to the conservatorship.

Distinguished Visitor Returns

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (Spl.).—In this charming winter's day, that is tomorrow, there returns to this hospitable shore the distinguished person of Maximilian Adolf Adalbert Anton Otto, Wotan, Gurnemanz Fafair Schmeling, the former heavyweight champion of the world and Germany's gift to the heavyweight division. I think I may have got some of his names mixed up with the given names of Max Baer, but the point is whatever names Schmeling had last June, Baer knocked him loose from all of them one night at the Yankee Stadium. Long after Der Schmeling had retired to the dressing rooms attendants in the arena were still cleaning up the names from which Baer had knocked him loose.

We will have in our midst tomorrow morning a young man, one who has newly acquired the rather dubious title of husband, whose one ambition in life is to hit Baer a schlag, as we say in the Reichstag, so that Baer will be ausgeknockt.

If the beatings that Herr Schmeling absorbed from Baer and from the state of elysia, known as wedded bliss, have not robbed him of too much and he is able to get past Steve Hamas, the Penn State football player, whom he meets in Philadelphia on February 13, there seems to be every likelihood that the German will get another crack at Baer in Los Angeles, and this for the Marion Davies fund for something or other.

Herr Direktor Yacobs was not quite clear on the subject, but the Davies charities are well known on the Coast, they are gracious and distinctly worth while and if there is a suggestion that Baer fight Schmeling for the benefit of this charity, I would say that it would be awfully good for Mr. Baer if he did. He claims he can knock Schmeling out any time they meet. On the strength of the last one I would say that he was right. But I would like to see Schmeling get the chance.

The West-East telephone strands have been kept tingling the last few days by the peppery voice of Marcus Aurelius Kelly, the red-headed Los Angeles sports editor, who, apparently, has been commissioned to bring about the rematching of Baer and Schmeling for the Davies charity. The brawl seems well under way when certain factors are taken into consideration—Baer doesn't want to fight for the Garden because they insist upon his signing to defend his title for them if he wins. Leaping Lena Levinsky, the lady fight manager since Kate Flynn, relict of Leo Flynn, turned in her stable, outsmarted herself out of a Schmeling bout. If Schmeling beats Hamas, and Herr Direktor Yacobs promises he will knock him out, the Baer-Schmeling rematch is in, and I have to go back to California to see it and get rained on some more.

Herr Direktor Yacobs has planned Schmeling's next training camp so that it will be on the edge of a lake or overhanging a precipice—anywhere where Herr Schmeling can not walk. Herr Direktor Yacobs remembers to his sorrow that Herr Schmeling walked himself out of his last prize fight and does not mean to have it happen again. I was one of those who attended the rehearsals for Schmeling's last fight, conducted in some lake and mountain retreat in New Jersey, and I used to marvel at the energy that Schmeling would use up walking ceaselessly and down on the sod in front of his cottage.

He and Max Machon had worn a trench in the dirt where their dogs had trudged endless hours, back and forth, back and forth. I used to sit in an easy chair inside the cottage and quaff a cooling glass of brew and nibble on a schnitte or schinken brodchen prepared by the loving hands of Otto, the cook, and see the two forms of Max and Machon pass and repass the window relentlessly. Sometimes they chatted as they walked, sometimes they walked and thought, and most of the time they just walked.

"How long does this go on?" I inquired of Herr Direktor Yacobs.

"Don't ask me," said the manager. "They're driving me crazy with that stuff. They been doing that for a month now. I don't see how that can do no fighter no good, but I ain't sayin' nothing. If he wants to walk, he walks."

It was shortly after the fight with Baer began that Schmeling returned to his corner and reported the happy news to Jacobs that was feeling very tired.

"That is a fine time to be finding that out," the Herr Direktor is reported to have said. "You should have thought of that when you were walking up and down on that path outside of the house. Go on out there now and hit that big monkey a clip on the chin and knock him down, at least. How the hell are we going to get the nod from these judges if you keep on slapping him on the arms and the shoulders?"

Now it may have been true that Schmeling was tired. It also was true that Baer hit the German a couple of mighty belts alongside the head in the opening rounds, which same gesture has frequently contributed to fatigue of prize-fighters. Schmeling thereupon advised Jacobs that he was so very tired that he could hardly raise his arms to make even intimidating gestures toward Baer. When Baer, who had sampled one good bust in the nose early in the fight, discovered this he upped and knocked Herr Schmeling loose from every one of his names.

But you will never get the Herr Direktor to believe that it was anything but that pacing up and down before the house that did it. In fac,, Herr Direktor Yacobs is looking for a nice houseboat for Schmeling's training quarters.

Minor Leagues in Mid-West Show Symptoms of Reviving

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP).—Minor League baseball, which finished the 1933 season hanging on the ropes, is showing signs—albeit weak ones—of going another round in the mid-West.

Surviving organized mid-West units are the Mississippi Valley and Western leagues. The Western—among the oldest in organized baseball—limped through the 1933 season with a makeshift eight-club circuit playing in seven cities.

One team started at Wichita, switched to Muskogee, Okla., at the end of a month, went broke, and finished the season as the Orphans, a strictly road club operated by the league. The Huchinson, Kans., club fared a little better, winding up as a representative of Bartlesville, Okla.

Have Four as Nucleus.

Of the other six clubs, Springfield, Mo., and Joplin, Mo., have been dropped from consideration for 1934 franchises, along with Muskogee and Bartlesville. This leaves Des Moines, Omaha, St. Joseph and Topeka as a nucleus for reorganization.

One suggestion calls for the addition of Denver and Pueblo, Colo., two former members of the league, to make a six-club circuit. There is also the possibility of adding Lincoln, Nebr., Sioux City, Iowa, or Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

Denver is said to be ready to go, but Pueblo fans have yet to put up the necessary backing. The league can't afford to have either of these "Far Western" clubs in without the other because of the expense of the trips. Lincoln has shown no disposition to draw away from the Nebraska State League, which has operated successfully through the depression on a strictly mutual basis.

Study Football Attendance.

Another suggestion would combine the four certain starters in the Western with Rock Island and Davenport of the Mississippi Valley League. This latter loop appears decidedly uncertain of starting next season, whether these members withdraw or not. Davenport, in winning both halves of the split season, as well as the playoff, was able only to just about break even.

Meanwhile, diamond moguls may study increased football attendance of last fall before they make up their minds finally.

Sopwith's Crew Speeds Work on Cup Challenger

Gosport, England (AP).—Workmen are going full steam ahead on the building of Mr. T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour, challenger for the America's Cup.

The lead keel has been cleaned off and placed in position to receive the keel plate and already a start has been made in building the actual hull of the yacht.

The lead keel casting turned out to be so flawless that the work of building the all-steel hull has proceeded without delay.

Meanwhile Endeavour's sails also are being cut in a Gosport loft alongside the slips on which the yacht is being built.

Her mainsail will be made from a fabric specially woven of Egyptian and Soudanese cotton and will be cut on lines that will give to the bottom of the sail a lift similar to that of an airplane wing while the top of the sail yields the maximum of wind efficiency.

See Vines as Big "Draw."

New York (AP).—Promoters predicted that Ellsworth Vines, jr., former national tennis champion, would play before 100,000 spectators during the first five weeks of his tour as a professional with Bill Tilden. The two stars are scheduled to play in 16 of the country's leading cities in 13 States.

Unusual Honors for Newman.

New York (AP).—Harry Newman, former Michigan quarter back now playing with the New York Giants, was the only "freshman" player in the National Professional Football League to gain a place on the 1933 all-star team picked by league coaches.

Jim Healy Likes Derby Chances of Irish Colt

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 19 (U.P.).—The sixtieth running of the Kentucky Derby will carry a distinct international angle it was indicated today in the reports from the East stating that Jim Healy, trainer of Mrs. John Hay Whitney's stable, regards the Irish colt, The Immortal, even more highly than he does her Singing Wood, one of the Derby favorites.

The Immortal was the 2-year-old champion of Ireland last year. He carried 138 pounds in one race and beat the best opposition to win the title. Singing Wood, winenr of the rich Belmont Futurity, with $88,050 to his credit, was the leading thoroughbred of any age in winning purses in 1933.

AUCTION SALES

TUESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1934—
THOS. J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers. 1431 Eye Street Northwest.

Trustees' Sale of Valuable Modern Residence Known as Premises 2922 45th Street Northwest, Wesley Heights.

The exterior makes a picture of quaint charm with its rustic chimney of brick and stone. Attractive groupings of rooms in this compact plan make a very livable home. Many windows make all the rooms light and cheerful and provide to leave ample wall space for furniture. The living room is given character by its interesting fireplace and the recessed bookshelves balancing the area to the left.

The kitchen with three exposures is conveniently arranged for work.

The second floor has four good bedrooms arranged with a bath between each group of two rooms. The largest bedroom is over the living room with a southeast exposure. Finished room in the attic.

Two-car detached stucco garage.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust duly recorded in Liber 6720, folio 218, etc., of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will sell, at public auction in front of the premises, on TUESDAY, the TWENTY-THIRD DAY OF JANUARY, A. D. 1934, at THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and designated as and being Lot 41 in square 1338 in Miller et al. subdivision of lots in block "Wesley Heights," as per plat recorded in Liber 97 at folio 64; subject to a perpetual right of way for all general purposes of ingress and egress for privately driven autos only, over the south 4 feet by the full depth of said lot 41.

TERMS: Sold subject to a prior deed of trust for $11,500.00, further particulars of which will be announced at time of sale; the purchase price above said trust to be paid in cash. A deposit of $1,000.00 required. Conveyancing, recording and revenue stamps at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within 15 days, otherwise deposit forfeited and the property may be advertised and resold at the discretion of the trustees.

The Woman Angle

Walt Mason Himself

The Western Story.

A lovely lady, named Rose or Sadie, inherits Bar-Q ranch; she ought to shun it, but comes to run it, and boost it root and branch. An Eastern college has stored with knowledge her fair and shapely dome, and she can prattle of Greeks in battle until the cows come home. But how to handle the Goth and Vandal who steal a rancher's steers is quite beyond her, and she must ponder on problems fraught with fears. Thieves come like shadows across the meadows when night its curtain pulls; as still as zephyrs they steal her heifers, her yearlings and her bulls. Affliction grinds her, each fortnight finds her much deeper in the hole; she realizes how trouble rises, the poorhouse is her goal. Then young Bill Cider, the demon rider, comes bravely to her aid; a lad outspoken, untamed, unbroken, he calls a spade a spade. His pinto pony is long and bony and decked in brave array, and it can travel through sand and gravel some 50 miles a day. Then Bill goes hooting and blithely shooting at that fair maid's behest; he piles up corpses and mangled horses where rustlers made their nest. He is the solver, with his revolver, of problems stern and grave; the mob disperses in country hearses, he kills the last cheap knave. Bill, on his pony, talks matrimony, as do all gallant gents; his fair employer calls in her lawyer for marriage settlements.

Rabbi Sees Collapse Of Vocational Guidance

The collapse of the system of vocational guidance is the most marked result of the conditions through which civilization is now passing, according to Rabbi Edward L. Israel, of Baltimore, who delivered the second of a series of lectures in the course of volunteers in social work at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building yesterday.

Rabbi Israel said that in this swiftly moving mechanized age, it is impossible for the average parents to tell what to teach their children.

"King for a Night" Begins Week at the Rialto—Premiere Booked for National

Tale of Night Life, Ring and Tragic Ending

Chester Morris Stars as a Champion Scrapper; New Guild Play Coming.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

"KING FOR A NIGHT." Universal picturization of a story by William Anthony McGuire, featuring Chester Morris, Helen Twelvetrees, Alice White and Grant Mitchell, with George E. Stone, George Meeker, John Miljan and Frank Albertson. Directed by Kurt Neuman. Reviewed Thursday evening.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The effectiveness of a conventional prize ring-night club story, which otherwise might have been redeemed from utter mediocrity by its frequent flashes of comedy, fast action and the competent playing of its principals, is here almost completely vitiated by a lamentable attempt to harmonize extremes of spiritual viewpoint and as flagrant an anticlimax as ever was permitted to destroy what might have been a tender, if not convincing, moment of moving drama.

The author's primary blunder seems to have been to make the pivotal figures in his play the children of a devout and respected village clergyman. The fact that the Rev. Williams had in the earlier years of his young manhood aspired to be a prizefighter does not wholly reconcile one to the view that his son must be a poolroom battler, who scorns parental influence and wishes to become a professional pug in New York, and his daughter a rebellious young freethinker willing to accept chorus girl's job in a New York night spot and become the fight promoter's favorite "girl."

A False Note.

After the girl has murdered her lover, the boy, who has just won the championship, has confessed to the crime and has been led to the door of the electrocution chamber by his ministerial father, who watches the lights flicker as his son's life is burned out, it seems something this side of sound character drawing and realistic drama to make the doting parent's only comment one of thanksgiving that his son was "sincere" in all his heresy and honest in his transgressions!

It may occur to some that even violations of the social and moral codes that are freely admitted still fall a little short of being virtues.

If these palpable weaknesses in a story that shifts from the simple pursuits of a small town to the hurly-burly of Broadway can be condoned, there is much in "King for a Night" in which a not too exacting amusement seeker may find lively pleasure.

Exciting Fight Scenes.

There are fight scenes that pack considerable thrill, comedy that is frequently authentic and occasional bursts of tunefulness that give the night club sequences a naturalistic touch.

In one of the ring scenes, as a matter of fact, Chester Morris' opponent in a visibly bogus workout is Slapsy Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight champion of the world. In this particular bout, Mr. Rosenbloom, a familiar figure to Twin City patrons, seems to have lost his eye for distance. He knocks Mr. Morris cold with punches that miss Mr. Morris by yards!

Chester Morris, nevertheless, is entitled to take his place beside Ben Lyon, Jimmy Dunn, Jimmy Cagney and all the other boys who have gone through the motions of being fisticuffers in one or more of their pictures. Mr. Morris is a better actor than most of them and in seemingly better physical shape than any.

Helen Twelvetrees and Alice White divide feminine honors as "Kid" Williams' sister, Lillian, and Evelyn Harrington, chorus lady, respectively. Miss Twelvetrees, a little more languorous than usual, perhaps, has slightly the better of the score at the final tabulation.

An Earnest Actor.

Grant Mitchell makes an earnest and not wholly unsuccessful effort to lend the character of Rev. Williams a greater degree of credibility than the author has written into it.

The pathetic, punch-drunk exchamp, who hovers about the gyms and fight clubs in futile quest of "just one more fight" to get his title back, is made an eloquent object lesson for ring aspirants who aren't quite good enough, by Warren Hymer. This character of Goofy is by far the most truly drawn of any in the picture. John Miljan is a typically sinister embodiment of the spirit of the bird of prey, whose demise, nevertheless, seems a bit more precipitate than even he deserved.

A rustic comedy bearing the title of "Mountain Music," in which Louise Fazenda struggles valiantly with lines and situations that are something less than inspired, and Mr. McNamee's glib interpretations of the current events included in the new issue of the Universal News, comprise the only auxiliaries of a feature that would suffer little by a quick and decisive amputation of its final reel.

Speaking of Louise Fazenda, an admirable person who is merely unfortunate in ever having got herself mixed up in as futile an enterprise as "Mountain Music"—and we are speaking of her somewhere back there—this vigorous and versatile Hoosier comedienne should begin setting about the serious business of watching her calories. Miss Fazenda, at the moment, is not quite so flowingly streamlined as she was back in the old days of her "Sis Hopkins" make-up as chief feminine funster on the Mack Sennet lot. Miss Fazenda, to be brutal about it, is just plain fat—and doesn't seem to care a hoot if she is!

School Is Open!

The Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts began its winter term last Monday, January 15, with the largest enrollment in its brief, but sensationally successful history. Many of the students of the preceding term returned for further training, in addition to which 40 new students matriculated.

Enrollments will continue to be accepted for the current 10-week term until its half is completed. Late members of the classes will be given the advantage of extra session in which it will be possible to make up the work they may have lost by tardy enrollment.

At the end of the term, as usual, the pupils of the academy will be presented in a public stage performance in the National Theater. These performances, under the personal direction of Clifford Brooke and his associate, Maurice Greet, have been eminently successful in the past.

Dorothy Lee, last week appearing in person with Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey, at the Earle, yesterday afternoon was accorded a private screening of her latest short-reel subject, "Plane Crazy," recently shown locally in one of the Warner houses, in the private projection room in the Earle Theater Building. Miss Lee had never before seen this particular subject and found it better than she had expected. She is supported in it by Arthur and Morton Havel and the Stone and Vernon Adagio Four, both acts that have been seen frequently on Washington stages.

Ken Canceled.

Late advices last night were to the effect that Ken Murray, announced as headliner of the vaudeville bill to be inaugurated today at the Earle, will not appear as scheduled.

Owing to a sudden death in the family of one of the members of his act, the Earle engagement for the time being has been canceled.

This sudden development has the effect of elevating the fidgety and frolicsome Mlle. Fifi D'Orsey to the headline spot on the program. She was originally billed as an "extra added attraction," which is what she is apt to turn out to be under any circumstances.

To complete the requisite number of acts, Medley and Duprey have been added to the roster of stage players for the ensuing week.

A late bulletin from Russel Crouse, co-author of Joe Cook's "Hold Your Horses" and one of the production executives of the Theater Guild, announces that John Wexley's new play dealing with the Scottsboro case, will have its world premiere in the National Theater on the night of February 19. Ruth Gordon and Linda Watkins have already been signed for the leading feminine roles in the play. Philip Moeller, who directed "Biography," starring Ina Claire, currently at the National, will direct the new piece and the settings will be designed by Lee Simonson. Mr. Wexley will be remembered as the author of "The Last Mile," a play leveled against capital punishment.

A Capital Guest.

Senorita Maria Iturbi, 16-year-old daughter of Jose Iturbi and chatelaine of the pianist's big estate and estancia in Spain, will come to Washington with the virtuoso Sunday afternoon for his appearance in concert at Constitution Hall as the fourth attraction of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey's Sunday afternoon concert series at that auditorium.

Senorita Iturbi will reach Washington with her father by motor on Sunday morning and go with the pianist to the White House, where, it is understood, they will be luncheon guests of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt is expected to occupy the White House box at Iturbi's concert and it is likely that Maria will be one of her party.

Each season Maria comes to the United States with her father and goes on many of his concert tours with him as a sort of personal secretary and body-guard combined. She is adamant when it comes to disturbing Iturbi during his preconcert siestas.

"My father," says Maria, quaintly, "can not be disturbed before a concert."

The newsreels this week are reminiscent of that opening skit of Willie Howard's in the Shubert-Ziegfeld Follies. They are one president behind in their announcement of the supposedly current political state of things in Cuba! However, it is highly probable that it would only be news if they weren't.

Xmas Carditis!

Would it be a serious violation of ethics and etiquette if one were to throw away one's 1925 Christmas cards to make room on the attic shelf for the last batch?

Or, this far away from the Grand Canyon, what does one do with one's Christmas cards? That is, those one can't use oneself next year!

Makes Debut in Tumultuous Role

A colorful camera study of Grace Bradley, the picturesque young woman who appears in the role of the Russian vamp in "Girl Without a Room," now on the screen at the Metropolitan. It is Miss Bradley who is called upon to take part in the rough-and-tumble wrestling bout with Charlie Ruggles—a rousing match which both seem to enjoy and she won, with a hold that Jim Londos probably would be glad to hear about.

L. B. Underwood, Pastor, 75, Buried

Virginia Pneumonia Victim Born in Pennsylvania.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Funeral services were held yesterday for the Rev. L. B. Underwood, 75, who died at Irvington from pneumonia.

Born in Hillville, Pa., he served Baptist pastorates in Pennsylvania, New York, and Virginia. In this State he was pastor at Waverly and at Farnham.

Surviving are his widow, his daughter, Mrs. M. J. Kennedy, of Rochester, N. Y.; two sons, Willis H. Underwood and Alfred L. Underwood, of Yorktown, Va., and a brother, John Underwood, of Terrill, Ohio. Services were conducted from the Irvington Baptist Church by the Rev. J. R. Cosdy, assisted by the Rev. E. N. Odell and the Rev. George B. Schools.

New Theft Law For Maryland Nets First Fine

$5 Penalty for $4.50 Theft Ordered by Justice; Gem Trial Opened.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.). The law enacted at the recent special session of the General Assembly, giving magistrates jurisdiction in cases of larceny for less than $25, was invoked for the first time yesterday in the case of David Knode, fined $5 for the theft of articles valued at $4.50 by Magistrate Richard Duffey.

Jewel Trial Opens.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 19 (AP). Aaron Rose, of Charleston, went on trial in Kanawha County intermediate court yesterday for the larceny of $16,000 in jewels stolen from a Chicago woman while a guest at a White Sulphur Springs hotel in May, 1932.

The jewels were stolen from Mrs. J. Clark Dean, while a guest at the Greenbrier Hotel.

James Jackson, a Negro bellboy, now serving a three years' sentence for stealing the jewels, testified he made arrangements to sell two diamond bracelets to Webb Holesapple, of Charleston.

Jackson asserted he was told to bring the bracelets to Charleston, where, he asserted, he engaged Johnny Wooden, a Negro, to get $1,150 for the jewels and bring the money to him. Wooden, who has served a prison term in the case, told the jury he was paid the $1,150 by Rose.

Holesapple was indicted in Greenbrier County for receiving the jewels, but a verdict of acquittal was directed in his trial Tuesday.

Bausell Case Delayed.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—The trial of Henry P. Bausell and his son, Bernace, on charges of shooting to death T. E. Cornett, 55, and his daughter, Mrs. Virginia Cornett Bausell, 24, will not be held until the April term of Wythe County circuit court, Commonwealth's Attorney Harry Parsons said today.

Acquitted in Killing.

Gate City, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—A Scott County circuit court jury today found John Bishop not guilty of murder in the death of Eugene Clark.

Clark was fatally wounded at the Bishop home in Wadlow Gap two months ago. Bishop claimed self-defense, maintaining he shot Clark only as the latter advanced upon him with a knife. Officers found a knife beside Clark before he was removed from the scene, and another knife was found in his clothing at the hospital where he died.

The trial of Emory Brickey, Fort Blackmore, Va., merchant, indicted for murder in connection with the slaying of Elmore Anderson, 12, at Brickey's store several weeks ago, opened yesterday.

Brig. Gen. Reckord Urged as Governor

Crisfield, Md., Jan. 19 (AP).—The name of Brig. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, State adjutant general, today was listed among the leading possible candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Maryland.

Gen. Reckord's name was proposed last night by a meeting of some 75 former service men, representing every veterans' organization in Somerset County.

Saying there is "a stronger sentiment in favor of Gen. Milton Atchinson Reckord," a resolution adopted said the representatives "would like to indorse Gen. Reckord and ask him to become a candidate." The adjutant general said he felt "deeply grateful to my friends of the Eastern Shore for this high compliment," but declined any other remarks.

Three Awarded Cheney Medal For Air Valor

Officer and Two Sergeants Honored for Saving Pair in Crash.

The Cheney Award, an annual recognition for acts of valor and self-sacrifice in Army aviation, was awarded yesterday to three men for the first time in its history, it was announced by the War Department.

Second Lieut. William L. Bogen, Air Reserve; Staff Sergt. Roy D. Dodd, Sixtieth Service Squadron, and Sergt. Thomas J. Rogers, Ninetieth Attack Squadron, were the joint winners, awarded for meritorious acts performed while members of the Third Attack Group, stationed at Fort Crockett, Tex.

The acts of bravery for which the award was recommended occurred at Fort Clark, Tex., May 4, 1933, when the plane piloted by Lieut. Bogen fell in a group of trees and burst into flames.

Lieut. Bogen and Sergts. Dodd and Rogers reentered the burning plane and saved the lives of two trapped passengers.

The award consists of a bronze plaque and an engraved certificate and each will receive $200.

The citation was established in memory of Lieut. William H. Cheney, Air Corps, who was killed in an air collision at Foggia, Italy, January 20, 1918. The donors are Mrs. Mary L. C. Scofield, of Peterboro, N. H., and Mrs. Ruth Cheney Streeter, of Morristown, N. J., his mother and sister.

"Friend of the People."

Bucyrus, Ohio (U.P.).—One public official who doesn't dodge his constituents is Representative Brooks Fletcher, of Marion, who, when in his district, buys newspaper advertising space announcing public meetings in various towns. Representative Fletcher says he has interviewed as many as 200 persons at such single sessions.

Leonard Hall Opens Chapel Seating 500

Middletown Lay Leader Honored by Church Sunday School.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.). A new chapel has been dedicated at Leonard Hall School which will seat 500 persons.

For this purpose a study hall was made over and a beautiful marble altar, which had been too large for the former chapel, is now used. The room formerly used as a chapel has been converted into a recreation hall.

Leonard Hall is a school for boys, near here, conducted by the Xaverian Brothers. Brother Pasqual is the principal.

The Rev. Lewis F. Havermale, missionary of the Methodist Church, from the Western China University, who is on vacation at Camp Springs, Md., will give an illustrated lecture on China, at St. Paul's Methodist Church here Wednesday at 7:45 p. m.

Ira J. Young Reelected.

Middletown, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Ira J. Young, retired farmer of Middletown, formerly of near Burkittsville, on Sunday will begin his twentieth consecutive year as superintendent of St. Paul's Lutheran Sunday School, Burkittsville. He was unanimously reelected last Sunday.

As a mark of appreciation for Mr. Young's long service, the pastor, the Rev. Harry C. Froman, will present a special sermon.

Other officers elected: Vernon Ahalt, assistant superintendent; Claude Ahalt, superintendent primary department; Robert Ahalt, secretary; Earl Pry, treasurer; Clarence M. Hightman, chorister, and Miss Ruth Erdman, pianist.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Appointment of State members of the international executive board, a special committee on expanding work and delegates to the forthcoming international convention in Chicago is announced by the West Virginia Council of Religious Education.

The West Virginia members of the National board are O. J. Morrison and the Rev. J. M. Knight, both of Charleston. The delegates to the Chicago convention, which will be held February 14-15, are the Rev. Byron Flory, of Clarksburg; J. W. Merrick, and O. J. Morrison, of Charleston, and Miss Katie Belle Abney and T. J. Davis, of Harrisville.

The special committee, which will consider the need of enlarging the scope of the State council's work, comprises the Rev. Frank Donaldson, the Rev. A. B. Leamer, and the Rev. J. M. Knight, all of Charleston; the Rev. Charles G. Stater, of Huntington; the Rev. A. H. Rapking, of Lost Creek, and the Rev. F. E. Brinistool, of Charleston, general secrtary of the State council.

Clarke County Agent Chosen

C. C. Funkhouser Is Named to Wheat Production Control Post.

Berryville, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Charles C. Funkhouser, of White Post, has been named agent by the Clarke County Wheat Production Control Association.

The Clarke County Board of Supervisors voted unfavorably on appropriating money necessary for the county agent so the wheat production association decided to take $500 secretarial funds in the treasury and employ the agent.

Mr Funkhouser will have charge of Federal-farmer projects.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). The Government's corn and hog reduction plan was explained to farmers from local counties yesterday by K. E. Litton, of the animal husbandry department of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The plan was put into operation here under the wheat allotment committees of Caroline, King George, Spottsylvania and Stafford Counties. At the meeting yesterday only representatives from King George and Stafford Counties attended.

Virginians Friendly To Runaway Girl

Family and Police Try to Aid Philadelphian.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Sergt. J. Conway Chichester, of the city police, yesterday refused to send home Miss Ada Dessler, 16, a Philadelphia runaway, found after a two days' search by local police in the home of the Lamberts, Spotsylvania County farm family near Five Mile Fork.

The girl said she answered an advertisement asking for girls for "pleasant" work on Chincoteague Island, Va. She left home, she said, because of inability to get along with her stepmother.

Chief Perry said the Lambert family desires to keep the girl, who has implored not to be sent home. Authorities await word from her father in Philadelphia.

Typhoid Death Starts Inquiry

Teacher in Frederick Is Fever Victim; Water at School Tested.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.). Health officials of Frederick and Shenandoah Counties today were making an intensive investigation of possible sources of infection, following the death from typhoid fever at Mountain Falls yesterday of Mrs. Edna Page Cleaver, a teacher in the school there.

Mountain Falls is a small settlement in a sparsely settled section of Frederick County near the Shenandoah County line. Meager information from the section this afternoon stated that four or five pupils in the Mountain Falls school were believed suffering from typhoid.

Dr. G. G. Snarr, Winchester; Dr. G. G. Crawford, and C. H. Spiggle, Strasburg, and Dr. Rawlings, of Wardensville, W. Va., were called into the infected area. They took samples of the water from a well near the school, from which the teacher and pupils obtained drinking water, for forwarding to the Virginia Department of Health, Richmond, for bacteriological analysis.

Scarcely a handful of pupils attended the Mountain Falls school today.

Mrs. Cleaver was the wife of John Franklin Cleaver, of Shenandoah County. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Sims, of Louisa County.

School to Receive Portrait of Bowles

Served as Superintendent for 23 Years.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—Tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. a portrait of Prof. William A. Bowles, superintendent of the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind from 1896 until his death in 1919, will be unveiled at the school by the Virginia Association of the Deaf.

Lucilda Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Robertson, of Orange, Va., and a granddaughter of Prof. Bowles, will unveil the painting.

C. G. Quinley, president of the association, will preside. R. Aumon Bass, of the faculty, will present the portrait; President Quinley will review Prof. Bowles' life, and the picture will be accepted by Prof. Howard M. McManaway, school superintendent.
